March 11th, 1862. H. B. E. FRERE.

Minute by Major General the Hon. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., Member of the Supreme Council of India.

I entirely concur with Lord Canning's Minute, which appears to me to express distinctly and fully what is due to Colonel Balfour and the Military Finance Commission and Department.

Colonel Balfour possesses a very rare amount of knowledge and experience of departmental administration in all branches of military affairs, and has pressed the adoption of reforms with admirable firmness and consistency.

If Government has not on all occasions thought proper to go to the extent of Colonel Balfour's recommendations, it has fully appreciated the zealous labour and public spirit with which they have been designed.

Without going so far as either Sir Bartle Frere's or Mr. Laing's Minutes, &c., I consider that the expenditure of each and every department, Political, Civil, and Judicial, as well as Military, equally require check and scrutiny. I do not think the time is come for any material alteration in the Military Finance Department, provided a suitable successor to Colonel Balfour can be found.

I most cordially concur with H.E. the Governorgeneral in proposing to send Lord Canning's Minute to the Secretary of State, and I think Colonel Balfour should not leave India without a public expression of the approbation of the Government.

April 9, 1862. R. NAPIER.

Minute by the Hon. S. Laing, Financial Member of the Supreme Council of India.

I most entirely and cordially concur with every word of Lord Canning's Minute.

ment of Finance, I can speak perhaps better than any one as to the great advantages which the State has received from his zealous and indefatigable services.

The actual military expenditure of India for the year ending April 30, 1861, was £15,838,980; this year it will not exceed £12,800,000, and for 1862-63 it will be little above £12,000,000.

This result has been attained without impairing substantial military efficiency, mainly by a series of economies, each requiring practical military experience, and a careful consideration of military circumstances.

Here, the aid of the Military Finance Commission, and of its head, Colonel Balfour, has been invaluable, both in suggesting reforms and in carrying them into practical effect when decided upon; and I entirely agree with Sir Bartle Frere that the maintenance of the Military Finance Department on its present footing, as the responsible instrument of the Governor-general in Council for checking military expenditure is, of all other conditions, the one most essential for the financial future of India.

Minute by the Hon. Cecil Beadon, Member of the Supreme Council of India.

I should wish to express, if the opportunity have not passed, my entire concurrence in Lord Canning's Minute, the substance of which, in the form of a letter from the Government, might be communicated to Colonel Balfour before he leaves India. CECIL BEADON.

THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH. - Major Patrick Stewart has returned to England from India, where he acted recently as secretary to the Cholera Commission, after an extensive journey through Persia and Russia. Major Stewart went out to the East to superintend the Singapore cable; and his recent journey was made, in part, with a view to overcome the difficulties which have arisen between Persia and Great Britain respecting the continuation of the electric telegraph from Bagdad to Kurrachee. It had been almost settled that the line should be carried by Teheran and Israhan down to the mouth of the gulf, and thence by submarine line to Kurrachee along the coast of Belochistan; but at present that route is diplomatically and officially blocked. and it may be necessary to continue the line from Bagdad to Ali, west of the Euphrates, on the borders of Arabia, and thence through friendly territories, by consent of the tribes, down to the head of the gulf, where it can take refuge in the water, and be carried along from point to point as far as Kurrachee, -Army ond Navy Gazette,

AN IMPROVEMENT.

A PARAGRAPH has been lately going the rounds of the press, relative to the quick passages made by two vessels from this country to Calcutta. The Ghazeepore, it seems, sailed from Liverpeol to the capital of India in seventy-eight days, while the Hydaspes screwsteamer was not quite sixty-nine days in reaching the same destination. Fully to appreciate the merit of these performances, they should be contrasted with what was considered a fair voyage out in the beginning of the last century. On the 11th of February, 1708, Father Ripa and two other members of the Society of Jesus-in the assumed characters of a painter, a mathematician, and a servant - went on board the Hon. East India Company's ship Donegal, then lying off Gravesend. This fine ship was of only 180 tons burden, and as all the berths were required for the officers, the worthy Father was compelled to spread his bed "immediately under the beam of the rudder, which, being violently moved from side to side by the wheel, greatly terrified me in my sleep. But the greatest inconvenience that I suffered," he plaintively continues, "during the whole voyage, arose from being always exposed to the view and the insolence of the sailors, who were continually in this quarter of the vessel, eating, drinking, singing, and playing, or else cleaning their arms, making cartridges, and pursuing other employments of the same nature. My bed being laid exactly over the powder bin, I almost every day found it thrown into some corner. under the guns, casks, or cables; often soiled with beer or grog, and at times even covered with vermin, some of the crew having lain upon it." These and other annoyances were, however, most keeuly felt during the four months the Donegal was detained in the river, by one cause or another. "Our voyage down the Thames and through the Channel," says Father Ripa, "was extremely tedious. I will not attempt to state how often we were becalmed or driven back by contrary winds; or how often after weighing anchor and setting sail we were suddenly obliged again to suspend our course, lest the violence of the tide or a gust of wind should force us against the sandbanks or shoals, which are very frequent both in the river and the channel. Suffice it to say, that although we set sail on the 8th of April, it was not until the 4th of June that we reached the open sea." The Line was crossed on the 27th July, "through the favour of God and the protection of the glorious St. Anne," and on the 6th of September the good ship "entered the port of Good Hope "-for the secret of great

Here the voyagers were detained a fortnight and a few days after resuming their wanderings they saw a whale, but all they could "learn of this huge animal was that it could not be of the same species as that which swallowed the prophet Jonah, for its throat was so small that it could scarcely have allowed an egg to pass down it." On the 1st of February, 1709, the Donegal made the mouth of the Ganges, and ascending the Hooghly with the tide, was finally moored off Calcutta in rather less than ten months from the day she bade farewell to Gravesend. The homeward voyage from China was not, however, quite so long, for leaving Canton on the 23rd of January, 1724, Father Ripa "had the happiness of perceiving the coast of England" on the 5th of September and two days afterwards he landed at Deal. "With a favourable wind," he observes, "the voyage from that place to London can be performed in three days, but owing to the uncertainty of the weather it generally takes a fortnight." He, therefore, decided upon proceeding by the mail, which accomplished the journey in less than forty hours.

COTTON IN THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

A VERY interesting and carefully written report on the samples of raw cotton sent to the International Exhibition has been drawn up by Mr. William Wanklyn, at the request of the Cotton Supply Association. It appears that the number of countries exhibiting is thirty-five, of which twelve are likely to become important sources of supply almost immediately, and eight more at a later period. Of the others little is known, but for the most part cotton is with them a botanical production rather than a staple of agriculture and commerce. During the present season it is expected that 150,000 bales will be received from Brazil, 150,000 from Egypt, 21,000 from Greece, 4,000 from Hayti, 1,000,000 from India, 25,000 from Italy, 200 from Jamaica, 500 from Malta, 100 from Natal, 4,000 from Peru, 200 from Queensland, 150,000 from Turkey, and 2,000 from Western Africa. further supply of about 100 bales may possibly be furnished from the Bahamas, 100 from Barbadoes, 100 from British Guiana, 500 from Ceylon, 500 from the Ionian Islands, 100 from New South Wales, and 100 from Venezuela. Something, of course, will be contributed by Russia, and by the Portuguese, French, and Spanish colonies, though to what extent there is no means of predicating; while of Bermuda, Costa Rica, Demerara, Ecuador, Liberia, Mauritius, New Zealand, Siam, St. Helena, Trinidad, and Uruguay, all that is known is the simple fact of their adaptability to the culture of the plant. In making his comparative estimate of the value of the samples exhibited in South Kensington, Mr. Wanklyn has assumed as a common standard-Middling Orleans at 13d. per lb. The specimens submitted to him, he says, were on the whole of a more serviceable quality than he had anticipated, and he expressly eulogises those exhibited by the French colonists for the excellence of their ginning. It is also gratifying to learn that in those countries whence large quantities are likely to be obtained sixpence per pound is regarded as a sufficiently remunerative price to "encourage a revival circle sailing had not then been discovered. and extension of trade," Even prior to the Civil War the Southern planters were unable to cultivate cotton to their own advantage for less than 6d. per lb., and it is obviously impossible that they should be able to do so under the burden of taxation they will henceforth have to endure. For the sake of convenience Mr. Wanklyn takes the different cotton-growing countries in alphabetical order. and commences with the Bahamas, where the plant may again be cultivated, as in former times, with considerable success. Out of seven samples four are valued at eleven to eighteen pence per pound. Barbadoes sends only one sample " of very carefully prepared cotton of beautiful staple, superior to Fair Orleans, worth 14d. to 16d.;" but no large quantity can be produced without interfering with the sugar plantations. From Bermuda come three samples, ranging in value from 10d. to 18d. The plant is there a shrub, eight to ten feet high, and bearing two crops in the year for upwards of a dozen years. With care "abundant crops of the long stapled variety could be grown here, possessing all the silky fineness so desirable in the fibre." In the Brazils cotton is now produced by free labour, Chinese and Coolie immigrants being largely employed. It can be grown for 5d. per lb., and great exertions are being made to improve the process of preparation. From British Guiana a fair supply might be obtained if capital were directed to that quarter, and encouragement given to small farmers by holding out the certainty of a local market. The cotton cultivation is no new thing in that country, for in 1846 the exports amounted to 46,000 bales, and even now the quality is estimated at 11d. to 3s. per lb. In Ceylon the quantity grown is almost nominal, though the samples sent to the Exhibition are worth from 10d. to 13d., and the Government is doing all that lies in its power to promote its cultivation. Of Costa Rica it is needless to say more than that the plant grows in a wild state, and in Ecuador this particular cultivation is only in its infancy. In Egypt, however, about 350,000 acres are now devoted to this staple, and double that breadth of land will probably be so within a very few years. As already mentioned, no very reliable information is at hand concerning the capabilities of the French colonies: but it is certain that the Imperial Government is anxious to foster the cultivation of cotton even by having recourse to exploded Protectionist principles. Greece pre sents a fair prospect, both as to quantity and quality. It can be grown for 6d. per lb. in the plains of Attica, Bœotia, Larnica, and Argos, whereas its present value in Liverpool is from 10d. to 13d. Hayti, we are told, sends as samples two large bales of the exact description of cotton, of which 4,000,000 bales are now wanted in Lancashire. These bales are valued respectively at 13d. and 131d., and cost 8d. per lb. in the island. If sufficient labour could be procured, 3,000,000 bales might be annually shipped to Europe, and negotiations are on foot to induce the 30,000 free negroes uselessly located in Canada to emigrate to Hayti. The Italian Government is likewise fully awake to the advisability of making the most of America's adversity. Excellent cotton, valued at 9d. to 14d., can be profitably produced for less than 6d. per lb., and it is estifor its culture in Italy, Sicily, and Sardinia. three samples at 10d. to 13d., but nothing is

From the Ionian Islands there is not known as to the capabilities of the island. much to be expected, and the samples exhibited are not worthy of much notice. On the other hand, India has sent a hundred and sixty-six samples of very various quality, but full of happy promise for the future. Many specimens of indigenous cotton are fully equal to that grown from Egyptian or American seed, but the badness of the ginning is a frequent subject of remark. There can be no question as to the capability of India to produce sufficient to supply the English market without assistance from any other quarter, but many years must elapse before the ryots will learn to place confidence in the steadiness of the demand. It is not yet forgotten how, on a former occasion, the interests of India were coolly sacrificed to those of Paisley and Manchester, and at any time the difference of a halfpenny in the price of a pound of cotton at Liverpool will suffice to remove the objections of the Lancashire abolitionists to the produce of slave labour. ever the Southern States are again in a position to supply the market at a low rate, Indian ryots, middlemen, and shippers will be thrown aside with as little compunction as a worn-out glove. Jamaica makes but a poor figure as far as quantity is concerned, though possessing every requisite for a very extensive cultivation of the plant, and the samples exhibited range from 11d. to 3s. 6d. per lb. It is thought not impossible that the settlers in Liberia may be induced to turn their attention to a crop for which their soil is admirably adapted, and in Malta great excitement has been caused by the prospect of increasing the exports of the island. From New South Wales have been received nine varieties of remarkably fine quality, varying from 1s. 2d. to 4s. per lb., but at present only five acres of land are under cotton cultivation, by way of experiment. New Zealand sends some strong cotton, as also do the Feejee Islands, and Natal contributes six very favourable samples, worth from 12d. to 14d. It is well known that a very large supply of long-staple cotton may be obtained with little difficulty from Peru, and the actual crop of 1,200,000 lbs. on one estate alone may be easily extended to 3,000,000. According to Mr. Wanklyn, "Peru contributes to the International Exhibition, probably, the oldest sample of cotton in the world, in the form of a large lap or fleece of about 40 lbs. weight, which had been found in a tomb in one of the ancient ruins of a city which existed before the Spaniards first invaded the country. cotton is of excellent staple and very strong, and the lap very clearly shows that the former inhabitants of Peru not only knew how to grow good cotton, but also how to handle it." The value of the modern samples is stated at 12d. to 18d. The colonies of Portugal are represented by 20 samples of a useful description of raw material, but roughly prepared, and varying in worth from 8d. to 2s. Queensland sends one large bale of the Sea Island variety, superior to any from any other part of the world, but it is feared that the price of land and labour will check the cultivation. Russia exhibits a few samples from Tiflis, estimated at 8d. to 13d. per lb.; while Spain is abundantly and honourably represented through her colonies, the samples from which range from a mated that three millions of acres are available shilling to eighteen pence. St. Helena sends Trinidad, however, displays six samples, varying from 12d. to 3s.; Turkey is set down at 9d. to 12d., while the price on the spot is only 5d.; and Uruguay has two experimental samples, at 12d. to 16d. The Venezuela cotton is priced at 12d. to 20d.; while that from Western Africa does not rise above one shilling. Thirty-five competitors, and all well placed, but the stake is £20,000,000 a-year. and even if divided among all, there will still be a handsome prize for each.

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY.

The directors state in their report that during the past six months the progress of the company has been very satisfactory. The first point to which Mr. Bourne directed his attention on arriving in India was the extension of the Company's operations as far as Ferozepore, an important town and military station on the River Sutley, one of the branches of the Indus, and at a distance of something less than thirty miles from Lahore, the capital of the Punjab. first voyage the company's steamer Sutlej took up a cargo of beer for the use of the troops at Ferozepore, and delivered it both in excellent condition, and in far less time than had been previously occupied in the transport. At the date of the last advices from Kurrachee this vessel had again started with a second cargo for Ferozepore, and the Indus was about to leave Kotree with three barges for the same destination. The three vessels of the company now on the Indus have full employment both up and down the river, and are working to a good profit. The Jhelum, also destined for the Indus, having been completed, is now in course of shipment, and will, it is hoped, arrive at Kurrachee before the end of the year. Both Mr. Bourne and the company's superintendent at Kurrachee have expressed their sense of the valuable assistance they have received from the Government Commissioners in Scinde and the Punjab. The aid afforded by the latter, especially in the extension of the service to Ferozepore, has been of great advantage to the company. On the Ganges the progress has been highly satisfactory. The steamer Soane made her trial trip in March last, when she proved herself by far the fastest vessel on the river. She was completed with all despatch, and left Calcutta for Allahabad and intermediate stations on the 28th of April. This voyage was performed at the worse season of the year, in much less time than it had ever before occupied by the route of the Sunderbunds. At the date of the last advices the Soane was daily expected at Calcutta with a full cargo, while a barge fully laden with upward freight was already prepared for her to proceed with as soon as possible after her re-The steamer Ganges, it was expected, would make her first voyage at the beginning of August. The directors consider the prospects of the company, both on the Indus and Ganges, most encouraging. They regret to announce that the Secretary of State for India has thought proper to cancel the contract, by the terms of which a subsidy of £5,000 a-year, for ten years, was granted to this company. Notwithstanding, however, this unexpected withdrawal of the subsidy by the Government, the directors have reason to believe that the profits upon the working of the company's vessels will be sufficient, by the end of the present year, to enable them to recommend the declaration of a dividend upon the full amount of the paid-up capital of the company. The arrears of calls have been reduced from £19,218 to £4,140.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly combiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets - Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, or cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the manes of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk rocas conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided. has been avoided.

The worst descriptions of ulcers, the most recotting sorce, and the intensest external inflammations yield before this cooling Ointment when its effect is au mented by the internal administration of Holloway's Pills. In bad legs this Ointment has only to be applied for a few days before its beneficial influence is seen over the indolent ulcerations which no previous treatment could ease, much less cure. Under its application the pains decrease, the almost bursting skin relaxes, and healthy granulations spining up to displace the old dead matter which was horrifying to behold. Holloway's Ointment purifies the blied in the neighboring vessels from which firm and good flesh can alone be formed: it quickens the absorption of effete substances and re-establishes soundness.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. cloth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Comte is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-thined. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logicat. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and re-dy to necept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of net physics taelf, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1862.

"Many a tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Pro-fessor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a foir than the author of this inte-resting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorons, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable talent of attracting at the same time the attration of young men and grey-beards, and of so de cribing events as to surgest many a topic for grave reflection. His last (Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable, high-minder, and reliable chromother of human achievements and human follies and failures." By Dungan Forders, LLD, Soo, couth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our a thor makes a stout fight f rithe Hudoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chesspaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative etymology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the tide-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but freshly, clearly, and in an ammated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gen-leman and man of the world."—Herald.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English men and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution towards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abdetics; and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to markind, of the Quistots, Gullivers, and other human foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to our shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct he old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of nationa thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."—London Review.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

The news received by the Bombay mail of the 12th August is somewhat less monotonous than has, of late, been the case. Not that there is anything to record of a very startling nature, either as fact or rumour, nor do we hear anything more of the "djehad" that was so confidently predicted a short time ago. Slight disturbances alone are spoken of, but with the highly accented tone characteristic of Indian journalism. The Bheels are troublesome in one quarter, and the Khassiahs in another, while riots have taken place at Poona, because the price of provisions had gone up, in consequence of the rain not coming down. Cholera, too, has broken out rather seriously in the Upper Provinces, though, by the last accounts, it had sensibly abated in virulence.

As a set-off to these unpleasant tidings, the local press is rejoicing over the conviction of Rao Sahib, and his just condemnation to the gallows. Their exultation is all the greater because it was at first reported that the prisoner was acquitted of every charge save rebellion, and that consequently his life would be spared. The trial, it must be confessed, has been conducted in a most loose and irregular manner, but a native jury brought in a verdict of guilty on the capital charges, and the judge, Mr. Pearson, accordingly passed sentence of death, which has to be confirmed by the Nizamut Adawlut.

Furrah has opened its gates to Dost Mahomed in the absence of Sultan Jan, who was called away to the defence of his own territories against an irruption of the Turcomans. Encouraged by success, the Ameer at once pushed on towards Herat, and expected to reach Subzawar, only seventy miles from that city, by the 13th of July. Nothing more has been heard of the Russian intervention, nor have any Cossacks been seen from the walls of the Fort at Agra.

On the return of Sir Sydney Cotton, C.B., to England in the next cold season, the command of the Punjab Irregular Force will be transferred from the Punjab Government to the Commander-in-Chief, but the North-Western Frontier will still be confided to Brigadier Neville Chamberlain, c.B., who will be promoted to the rank of Brigadier-General. General Showers, it is said, will be second in command to that distinguished officer.

The death of Colonel Cuthbert Davidson, C.B., Resident at Hyderabad, took place on the 2nd of August. This sad event will probably efface some of the severe aspersions that have been cast upon the deceased, on the ground of his alleged obsequiousness to the Nizam.

The difference between Sir Charles Wood and Mr. Laing appears to have caused considerable excitement in India-public opinion, however, being decidedly in favour of the RENT CASES.

A decision arrived at in the appellate branch of the High Court on the 12th July by Messrs. Morgan and Trevor involves a point of great importance to all interested in trading or agricultural transactions in Bengal. Baboo Degumber Mitter sued one of his tenants named Gurree holla for enhanced rent, when the latter pleaded a Mowroosee potta, which, he said, had been granted to him by the naib of the executor of the late Mr. Sutherland. The case was appealed first to the court of the Principal Sudder Ameen of the district, and at length to the High Court, on the question of the genuineness of the potta; but the Principal Sudder Ameen, rightly, as we conceive, set aside this question and decreed against the appellant, on the ground that it had not been shown that the naib had the power to grant the potta. This decision the High Court has reversed, thus expressing an opinion that naibs have, as a rule, power to grant pottas without reference to the real owner of the propertythat, in fact, the latter, in appointing an agent, devolves upon him the full powers possessed by himself as proprietor. This ruling we do not hesitate to affirm to be contrary both to law and practice, in England and in India, and we are the more surprised at seeing it proceed from a bench on which Mr. Trevor was sitting, as it is directly opposed to the view which he himself has hitherto taken of similar cases which came before him when Judge of the Sudder Adawlut. The law of England recognises no general right in the steward to grant leases in the absence of the proprietor other than for terms determinable at the landlord's pleasure, and we are at a loss to conceive how the Judges arrived at the conclusion that a power which the law does not assume to be confided to a man who, in England, is frequently of respectability and substance, is held in Bengal by one who is, we fear, too frequently the reverse. Section 50 of Regulation VIII. of 1793, after making it obligatory on landlords to give pottas to their under tenants, expressly provides that, "No farmer, without special permission from the proprietor of the lands, or (if the lands form part of an independent talook) the dependant talookdar, shall grant a potta extending beyond the period of his own lease, nor shall any agent grant a potta without authority from the proprietor or dependant talookdar, or the manager of a disqualified proprietor." From the stress laid in this section on the word potta, it is clear that the inability of an agent to grant a potta, or lease only, was intended to be pointed out, and that the inference was intended to be drawn, that it was competent to him to lease lands for short periods, determinable at the landlord's pleasure. Such power may be wielded by an agent with advantage both to the proprietor and tenant, especially in Bengal, where leases determine in the month in which the land requires to be prepared for the reception of the ensuing season's seed. The necessity of reference to the landlord, and of obtaining his signature to a legal document would probably involve the loss of this month, and consequently render the land useless to the tenant for that season. By the delegation of power to the agents in such cases this inconvenience and loss are avoided; the tenant promptly secures his position for one season, and if he desires to extend his lease has ample time before that is expired to make his arrangements with the proprietor personally; even if he fail in this, so slight is the expenditure for cultivation required that his short occupancy will have exposed him to no loss. But to assume that an agent's position carries with it power to grant leases of indefinite length is an absurdity. It involves the supposition that he has the power to bind his emplayer to any agreement, however ruinous, that interest or recklessness may lead him to enterinto. We repeat our surprise that a decision involving such serious results should have been one of the more than one occasion have taken precisely the reverse view. We refer our readers to pages 1418 and 1547 of the volume of Sudder decisions for 1858, and page 1576 of 1859, for confirmation of our assertion. Mr. Morgan is new to Mofussil practice and Mofussil law, but the serious consequences involved in the decision are so obvious, that we are surprised they should not at once have presented themselves to an English lawyer. The effect of this decision in the indigo districts, where thousands of suits for enhancement of rent are now pending, in many of which possibly similar pleas may be adduced, will be inexpressibly serious; and even where no such agreements as that adduced by Gurreholla exist, will afford another field for the exercise of that talent for forgery which has already so many outlets .- Englishman.

THE BENGAL CIVIL SERVICE FUND. The managers of the Bengal Civil Service Fund have, it seems, proposed certain changes in the constitution of the fund, to which a very large number of the subscribers are opposed. At present all members contribute to the fund at the rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ or $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on their salaries, according as they are married or single. The ma nagers, it appears, propose that the married rates shall be reduced one per cent., and that retired civilians, though continuing to enjoy the benefits of the fund, shall be relieved of the irksome duty of subscribing to it. In opposition to the managers, it is contended that the state of the fund will not admit of any reduction being made; and further, that if any reduction is possible the opinion of a professional actuary should be obtained as to the manner in which the reduction can be most equitably carried out. The fund was established on its present footing in 1850. Under the low rates of subscription paid by the members in previous years, its financial position was at that time found to be most critical; the incumbent liabilities of the fund had not even been safely provided for. At any moment the widows and orphans who were dependent upon it for support might have been placed upon reduced allowances. At the present time, however, the position of the fund, though in some respects gloomy, is shown to be more satisfactory. The incumbent liabilities have been provided for, and a capital of eleven lacs has been accumulated to meet contingent liabilities. But there appears to us, on the information before us, still a large deficiency of capital to be made good. The present value of these contingent liabilities amounts to some sixty lacs of rupees, and the fund cannot be considered to be in a really safe position, until it possesses a capital of at least thirty lacs to represent them. There is, therefore, a present deficiency in its capital of twenty lacs, which the members of the service must make good. sooner this is done the better. deficiency is made up, and the fund is placed on a safe footing, any reduction in the rate of subscriptions would, it appears to us, expose the sub scribers to the danger of being called upon, at some future time, to bear some heavier burdens than the present. Indeed, if the figures of the managers are correct, any reduction would be extremely unadvisable. Within the last five years there has been a decrease on the average of Rs. 64,792 in the income of the fund, and an average increase in the expenditure of Rs. 1,15,856. That the managers, in the face of these facts and figures, should recommend the subscribers to give up nearly 25 per cent. of their income, seems quite unaccountable. Equally unaccountable is the objection of the managers to take the advice of a professional actuary. If their recommendations are based upon sound principles, the opinion of an actuary will give weight to their proposals; if, on the contrary, some error has been made in their calculations, the opinion of an actuary will rectify the mistake. Under any circumstances an actuary should be consulted, if only to give confidence to the subscribers. The managers are non-professional men, and it is incurring a heavy the judges who gave utterance to it should on | it necessary to adopt. We would recommend the members of the Civil Service strongly to resist any proposal to reduce the income of the fund, until the opinion of a professional actuary has been obtained. It is difficult, of course, for subscribers to resist the tempting offer of reduced subscription, but it should be borne in mind that present indulgences are too often purchased at the expense of future sacrifices .- Englishman.

FREE TRADE IN LAND.

Bengal revels in a sea of litigation. Sudder contradicts itself with even more absurdity than usual, and the unfortunate subordinate judicial officers look in vain for any steady light to guide them in the darkness. Deputy collectors, not a month out of college, are overruled by collectors of still less experience. Judges almost beardless, owing to the recent tide of rapid promotion, come to the rescue with decisions reversing the acts of both, and the late Sudder presides over the scene with a fatuous dignity which would make the fortune of a Lord of Misrule in a pantomime. A collection of decisions under the rent law of 1859 in Bengal alone—and the same, we believe, is true in a modified sense of the North-Western Provinces -would astonish the world at the little wisdom with which the English govern India, and at the much patience which both English settler and native peasant show under such government. So startlingly absurd and contradictory are these decisions, so lost in a maze of doubt are all revenue officials high and low, that even a Sudder Judge who has himself headed the frelic and passed the decision which we quoted last week has implored Government to take the power of deciding Act X. cases from collectors, and to vest it in officers who will attend to nothing else. write far more in the interest of the tenant than of the landlord when we say that Act X, has produced in Nuddea, and will produce elsewhere all over Northern India, a state of things compared with which the misery and wrong caused by the premature introduction of the permanent settlement into Bengal were small indeed.

In 1793, justly or unjustly, Lord Cornwallis created certain rights in the soil. His first object was to secure the Government revenue at the smallest cost, which he did by creating large landed proprietors; his second to guard the ryot against oppression, which be did by declaring the tenure and rent of all who had squatted for a certain period on the land unchangeable; and his third to effect a gradual improvement in the country and increase of the produce of the soil and of trade, which he did by declaring the landlord's revenue or rent to Government permanent. Subsequently several Acts were passed relating to the rights of tenant and landlord, but all were more or less conceived in the spirit of Lord Cornwallis's settlement. After the first years of wrong, when almost a new race of landlords had sprung up, all went smoothly, and Bengal became the garden of India, while Madras and Bombay withered and became waste under an annual settlement, and even with a thirty years' assessment the North-Western Provinces were swept by periodical famines. In the course of time, after 1833, Englishmen bought estates subject to all the under-tenures then existing upon them. There can be no doubt that, right and philanthropic as was Lord Cornwallis' desire to maintain the ryots on their lands, it was desirable that those who had a permanent claim neither to be ousted nor to have their rents raised, should gradually be bought out or die out. It may be laid down as an axiom that wherever there are competing claims to the same patch of ground, there will be disputes ending as in New Zealand and the colonies in bloody wars, or as in India in an ocean of litigation which sweeps all Government away before it. So desirable is it that only one man should have an interest in each holding that this was one great object of the Encumbered Estates Commission in Ireland. To effect this Acts for enfranchising copyholds were passed in England, and Canada urst to emanate from a court from which so much risk to presume that they can dispense with secu-was expected as the High Court, and that one of rities which the directors of insurance offices find French settlers on the St. Lawrence. cated men will quarrel about land far more bitterly than about women or money, and that is Another axiom is that saving a great deal. estates of a middling size are far better for a people than either very small or very large holdings. In the former case, as in India and Ireland, the people raise enough only for their daily wants and from century to century barely exist like the rank weeds which cover a stagnant pool. In the latter case, as in Oudh and too much in Great Britain, we have great barons and dukes like Maun Singh or Buccleuch or Bedford who do not always take an interest in their tenantry. That holding is best which attracts the capital and personal energy of its proprietor. Left to itself Lord Cornwallis's settlement was calculated to produce these two results, to raise the large tenant-farmer with rights of permanency into a landlord, and by extinguishing small holdings to set the millions of Bengal free from their slavish bonds to the soil, so as to become labourers, artisans, traders, and, in fact, all that the varied society of modern Europe is now as distinguished from its condition in the Dark Ages. Sir J. P. Grant's law protecting the under-landlord when the superior landlord was sold up for default of rent, was a great step towards this, and it would have been well if his revenue policy had always been distinguished by similar wisdom.

We admit that the tenant was oppressed by his native landlord, who could summon him by law to his presence like a slave and who exacted illegal cesses from him. But the question is, was this oppression due to the revenue laws, or was it not rather inherent in the people and to be prevented only by bringing justice to every man's door, and raising the tone of native landlords: Nothing was needed to prevent oppression but an Act declaring it illegal for a landlord to summon a tenant to his presence, giving him in return the English remedy of distraint for arrears. But pseudo-philanthropy stepped in. Act X. was passed in 1859 amid the jubilations of all inexperienced sentimentalists. Had that Act merely codified all our revenue statutes it would have been a boon. But it went in the teeth of previous legislation; it upset the rights of seventy years, it arrested progress at its most delicate point, and now has exploded like a bomb in a magazine. We talk of the daring wrong Lord Canning proposed to commit in a rebel province like Oude; but, in truth, Act X. was far more daring. The men who went to bed, the night before it was passed, proprietors of estates with rights at least seventy years old, and tenants of farms which they had held on fair and intelligible conditions for a long period, awoke next morning to find half their rights gone. The Act cut both ways. Wherever a landlord had estates on which ryots had squatted for twelve years, he ceased to be a proprietor in the proper sense of the term; his ryots superseded him, standing to him in the same permanent relation as he stood to Government. Wherever a ryot fondly ima gined he and his children would sit at an easy rent as his fathers had done, he found that the rent might be raised, might be doubled or quadrupled, according to the increase in the value of his produce. No one was benefited; all were set by the ears. In any other country than Bengal there would have been agrarian insurrection. Worse than this, all the progress in seventy years in clearing off small under tenures was lost, for in one hour millions of under-tenures were created, every twelve years' squatter being made a copyholder. Society in India was thus thrown back more than a century. History, we write soberly, records no such act of gigantic socialism done in the name of philanthropy. required time for both parties to awake to it, but the Act was not three years old when Sir J. P. Grant by legislation tried to correct its evils. Will it be believed that at this moment and for the last year Government, that is the public, is paying £6,000 a year to collect the rents of Mr. Hills, one landlord? Even in the first full year of the Act litigation rose from 47,316 rent suits in 1858-59 to 61,398 in 1860-61. Last year the number must have been nearly double. So true edge-tools. material nature, avenge themselves

Is there no remedy? The Sudder decision that the Act has no retrospective effect, a decision as just as it is illegal, would be a temporary cure, for all would have fair warning for the future, and would take care to give no leases longer than eleven years, eleven months, and thirty days. But why should the Indian Government prevent me from buying or selling land (subject always to the permanent settlement rights) as I buy or sell bread, or piece goods? Even Austria does not go so far as this. The police, it is true, regulate the time and the manner of spitting, are great critics as to hats, and have strange rules as to marriage, but they do not stretch land also on their Procrustes-bed. This Act X. has got Bengal into such a muddle, has created such a revolution and produced such anarchy in the rights and interests of all landlords and tenants, that we see no remedy except in its abolition, retaining the clause which makes it illegal for the landlord to force the tenant to attend his cutchery. True, the evil already done cannot be all undone, but no more will be committed. The undoubted oppression of the rvot previous to 1850 is not one whit less now, and never will be less so long as the poor court oppression and the rich claim the right to oppress with impunity. We cannot punish a husband for beating his wife in secret, if the wife will not complain. Good police and criminal courts may do a little to prevent the evil, but it will be checked only when the Bengali learns, like the Hindustani, to give blow for blow, and when both are trained by centuries of Christianity at once to hold their own rights and to respect the rights of others. We may add that small cottiers will always be oppressed in proportion to the smallness of their holdings. Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHERA POONJEE, July 21 .- It is all very well for General Showers to dream that he has succeeded in quieting the Cossyahs and brought operations against them to a close; and no doubt his reports to that effect have given great satisfaction at Government House. The fact is, that since the rains have set in and the movement of our troops has become so difficult, the insurgents have become bolder than ever, and act as if totally regardless of the near neighbourhood of the military. Last evening, for instance, we had a great fright. At about eight o'clock the Adjutant of the 44th N.I. came round to every house in the station to give warning that from accounts received that evening it appeared probable that the rebel Jynteans were at Mufftung, about eighteen miles from Cherra; and that though there was no immediate danger, it was very possible they might attack the station that night. The residents were therefore warned to be prepared and to look to their arms. You may imagine the fright the few female inhabitants were in: and possibly some of the men did not feel altogether comfortable. Fortunately, however, nothing oc-curred; but we have not yet been able to hear whether the report of their being at Mufftung is correct. For myself I don't believe it, but the existence of such reports proves in how disturbed a state the country is. A large body were said to be going to Shillong to burn down the new station, but they could not do much mischief there, as only one house is finished, and no one living in that. I hope, at any rate, that they won't come here; but we are not at all easy on the subject, as the rebels are by no means cowed by the recent operations against them.

THE PUNJAB IN THE IMPERIAL LEGISLATURE. The Punjab has long successfully resisted all attempts to remove it, as a non-regulation province, from the despotic will of the Calcutta and Lahore Executive, and to place it under the power of the Legislative Council like the Regulation Provinces. From next session of the Council this will be the case no longer. No more will the Punjab be either above or beyond the law, a circumstance to which it has doubtless hitherto is it that the child cannot with impunity play with owed much of its prosperity and vigorously suc- deputy has been in charge. This officer, having

The laws of society, like those of cessful government, but which ought to be regarded as temporary and removed as soon as it is safe and politic to do so. Not only, moreover, will the supervision by the Legislature of the Punjab add considerably to its prosperity after nearly fifteen years of successful, though lawless, independence, but the presence of an old Punjabee in Council representing a Government which rules over a territory larger, a population nearly as large, and races far more manly and hopeful than those of Madras, should benefit the Empire by tempering the rigid exclusiveness of able regulation lawyers like Mr. Harington, and correcting the inexperience and strong centralising tendencies of an English lawyer like Dr. Maine. Mr. Cust, now acting as Judicial Commissioner in the Punjab, has declined the appointment to Council. We do not regret this. His marked ability, his training as an English barrister and intimate knowledge of French and Continental jurisprudence, make him the least of a Punjabee of all officials who have ever worked in the land of the five rivers. The same qualities fit him more than any other Indian civilian, except, perhaps, Mr. George Campbell, to adorn the Bench of the High Court, and prove to the world that an English thinker, by becoming a Bengal civilian, does not necessarily cease to possess qualifications which fit him to be in some respects superior to the fourth rate barristers, who are most likely to be sent out as Indian Judges. Mr. Roberts, for whom he is officiating as Judicial Commissioner of the Punjab, will, on his return from England in the cold season, represent the province in the Imperial Legislative Council .- Friend of India.

DACCA, July 17 .- General Showers, as you know, some time back reported the disturbances in the Cossyah district to be at an end, and the spirit of the insurrection subdued. This statement, I hear, the Lieut.Governor has quietly accepted as a fact, and submitted without question to the Viceroy, expressing, at the same time, a hope that the apprehension of the chiefs and armed gangs still abroad will soon lead to the entire pacification of the district, and complete restoration of order. So much for General Showers' and the Lieutenant-Governor's view of matters. Now for the other side. Two new sheds, built by the Commissariat at Jowai, to house their stores during the rains, have been burnt; and on the evening of the 1st, as a guard of the 44th were escorting the dak to Jowai, they were suddenly attacked by a large party of Cossyahs, and though they, unlike their comrades of the 33rd on a previous occasion, were on the look out, a pretty stiff fight ensued. At last they were completely successful, and drove off their assailants, with the loss of five killed and several wounded. Only one sepoy was hurt; he received a severe tulwar wound in the shoulder. This is what General Showers and the Lieut.-Governor call tranquillity. -July 24.-I hear that General Showers and his Adjutant-General, Captain Gilbert, landed from the Madras at Gowhatty on the 20th. They will remain there till the Lieutenant-Governor arrives, which will be about the 26th, and accompany him, until some means are available to take the General through the river Kullung to Nowgong. His Honour was to leave Goalpara on the 24th. The Madras took General Showers up the river Dikkoo to Seeb Saugor, and he expressed himself highly pleased with that vessel's performances, and the commander's arrange-ments for his service. After visiting Nowgong, and on the return of a steamer for his own use, he intended visiting Cooch Behar, and the other districts in that direction. Major Raban was daily expected in Gowhatty overland, from the hills. The police force is being organised, but slowly. Denis Hely is a prisoner on board the Madras, and is to be landed at Koolneah for committal, in the first instance, by the Jessore authorities; a guard of the Eurasian regiment accompanies him, a corporal and three men.-Englishman.

occasion to go to Pubna, required a boat to convey his traps. His chapprassees—after the mode of doing things since this deputy's reign commenced—seized the first fisherman's boat they saw, of course with no offer of payment. So much of this oppression had been going on of late that the fishermen were much irritated, and in desperation ventured to oppose the chapprassees. After something like a fight, the latter were conquered. When this act was reported to the Deputy Magistrate of Commercolly,

"Then curled his very beard with ire."

He ordered his Kooksa thanna darogah to seize the fishermen. It is said by the inhabitants of Commercolly that the deputy's verbal orders to the darogah were to show a severe example: it might be difficult to prove this, but what openly took place can be fully proved. The darogah proceeded to the fishermen's village, Kessobpore, with his burkundazes, chokedars, and others-about forty in number. The fishermen's houses were entered by this gang, and all the women, as well as the men, were insulted and ill-used. The houses of respectable men, who could not know, and were never suspected of knowing anything about the fishermen's quarrel, were subjected to the same treatment. Their women had to run from the village. One Kistonuth Moitree, a doctor from the Calcutta College, had his doors forced in. His house was entered and his boxes were broken open. He and twelve more were taken prisoners to Commercolly, and subjected to gross and unmentionable ill-usage. The doctor was, after some time, released, but the others were kept in durance for three or four days, and it is whispered that Rs. 250 were pocketed by the police before the prisoners were let go. It is about ten days since the above occurred, and the darogah and his burkundazes are still in office. Englishman.

Assaw, July 19 .- We have apparently this year missed altogether the month of continuous rain and cloud we have always been wont to expect just at this time, and had instead of it more than our proper share of sun. Transplanting, especially of small plants, has consequently not been so successful as it was last year, the plants having been always more or less struck with the sun before they could fairly recover after being put out, which of course will tell more or less on their side. Every successive year adds to our stock of experimental knowledge, and practices the necessity of which a year or two ago nobody would think of questioning are now deservedly rejected. Among the exploded notions is that of shade being beneficial or desirable, and people will now just as soon take up open bamboo lands as forest lands, and find their plants grow better in them. Owners of shady lands are less troubled with weeds, but for that very reason the tea will give them little trouble also; tea is clearly a sun plant, and rejoices in his hottest beams, showing luxuriance and greenness that are wanting in plants nurtured in the shade. Nobody in taking up land cares about the timber per se; it is, on the contrary, looked upon as rather a nuisance, and something one would gladly pay to get rid of. It may therefore be supposed that no great care is taken to preserve it from injury in getting it out of the way. The usual modus operandi is that well known in the celebrated game "nine pins." A number of the smaller trees are nicked low down, about halfway through, and a larger one being selected some way higher, he is sent crashing down upon the group and carries everything before him, converting all the smaller trees into "matches," and so bruising and rending the larger as to make them useless where sound logs are required. All the logs so cut down are either allowed to rot, or as soon as they are dry, burnt as near the place where they lie as possible, in order to avoid carriage. Quantities of nuggussur and other valuable timber is in this way destroyed yearly, solely owing to the expense and difficulty of getting it stored, and the impossibility of getting sawyers who will go to their wood instead of requiring their wood to be brought to them. Englishman.

GWALIOR, July 12.—I hear that the Maharajah our soldiers' lives are worth to follow them into the ship Renown, has been on very cool terms with Dinker Rao their caches in the jungles at this time of the ment of January.

since the latter's return from Calcutta. The recent gift of two villages to the Rajah by the British Government has considerably heightened his Highness's jealousy at the favour with which his Dewan is regarded by the latter. In the good old times of the Moguls, I suppose, this feeling would quickly have been followed by the Dewan's losing his place if not his head; but proud as he is. Scindiah will not be silly enough to come to an open breach with a man who has gained the esteem of his feudal superiors. Cotton is now being cultivated with much care here, and scems to thrive, but the rate has been fixed too high for its production to attain any development; it is nearly double that of former years. Grain is getting cheaper, and is now selling at twelve seers the rupee. Heavy showers have fallen during the NAGPORE, July 11.-I am glad to be able to tell you that the cholera, which was raging violently in the Raepore division a short time ago has abated considerably. The authorities have been exceeding the budget grant for these provinces seriously, in the matter of police. When Mr. Temple took charge of the chief commissionership at the end of April, he found that the authorised expenditure of twelve lakhs per annum was being exceeded by somthing like a lakh and a quarter. When Colonel Elliot and Mr. Temple recommended a scale of eleven lakhs, they stated that there was a considerable number of supernumeraries of the late Nagpore irregular force still existing, and they recommended that these should be gradually reduced. It appears that these supernumeraries somewhat exceeded the number they estimated, and that on the 1st of May, 1862, they amounted to 242 horse and 539 foot. The actual expenditure, Mr. Temple found, amounted to thirteen lakhs and a quarter, exclusive of the police paid from municipal sources. One of his first tasks, then, was to reduce this expenditure within its proper bounds-11 lakhs. He took the following measures:-1st. Considerably reducing the police reserves at the head-quarters of the various districts, especially at those where regular troops were stationed. 2ndly. Reducing the two frontier battalions from 798, at which they then stood, to 400 each as recommended by Colonel Elliott and Mr. Temple. 3rdly. Reducing the force located at Chanda from 400 to 200. 4thly. By summarily discharging about half the Nagpore irregular cavalry force; and 5thly, by disbanding a body of 200 horse belonging to the Nerbudda and Saugor districts. All these measures were ordered to be carried out in the course of May: and so stringently were the local authorities pushed, that they accomplished the task. This, it s calculated, will bring the expenditure within the limit, without causing any danger from too suddenly weakening the force. The only district where the effect is at all problematical is Chanda. This district itself is peacable and wellbehaved; the only danger to it is from without, from the wild inhabitants of some portions of the Nizam's territory which are separated from it only by the river Wurda. But this danger has been lately lessened by the posting of a strong party of the Hyderabad Contingent at Woon, just opposite Chanda, a distance of about forty miles from the frontier. The quick way in which these reforms have been effected speaks well for Mr. Temple's energy; two lakhs and a quarter are no trifling sum to be cut down in a month. I only hope that the individuals who have been disbanded will not amuse themselves by turning dacoits. A chowkeydar's life is a lazy one, and unfits its professors for active labour .- English-

Mhow, July 8.—The Bheels of Burmanee have risen in open rebellion, and are committing serious depredations to the west and south. They hide themselves during the day and issue forth on their predatory excursions at night, loeting and burning villages, and carrying off all the spoil they can lay hands on. European troops have been sent from this to reduce them to order, but the sort of warfare they carry on is exceedingly difficult to check; besides, it is as much as our soldiers' lives are worth to follow them into their carry in the investor this time of the year. No one but a Bheel or Cossiah could inhale the atmosphere, so pregnant with fever, without succumbing to its noxious influence. Little, I fear, can be done with them this year, but during the next a determined attack should be made on them, and a lesson read them in their own language of fire and slaughter. It may sound cruel, but it would be but a condensation of punishment, the lesson would be lasting in its effects, for some time at least, whereas now there is a constant petty warfare going on between ourselves and them, which in the end causes more injury to both sides than a really determined attack. Our troops have been desired to stop the Scindiah road.

CHITTAGONG, July 21 .- There is little, or, indeed, nothing, stirring here, if the break up in the salt department be excepted. The event has fallen like a thunderbolt on thousands of molungliees, and also on many zemindars to whom the salt lands belong. Both classes are about to petition the Government; the former as to their being thrown out of employ, and the latter as to their lands being disused. By-the-bye, is not the action of the molunghees a fair answer to the accusations of acts of oppression said to have been exercised on them by Government officials. The salt agency has been done away with, but a portion of the manufacture is still to be carried on under the superintendence of Mr. J. Bruce, an uncovenanted officer of great ability and experience. Our ex-commissioner, Mr. Buckland, has left for Dacca, taking with him the reputation of being a tight hand and good commissioner; his place has been taken by by Mr. Gordon Young. The rains have at last fairly set in, certainly not before they were wanted, and the station is now cool and healthy. We are all anxious to hear more of the Burmah Company steamers which were to have commenced running twice a month from August; from hearing nothing more of them, we begin to fear a hitch. The line ought to succeed if the large coolie trade to Akvab alone be considered.

ST. James's School.—Few schools have done so much good in India as the Calcutta Girl's School for the children of Christian parents, with incomes less than Rs. 200 a month. The new St. James's School, under the Bishop's scheme, intended to accommodate 100 boarders and 100 day scholars—sons of the same class. Government has given a site, and will contribute for the building and first expenses a sum equal to that raised by the public. The sum wanted is Rs. 8,500, and for this the Archdeacon and a committee appeal to the charitable. Any donor of Co.'s Rs. 250 shall have, as long as he lives in this country, the nomination of a day boy, upon the monthly payment of only four annas, filling up the vacancy when it occurs by a fresh nomination.

CHOLERA is still rife in several of the upcountry stations, and we have heard by a letter dated Meerut, the 22nd of July, that the disease had broken out at that station, two cases out of three in H.M.'s 104th Regiment having proved fatal. In consequence of this serious visitation. all the European troops at Meerut had been moved into camp, and the other precautionary and preventive measures ordered by the Commander in-Chief were being actively adopted. Letters from Peshawur also inform us that Sir Sydney Cotton, having returned to that station from Murree, on account of the outbreak of cholera in the city and cantonments, had taken immediate measures for scattering the European troops, one portion having been sent to the Cherat hills, and another to the Dooaba outposts, which judicious movements had been attended by the desired success, and it was believed that the visitation of cholera at Peshawur would not be such as to justify any alarm. Sir Sydney had, consequently, returned to Murree; but was prepared to descend again at a moment's notice, should the cholera, as was feared, extend into the Scinde Saugor Doab. Should nothing un-foreseen occur to detain Sir Sydney Cotton in his present command, he will vacate it in November next, and leave Calcutta for England in the ship Renown, which sails in the commence-

JHANSI, July 18 .-- You know that Captain Ward and his party have lately been on the look out for the rebel chieftain Guneeshioo. He obtained information the other day that he was prowling about in one of his favourite jungle districts, and forthwith laid plans for his capture, which resulted in complete success. Captain Ward's party was limited, and so it was an object to come upon Guneeshjoo unawares. He accord ingly halted his men at a safe distance from the latter, who was totally unsuspicious of his neighbourhood, till evening; and as soon as they had quietly arranged themselves round the fire surrounded them, made a sudden onslaught, and succeeded in killing Guneeshjoo and several of his followers. This service was an important one, and cleverly executed. I believe it has been brought to the notice of Government as deserving a special recognition, and I doubt not it will receive -July 21: Nearly two months after the standard of revolt raised in the name of Oorgin Singh by the thakoors of Duttia has been overthrown Government has issued orders for the punishment of the principal leaders in the outbreak This is an order which it costs very little trouble to issue, and it has been given as though it were the simplest thing in the world to track out and capture in their hiding-places chiefs to whom the people are as devoted as were the Highlanders of old to their feudal chieftains. "It's a far cry to Lochawe," and though we have not the active opposition of such men as the Campbells to deal with, we shall meet with an amount of sullen opposition, combined with a refusal to give any information, which will render the task of ferretting out these men next to impossible. Besides, if pressed too closely in Duttia they can easily escape across the border into Scindhia, and there among hills and jungles they might lurk for a lifetime. Government had better be content with what it has already done. It is no use keeping up the uneasy feeling by commencing afresh so long after the affair. Let them purish those they have caught and leave the others alone. Englishman.

PLEADINGS BEFORE THE HIGH COURT .-- In a case which came before the appellate jurisdiction branch of the High Court on Thursday, the appellant's pleader, not being proficient in the English language, asked permission to address the Court in Oordoo. The Chief Justice replied that it had been previously ruled that the oral pleadings before the current file bench should not be allowed to be conducted in any other language than English, and that consequently any pleader who is unacquainted with that language must not attempt to address the Court. Virtually English is the language of the High Court, for no pleader need hope to succeed who is ignorant of it.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS IN CALCUTTA -The Indian Field reports a rumour that the Calcutta Supreme Court House is to be pulled down, and the Town Hall is to be converted into the High Court until the new judicial edifice is built. secure a suitable place for public meetings, the civil architect is desirous of obtaining the use of the Metcalfe Hall for two years, paying to the parties concerned adequate compensation. will be difficult to secure a building in a central position in Calcutta for the Public Library and Reading Room, and the Metcalfe Hall is singularly ill-adapted for public meetings.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—Now that Lord Elgin is known to be not only favourable to the establishment of a volunteer corps in Calcutta, but anxious to see it in efficient working, a meeting has been held in the Dalhousie Institute on the subject. Should Government supply a shootingground and give such encouragement as is fair, upwards of 200 of the Calcutta residents are prepared to make a third attempt at the close of the rainy season.

CENTRAL INDIA .- A letter in the Delhi Gazette chronicles the gossip of the Ameer's camp. Furrah was closely invested, and Sooltan Jan had left it on receiving news of an attack by the Turcomans on a village near Herat. Meanwhile the female members of Sooltan Jan's family seem to have been attempting to bring about a compromise, Furrah, but what will the British authorities think of all this: I have always told them that I could get Herat from Sooltan Ahmed Jan, who was my relative, any time the British would wish me to do it, and as Sooltan Ahmed Jan has now shown his enmity towards me the British will think of me otherwise, and so I must take Furrah by force." The Candaharee Affghans, who are in Cabool, have received the following letter from their relatives in Candahar :- 'The Ameer will soon leave for Furrah, Sooltan Jan has received a reinforcement of Seestance troops under Ameer Kanyat, also a number of Jumshadee, Tamanee and Ferozekohee people have joined him, and it is very likely that there will be a great war.'

Abolition of the Salt Monopoly .-- Of late the natives of North India have shown a decided preference for imported English salt over that which is manufactured in Bengal. The Bengal Government is accordingly anxious to retire from the monopoly of manufacture and leave it to private enterprise. At present there is a stock of salt amounting to 11,831,442 maunds, or two years' consumption. Henceforth it will be necessary to keep only one year's stock in hand to provide for any sudden cessation in importation from Europe. Accordingly, as a beginning, the most expensive agency at Chittagong will be discontinued, the agencies at Hidgellee and Tumlook will be united as soon as one of the agents is supplied with another appointment, and the native salt-makers will receive nine instead of ten annas a maund. Thus much land will be brought into cultivation, which is now overgrown with malarious jungles to supply firewood, and is reserved for salt-making, while a stock of labour will be thrown on the market. To guide private salt importers, accurate information of all the stocks in the market is henceforth to be periodically published. This is a great stride towards a great reform—the abolition of the salt monopoly established by Lord Clive. Opium must follow.

SRINUGGUR, CASHMEER, July 9 .- The Maharajah made his public entry on the afternoon of the 2nd inst., having taken the river route from Islamabad; on the following morning he went into his palace. We have had two days' severe rain; on the 6th the banks of the river flooded; on the night of that day most of the visitors had to remove themselves and their property into boats; the next day some encamped on high ground in the neighbourhood, some remained in their boats, and a few continued in their houses. There has been a great deal of damage to the crops. The flood is extensive; it is now going down fast; boats plying in every direction; the famous poplar avenue, once the favourite promenade, has become a grand channel for boats.

THE NEW EUROPEAN REGIMENTS. - The greater portion of the nine new infantry regiments of the line, just formed and officered, will, we believe, remain still for some time incomplete and headless, as the appointments of lieut. colonels to command them will be made by the Horse Guards in England, and cannot be known in this country for some months to come. That these regiments would be commanded by Royal lieut .colonels has, from the commencement of their intended existence, been known; indeed, it was announced at the time that the amalgamation measure was promulgated, and as, of course, the Duke of Cambridge would not delegate the distribution of such a valuable source of patronage to any one else, he will nominate lieut.-colonels, either in England or India, to the new corps. In addition to this, the appointments of the regimental staff to the new corps, surgeons, paymasters, adjutants, assistant-surgeons and masters, will all have to be made by her Majesty, and appear in the London Gazette; so that it will take some time yet before these regiments are perfectly organised. We are informed that, under the conditions of the new medical warrant. surgeons of the late Company's armies will be allowed to take "general service" with these regiments .- Englishman.

PUBLIC WORKS .- In bringing forward his budget for the year 1862-63, Mr. Laing intimated but the energetic Ameer is represented as de that it was the intention of Government to credit and can there obtain medical evidence and certiclaring he will take Herat. "I don't care for the local governments at once with the several sums which it might be decided to allot to them as their share in the proceeds during the current year, of the one per cent. set aside for public works purposes out of the proceeds of the Income-tax. Thirty-eight lakhs were set aside for this purpose. Of this sum it has been decided at once to distribute thirty-four lakhs in the following proportions :- Bengal, eleven lakhs; Bombay, eight ditto; Madras, four ditto; N. W. Provinces, six ditto; Punjab, one ditto; Oudh, one ditto; Central Provinces, one ditto; British Burmah, one ditto; minor administrations, one ditto. Ag was the case in 1861-62 the Straits Settlements, Hyderabad, and Mysore are excluded from any share in the fund, inasmuch as the only sums derived on account of the Income-tex from those provinces are levied on the salaries of officers of the British Govern-The remaining four lakhs are to ment. be held for the present as a reserve fund, as the Governor-general has doubts as to the correctness of the assignment of thirty-eight lakhs which, he thinks, may prove excessive; at any rate, the sum contributed by the minor Governments is not sufficient, he considers, to entitle them to the eight laklis which were assigned to them in the financial resolution of the 26th December last, allotting the public works fund for 1861-62; so, while the above sum will at once be placed at the credit of the several Governments mentioned, the remaining four lakhs will be held in reserve as a special fund to meet any emergency that may arise, or until the financial department has received such precise information regarding the proceeds of the tax as may enable it to decide on the exact proportion due to the public works fund. In the interim one lakh out of this balance will be held specially at the disposal of the minor administrations, to be distributed at the discretion of the Public Works Department. The allotments of the four larger Governments are, it will be observed, the same as those made in 1861-62. The chief difference is in the allotments to the lesser ones, which last year were as follows :-- Central Provinces, 2,50,000; Oudh, 2,25,000; Pegu, 1,50,000; Hyderabad (Berar), 1,00,000; while a sum of 1,12,000 was held as a reserve fund. Last year the then Governor-general expressly desired that it might not be supposed that this fund was inapplicable to works which were being constructed out of the Imperial Exchequer. Lord Elgin has modified this decision by ruling that no sums out of the one per cent. fund are to be applied to the construction of works bringing in a profit to Government-such as irrigation works.

INVALID ESTABLISHMENT .- A case which has just occurred, and to which we need not particularly allude, renders it necessary that we should address a warning to officers who from impaired health, or other causes" disqualifying them from performing the active duties of their profession,' may contemplate availing themselves of the advantages, real or imaginary, of the Invalid Establishment. In the first place, we would remind any such officers that, by the new rules applied to the Invalid Establishment, non effective service does not count for pension, or, to speak plainer, it does not count for anything except a prolonged existence of uselessness and idleness, without any prospective termination except one. Formerly, a captain, say of twelve or fitteen years' service who went into the Invalids, continued to count his service in that establishment for pension; and when he had completed his twenty years could retire on a captain's pension; but, by the new rules, which now prevail, an officer going to the Invalids is only entitled to the pension which he had served for on entering that establishment; and if, when he joined it, he was not entitled to any pension, he never will be, though he should serve till Doomsday. In point of fact, then, an officer, now joining the invalids, and who is not, at the time of so joining, entitled to any rate of pension, is hopelessly doomed to pass the remainder of his days in India, with but one chance of relief available. It is this: If he can go to England, ficates strong enough to satisfy the Secretary of State for India that his health will not permit of his further living-it cannot be called servingin India, he will then receive the invalid half-pay of his rank in England, and that closes his career. Thus, in point of fact, an officer going into the Invalids under the new rules becomes a helpless, hopeless slave; he cannot serve, he never can claim a pension, nor leave India except as above described. Whilst on this subject we may as well remark that any officer now going to the Invalids with any real or supposed ulterior object, such as combining some other occupation with his position therein, will very probably find himself disagreeably surprised and thwarted; as these matters are narrowly watched now-a-days and the attempt is nearly certain to be frustrated. -Englishman.

THIRD-CLASS PASSENGERS IN INDIA. - Some disturbance seems to have been occasioned by the alleged maltreatment of native passengers by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. The third class passengers flock in crowds to the booking-office, and no complaint seems to be made of the conduct of booking clerks except with respect to the very natural irritation caused by the obstruction of a passenger stopping to take money from a knot in his turban or waistband wherewith to pay for his fare. It appears on inquiry that the number (50) of passengers to be placed in a railway carriage has seldom been exceeded, there being a strict order upon the subject. Passengers often crowd round the door and exclaim that it is full. the contrary being the fact, the station master has to use force to gain admission for other passengers. These explanations give us some in sight into the amenities of third class travelling in this country. On the East Indian line the third class carriages have been improved of late.

A SMALL CAUSE COURT is to be established at Nagpore, with Captain H. F. Bolton as temporary judge, and another at Jubbulpore. last the reform seems to be appreciated by the authorities.

Mr. Hume, the senior magistrate of Calcutta, having been accused in a letter to the Lahore Chronicle of being under great obligations to the natives, so great, indeed, that they are said to necessitate his prolonged residence in Calcutta, and consequent occupancy of the bench which many would gladly see occupied by some one else, writes to the editor: "Beyond the current expenses of every housekeeper I do not owe a rupee to any native in the country, nor have I ever done since a period considerably antecedent to my first appointment, now upwards of sixteen vears ago."

LAND .- It is directed that military officers in the public works department cannot hold land in the districts in which they are employed, or within the limits of the local Government under which they serve. "Non-commissioned officers or soldiers of her Majesty's British forces will not be allowed to hold land in India while on the effective or unattached lists; but time-expired or pensioned soldiers will be dealt with in this respect as uncovenanted servants." Civil officers in the department who have covenants are in the category of uncovenanted servants as respects the holding of land, and the only limitation in regard to them is that they shall not hold land in the district in which they are employed.

THE PUNJAB IRREGULAR FORCE.-Notwithstanding the reticence of the secret-mongers, the new arrangements for the command of the Peshawur Division after General Cotton's departure, and for the future military occupation of our long and important North-West frontier, have oozed out. In the first place, a measure which we (Englishman) have long advocated and urged upon the Government is to be carried out in the summary transfer from the Punjab Government to the Commander-in-Chief of the command and patronage of the Punjab Irregular Force, now, and for a long time, so ably commanded by Brigadier Neville Chamberlain, c.B. We believe that this fine force will not, on being transferred to Sir Hugh Rose, lose its distinct character and denomination, and be numbered tain its present denomination and formation, | sustaining only a few alterations which his Excellency is desirous of effecting. The present Commandant of the Punjab Irregular Force, Brigadier Neville Chamberlain, c.B., will, on the departure for Europe of Sir Sydney Cotton, succeed that officer in the command of the Peshawur Division, and of the frontier, under the supreme control of the Commander in Chief, and will be promoted to the rank of Brigadier General. The promotion and position conferred upon Brigadier Chamberlain will be no more than his long and gallant services entitle him to; and in command of the Peshawur Division and of the North-West frontier, he will certainly be "the right man in the right place." All this has resulted from what was called by some the wild ride of the Commander in Chief down the extreme North-West frontier last cold weather, and Sir Hugh has sent in an elaborate military report on the Trans-Indus country, and the frontier in particular, which is now under consideration.

THE CAPE STEAMERS .- It is clear to all men that the project of running steamers round the Cape has not been a success. It is nothing that the average passage has been twelve days longer than that made by first-class passenger ships. It is nothing that to the tedium of a sailing vessel is added the discomfort, the noise, the smells, the confined cabins of a steamer. These are things which can be ascertained beforehand. We or our friends can go on board these steamers; we can see the space allotted to each passenger and the discomfort of the arrangements. But there are other and far worse evils for which we are unprepared, from which we think ourselves secured by the common honesty necessary to make a commercial enterprise pay, and by the ordinary, outward, selfish morality and decency to the absence of which English people will not submit, and far less trust their female relations to the good faith of strangers. There is an implied, if not a written, contract, by which every passenger, by securing his passage and paying his passage-money, becomes entitled to civil treatment, good and plentiful food, decency of behaviour on the part of all concerned, and exemption from all wilful annoyance and suffering. If a quiet remonstrance, or even a civil question, is to be met by rude answers and gross insults; if the stewards be allowed to take their tone from the officers, if those on whom the safety of all depends have no control over themselves, and by self-indulgence wilfully destroy the small portion of self-command with which they have been endowed by nature; if passengers are carried to Singapore on their way to the Cape; if day after day young children go crying with hunger from the scanty allowance supplied to them; if provisions run short and coals run low before the Cape is reached; if, in a ship full of invalids and children for whom a generous and wholesome diet is indispensable to life, there is no fresh bread and no fresh meat; if the beer is all gone, and scarcely any wine left long before the shores of England are in sight, then we say that this is as gross a breach of contract as a lie is a breach of the faith we owe to all men. It is worse than a fraudulent sale, for there is less protection against it-the victims are more helpless, and the consequences far more fatal. We all know how such charges are generally met, how even with such appalling mortality that on board the Accrington staring men in the face, either a powerful company or influential department of Government can attribute one half to woman's fancies. and the other half to exaggeration, and bringing in the comfortable verdict of "nobody was to blame." We all know the wide discrepancy between the official decisions and the private admissions in such cases. But in this case we appeal to a tribunal which has the strongest personal interest in the matter, we write for the information of the public, we issue a warning to the anxious husbands and fathers who are likely to be attracted by the supposed economy and fancied advantages of a steam passage round the Cape, and we earnestly bid them beware lest in conwith the rest of the Bengal Army, but will re-fiding those dearest to them to such guardian- on behalf of the public.

ship and such treatment they may not be exposing them to insult, to hardship, to starvation, if not to death. We hear a rumour that unwards of forty passengers have landed at Madras, and intend to pursue their journey overland, hoping to recover damages hereafter. We give the statement for what it is worth, not having yet been able to ascertain its accuracy, but on every other point we have had personal and written testimony only too abundant and too convincing .- Friend of India. Commenting on the above article, the Delhi Gazette observes :- " We have before us a letter written by a lady passenger on board one of the Cape steamers-the Queen of the South-to a relative. She went home with her children, unaccompanied by her husband. The fact of her having been placed. in the absence of her natural protector, under the care of the captain, should at least have protected her from the impertinence of menials. We prefer that the lady should speak for herself. Among other things she says :do not think Captain Thornhill has any right to make his passengers so uncomfortable without something being done. I have told you of the children's breakfasts, both scarcity and bad food. At tea the bread is hot, unbaked, and bad; it has not been good once. One day, that there was not sufficient dinner, it was agreed it would be a good plan to call down the Captain. A lady sent for him, and most unwillingly he came. I saw a lady speaking to him, and as I had three plates without an atom of meat, and saw none, I went up to him, saying, "Captain, will you kindly see if there is sufficient for the children I have to look after, and three have not got any meat." He replied, 'The head steward informs me there is plenty.' I said, 'Will you judge for yourself.' He said, 'Will you go to your seat and not make this disturbance, if you expect to gain by it you are mistaken.' I replied, 'This is not the first day the children have had scarcity of food.' He said, 'The head steward says there is plenty.' He looked furious and added, 'Go to your seat.' I replied, 'If the head steward's word is taken before a lady's we can expect no redress,' and I went away with my three empty plates. I then went to my cabin and had a good cry.

Some days ago I hadn't a particle of meat for two children. I sent for the head steward, Mr. Donaldson, and told him. He said very impudently, 'Oh! give them current dumplins,—things black as lead. I said, 'No, I wish meat.' He said, 'There is none, you had better send for the captain'-in such an impudent tone. I said, no, you are perfectly aware that he takes your part, but when I arrive in England you will hear more of this. He said, 'Oh, very good, let's have it there.' . . . Mr. Donaldson told a lady, who asked merely if her toast was ready, 'If you bother me it will be worse for you and your child.' I never in any steamer saw such bad and shameful arrangements.' The writer goes on to say that the cuddy dinners are frequently good, but the other meals wretched. The chief complaint appears to be the children's food. 'Three small joints amongst forty-seven children, sometimes only two.' We learn that the head steward has a contract for supplying the food-a fact that speaks volumes. Perhaps the captain is not above going shares."

JUNG BAHADOOR .- The Thibetan Government has sent to the British authorities a letter written to the Dhurmoraj of Thibet by Jung Bahadoor last December, declaring his intention of waging war against the British. There is a breach between the Nepaulese and Thibetan Governments, and a threatened war, caused by the demand of the former for the extradition of a murderer. This may be the secret of the accusation against Jung Bahadoor.

MESSRS. MACKEY AND CARTER.-The Hurkard states that the London directors of the Assam Tea Company, acting on the charges brought against Messrs. Mackey and Carter by Mr. Judge, have directed that criminal proceedings be taken against these gentlemen. Had there been a public prosecutor in Calcutta the prima facie charges would have at once warranted him in doing this

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL .- An extraordinary meeting of the Legislative Council of the Governor-General of India was held on the 19th July, when a Bill was brought in and passed, to provide for the levy of Fees and Stamp Duties in the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, and to suspend the operations of certain Sections of Act VIII. of 1859 in the said High Court. The principal object of the Bill was-firstly, to make temporary provision for the levy of court fees in the business coming before that part of the High Court of Judicature, recently established at Calcutta under her Majesty's Letters Patent, which represented the late Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, thus continuing for a time the practice in respect to the payment of fees which obtained in that Court; and secondly, for taking Judicial Stamp, in accordance with Section XXX. of Act X. of the current year in that part of the High Court which represented the late Court of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adamlut for the Lower Provinces of Bengal.

THE PRIZE FUND.-Lieut. Cockburn, at present employed in the Military Accountant's Office, will succeed Lieut. Currie as Secretary to the Prize Fund.

BANK OF BENGAL.-The Treasuries of the Secretary of State for India in Council, and of her Majesty's Indian Government, at the stations of Mirzapore and Benares were, from the 1st August, established at the branch banks opened at those stations by the Bank of Bengal.

THE COMMISSARIAT COMMISSION .- Some idea may be formed of the extensive nature of the inquiries of the Commissariat Commission now working at the presidency, when we state that the commission has issued some three hundred questions, addressed to one hundred different officers all of which queries are to be answered according to the best judgment and knowledge of the reci pients. Thus the commission will receive, and will have to consider and be guided by, thirty thousand answers; a task the mere contemplation of which seems to us sufficient to appal the most inquisitive man on earth. The above fact, however, shows one thing very plainly, that the com mission are in earnest at their work and promises another, that their labours will be productive of vast improvement in the Commissariat Department.

LIEUTENANT MCNAIR, late of the East India regiment at Dacca, and now at the Presidency under arrest, is to be tried by court-martial upon charges which have been sent down from army head quarters. Since being first placed in arrest now some months ago, this officer has proved himself a kind of military amateur Jack Sheppard, by the adroitness with which he has escaped from the guard which it had been found necessary to place over him; his last exploit in this line having been performed on Monday night, 28th July, when he succeeded in making his escape from the main guard, Fort William, in which it had been found necessary to confine him on account of his previous flights.

THE ORIENTAL GAS COMPANY got their legs entangled in red-tape, stumbled, and nearly fell; but their caution brought them up in time, and saved them. They carried on their works for supplying Fort William with gas nearly to completion, and would have illuminated it in a few days,—when, suddenly, it was discovered that matters were going on unconstitutionally; and that, without the permission of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief not a glimmer could be set agoing in the Fort; even the contract was defective, the garrison being now (with the exception of the Government House inside, and the right of ordering salutes to be fired from the ramparts, which have been retained by the Governor-general) under the command and control of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. When his consent shall arrive, the fort can be lighted with gas in a few days; but it is not expected that this will now be effected before the middle of August, as, besides the permission from Simlah, the final contract between the Government here and the gas company has to go through numerous coils of red-tape, which will, of course, be done on the festina lente principle.

tions that steps have been taken for the establishment of a new market in the vicinity of the Mutlah railway terminus at Intally. Government contributes Rs. 2,50,000. The Durmtollah monopoly of filth and high prices will thus be invaded at last.

Dr. A. Anderson, Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals H.M.'s British Forces, and who left Calcutta for England a few months ago, is likely to return in the coming cold season, to assume the appointment declined by D. J. Taylor, s.c., as head of the medical services, amalgamated or unamalgamated, in Bengal.

THE FLOGGING CASE IN THE PUNJAB .- The Lahore Chronicle says that the Khansamah recently so severely flogged by an officer has died from the effects of the injuries sustained. The officer's name is Lieutenant Jackson, Bengal Engineers, Executive Engineer at Dhera Ishmael Khan. He will be tried by court-martial.

A SYMPATHETIC GOOSE QUILL.—The Paridarshak, a vernacular Bengalee paper, in reference to Lord Canning's lamented death, observes-" Our lifeless goose-quill, having become slow-paced like a tortoise, is unwilling to publish these doleful tidings."

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR SYDNEY COTTON, K.C.B., who has for many years so ably commanded the Peshawur Division, returns to England via Calcutta in January next, by long sea round the Cape. He will probably be succeeded in the command of the Peshawur Division by Brigadier-General St. G. D. Showers, now commanding the Presidency Division.

THE DELHI BANK is about to establish a Branch Bank in Calcutta.

ANOTHER COLONY.

While the settlers of Wynaad in South India, after having long knocked in vain at the closed door of the Madras Government, wait patiently for a reply to their application to Sir Charles Wood, another colony, a near neighbour of theirs, forces itself on the attention of the public and the authorities. We were not prepared for the fact that in Coorg there is a Coffee Planters' Association with no less than forty members, who have all the grievances, the ability to publish India is similarly burdened. They add:-

MARKET AT MUTLAH .- The Englishman men- | them from the house-top, the energy to fight for their removal, and the genius and appliances of self-government which distinguish Auglo-Saxons all over the world. Not only so, but they are joined by native planters for whose sake at least the association may hope to obtain a speedy and, perhaps, favourable answer to their prayer. Two years ago we read in the annual report of the superintendent of Coorg-"the rage for the cultivation of coffee among all classes, European and native, is very great. Every day lands are being taken up for coffee cultivation." Since then we had lost sight of Coorg, but now the experiment has succeeded, the first large outlay of capital has begun to yield rich fruit, and as all the gardens are very nearly in full bearing, the old cry arises for roads, the removal of barbarous taxes and a fee-simple tenure.

Coorg is a district of rugged table land above the Western Ghauts with the Wynaad, Mysore and Canara all round it. Stretching for sixty miles from north to south and thirty-four from east to west at an average elevation of 3,000 feet above the sea, it enjoys a climate ranging from fifty-two degrees to eighty-two degrees of heat at the different seasons of the year. For three months the country is generally in clouds, which, borne by the breeze over the Indian Ocean, strike on the tall Ghauts and give Coorg an amount of moisture which is more grateful to the soil than productive of comfort to the settlers. But the Scotch mists last only three months instead of, as at Glasgow, all the year, and the climate is most healthy. The Cauvery winds its way through a great valley, in which stands the capital, Mercara, and drains off the hill torrents. The place seems as if it had been made for coffee cultivation. In 1834 it became a British possession after the only war which distinguished Lord William Bentinck's reign, and the daughter of its headstrong Rajah is now a Christian lady, the wife of a Bengal officer. The The change was a good one for the people. population and revenue since then have just doubled, the former being now some 120,000, and the latter some three lakhs, of runees. The district is managed by the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, who acts as Commissioner of Coorg, and Mr. Bowring has hardly seated himself in office when he is reminded, amid congratulations from the planters, that none knew so well as he the wise and enlightened policy of Lord Canning's government in the matter of the soil, and is asked to give effect to it. In 1860-61 the revenue from coffee alone was Rs. 32,103. The quantity of coffee exported from the district was 1,29,869 maunds, of which no less than 1,17,223 were produced by natives, the estates of the European settlers having not yet got into full bearing. Here again, as in the Wynaad, we see the two classes working harmoniously together. Last year the produce was expected to be double.

The Coorg coffee planters ask to "be identified with settlers" in other parts of India. At present their coffee is taxed by a transit duty, a relic of barbarism which it is far from creditable to the British Government to have retained so long. They ask to have their estates treated as waste lands, the fee-simple of which they may purchase at once; they ask "that grants-in-aid be given parties constructing roads which meet to with the approbation of the local Superintendent of Coorg, and that the two great Trunk Roads to the sea be kept in good repair;" and finally that, being so isolated from all the world beside, they may be allowed to make remittances for current expenses through the Treasury. The Commissioner proposes an acreage tax on coffee lands instead of the transit duty, but the planters prefer to keep their estates in the category of "waste" so as to take advantage of the feesimple tenure, to accepting a compromise which would bring them under the head of assessed lands. They want the fee-simple at once as promised by the Government of India, but do not object to an acreage tax as a temporary measure for those who cannot at once pay the purchase money. They show how the transit duty keeps back intending settlers, and that no other part of

"We need scarcely point out to you the benefits that have accrued to this province since the introduction of European capital, with energy to direct it. The revenue is increased. The condition of the people employed by planters is improved, and they are enabled both to live and clothe better. The Coorgs themselves are enriched. Grain, and, in fact, everything the country produces is enhanced in price nearly twofold, and Coorg is now essentially in a flourishing condition. We confidently believe that in your administration here you will be actuated by the same liberal principles that have of late characterised the acts of the Supreme Government."

Besides these settlers there is a large establishment of German missionaries with their schools and printing presses all at work among the Coorgs. With noble self-denial they draw from the Basel Society, to which they belong, only as much as is necessary for subsistence, the sum last year being about £50 a year each. There are all the elements of a vigorous colony here which, like the Wynaad near it, will more and more every year act as a light shining in a dark place. Mr. Bowring has now offered to him an admirable opportunity of proving at once his ability as a ruler and his fidelity to the memory of the late Governor-general, with whom he was so closely associated, by giving good government to Coorg. Friend of India.

NATIVE CREDULITY .- The idea that the English are in the habit of sacrificing human victims to Moloch or some other hungry deity, has spread all over the North-West, has shown in Bombay, and has now broken out in Madras. It appears that some short time ago the daughter of a collector in that presidency was to be married to a young civilian, and, of course, the usual preparations were made for a wedding feast. The day before the wedding the butler went into the village to buy some indispensable necessary for the nuptial breakfast, but, to his astonishment, found it, like Goldsmith's "Auburn," deserted. A report had gone abroad that twelve fat children were to be sacrificed to the goddess Lucina, in order that the marriage might be fruitful, and the villagers had fled to the jungle. After a great deal of trouble, the adults of the village were induced to return, but not a single child was visible till the wedding was over.

SIR M. CUBBON.—The Memorial Fund of the late Sir M. Cubbon, Chief Commissioner of Mysore, amounts to Rs. 30,000. The committee have consulted Foley, Marshall, Noble and Baron Marochetti, as to their terms for an equestrian statue in bronze, but have not yet decided to erect a statue.

HYDERABAD, July 10 .-- The Nizam has suddenly become imbued with such an admiration for the "Star of India" that he is going to have copies of it and its concomitants made in silver for all his Begums. Whether this is intended as an additional insult or not I know not, but it certainly is one. Thirty four of the Robilla Dacoits who, I am told, the other day were disporting themselves on our frontier, have been appre hended; and this has had the desired effect of dispersing the gangs to which they belonged. Thirty-four, however, out of the numerous bands which infest the frontier is a small number; and I fear the punishment of imprisonment is too slight for the effect to be at all lasting. One most important measure I have to announce; the minister Salar Jung has given explicit orders for the cultivation of cotton in the Nizam's territory. Some parts of Hyderabad are, from what hear from competent judges, admirably suited for it, and if the natives can only be awakened to the importance of cotton as an article of produce, and induced to take some trouble with its cultivation, it ought to prove a success. At any rate, it is a step in the right direction, and shows that our Indian feudatories are beginning to have an eye to what is going on beyond India. - Englishman. The Phanix states that the Nizam's officials have have made my almanac, and mark off each day made numerous arrests of parties concerned in as it passes." Even the days thus noted were the conspiracy of Rao Sabeb in Hyderabad. The not filled up. Colonel Davidson has left a young banker's son who aided the escape of the chief widow and three infant children, besides the issue conspirator has been fined by the Nizam's Go- of his first marriage. The bereaved have lost a vernment Rs. 75,000. Others have been fined in lesser sums. A number have been acquitted. "The mild spirit in which the conspirators have been dealt with, shows that, notwithstanding the good will of Salar Jung, the Government of India is not loved in the Deccan. There is little doubt that the majority of the leading Hindoos knew the plot, and yet not more than seventy or eighty parties altogether have been arrested, and of these fully a fourth have got off. The banking class seem to have been especially implicated. They aided the transmission of letters and circulars, and advanced large sums of money."

THE LATE COLONEL DAVIDSON,-Colonel Cuthbert Davidson, c.B., the Resident at Hyderabad, whose death occurred at Hyderabad on the morn ing of the 2nd of August, had lately entered his fifty-third year, having been born on the 24th of May, 1810. He was the second son of the late Sir David Davidson, of Cantray, in the county of Inverness, and of Margaret, the daughter of the laird of Kilravock, the chief of the ancient house of Rose. He was early bereaved of his father. but was carefully educated under the eye of his talented mother, by private tutors, and at the public schools of Edinburgh. He was considered by those who knew him in early life a youth of much promise, founded on his intelligence and amiable and ingenuous disposition. came to India as a military cadet in 1826, and was soon posted to the 66th Regiment of Bengal Native Infantry. He was not long in active service till Lord William Bentinck cast his eye upon him, and appointed him one of his sides-de-camp. In 1835 he joined the staff of Sir Robert Grant, the Governor of Bombay, who was married to his only sister. Before Sir Robert's death he entered the Nizam's cavalry, one of the regiments of which he afterwards commanded He was attached to the residency of Hyderabad in 1846, and he was first assistant there both under General Low and General Frazer. On the death of Colonel Duncan A. Malcolm he was appointed resident at Barodaa situation which he filled for nearly three years, and which he vacated on his being nominated resident at Hyderabad, with the political and fiscal affairs of which he had an intimate practical acquaintance. He was the instrument of bringing Salar Jung into office as Minister to his Highness the Nizam, an arrangement which has hitherto proved the safety of the State and a great convenience to the British Government. The servics rendered by Colonel Davidson during the mutiny and rebellion were of a very important character, and were but very imperfectly acknowledged by his nomination to the Companionship of the Bath. Both when the formidable attack was made on the Residency on the 17th of July, 1857, and when the attempt was made on his life in the Nizam's durbar on the 15th March, 1859, he displayed exemplary courage, composure, and resolution. His personal influence and vigilance at the court of the Nizam, as as the Moghul hatred of the Marathas, who in the person of the Nana and his associates were heading the rebellion, and the admirable conduct of the Madras Army, had a great effect in securing the peace of the south of India, on which so much depended, during the days of trial. All know the readiness with which he responded to the repeated calls of Lord Elphinstone for troops to assist in the movements of the Bombay Army under Sir Hugh Rose and his worthy fellowleaders, and the substantial services which in consequence were rendered by the Nizam's Contingent. About two months ago Colonel Davidson was informed by his medical adviser that he could not expect to stand another hot season in India; and he had determined to wind up his affairs and to leave the country in April next, even before his complaint assumed an alarming form. Writing to an old friend a few weeks ago he says, " My days in India are now numbered; and like the schoolboy before the holidays, I Scinde.—The land revenue in Scinde for 1861-62 is stated at Rs. 33,50,560, against Rs. 29,46,165 for 1860-61, showing an increase of Rs. 4,04,395. A European child has been found in the possession of some Punjabees, supposed to have been lost during the mutinies, or abducted for the purposes of prostitution. The child and the Punjabees are in the hands of the Scinde authorities, pending inquiries. By Government notification, dated 6th August, the port of Kurrachee, under the provisions of Section 1, Act XXV. of 1856, is declared a warehousing port from the first proximo, for the purposes specified in the said Act.

MISSIONARY EDUCATION .- Presiding at the examination of the Free Church Institution at Poons, the Governor of Bombay gave the following testimony in favour of missionary versus Government Education—remarkable as coming not from Sir B. Frere, but from the Governor of Bombay and successor of Sir G. Clerk:-" The influence of education in missionary schools was in his opinion of the best kind, and in some important respects superior to that which Govern. ment schools afforded. They took in a wider range of study; and instruction in those subjects which we Englishmen were most solicitous to teach our children from their earliest yearsbeing of all others the most important and momentous-was carefully given them. He was convinced that they had found the right principle of education-that it should be carried on according to the views of parents and pastors, the State interfering as little as possible. The result was also a better disposition and moral character than the Government schools generally turned out. There was but too much truth in the statement often made, that the pupils of Government colleges were rather presumptuous and conceited. He remembered hearing the relative merits of the two systems of education discussed shortly before he left Calcutta. It was acknowledged that the Government scholars had brought their studies in some branches of science to greater perfection than those trained in the missionary colleges at Calcutta. But a gentleman at the head of an important public department had expressed an opinion that whenever he had a clerk that was more than usually attentive to his duties, and respectful in his manner, he was sure to find, somehow or other, that he came from 'Duff's school.''

DESTRUCTION OF THE "POONA DUFTUR." Times of India states that the "Poons Duftur" is in the process of systematic destruction. This is a collection of the archives of the late Peishwa's Government for a hundred years. The whole passed into the hands of the English on the fall of the Peishwa, and was preserved until the year 1852, when it was unfortunately made over to the Inam Commissioners to assist them in their inquiries into the beneficiary tenures of the Mahratta country. They were allowed to destroy a mass of "useless" documents, and in the centre of the ancient Mahratta capital, fire was applied to a vast heap of these records. The Mahratta people are said to have regarded with profound agitation the destruction of their national monuments, and, as they believed, the titledeeds of the estates of their countrymen. What remains is offered for sale as waste paper. The official statement of fact will probably show that this representation is much exaggerated; but not a manuscript should be condemned till it has been examined by a competent authority.

KATTYWAR.—The officiating political agent in Kattywar, Major Anderson, has been at Joonaghur by order of the Government, to make a formal apology to the Nawab for the late and long-continued discourtesy shown to his highness by Major Barr, late political agent.

CAPTAIN SMALES, recently cashiered by the Mhow court martial, was arrested on board the mail steamer Malta, on the 27th of July, on a warrant granted by the senior magistrate on that day, in virtue of information laid against him by the secretary to Government political department. The case is now undergoing investigation in the police-office. The charge is one of fraudulent misappropriation of Government moneys, to the extent of Rs. 24,000. The rebutting evidence has not yet been brought forward, but it is said that Captain Smales is quite able to rebut the charge, and public sympathy is with him.

EUROPEAN DESTITUTION IN INDIA .- The question of the sad increase of European destitution and vagrancy in India has been taken up energetically by the Bombay Government. In Calcutta the evil is to some extent hidden by the alms house and in Madras by the Friend in Need Society, an institution similar to which does not seem to exist in Bombay. The local authorities have appointed a Commission of Enquiry, consisting of two members of the Chamber of Commerce, two clergymen, and the Deputy Commisof Police. The Commission are to discover the present extent of the evil, to report on the machinery that exists to meet it in the other Presidency towns as well as in Bombay, and to furnish Government with a detailed and definite plan for enabling it to co-operate with private charity for the systematic and permanent relief of European pauperism on an extended scale. Sir W. Mansfield has recommended the establishment of an institution for poor Europeans, subject to the Chamber of Commerce and supported by the combined aid of Government and the public. The evil in Calcutta is much less than it was two years ago. Government should have the power of deportation in certain cases, strictly guarded from abuse.

REDUCTION OF THE NATIVE CAVALRY .- A ge neral order has been issued that four regiments of native cavalry are to be disbanded forthwith, and that the remaining eight regiments are to be made up to the strength of four hundred and ninety-nine of all ranks, as far as possible by transfers from the disbanded corps. The option of transfer or discharge with gratuity, to be allowed to native officers, non-commissioned officers, and sowars of the disbanded regiments. The gratuity to be at the same rate and on the same terms as on the reduction in December, 1860. The regiments to be disbanded are the 2nd Poons horse, 4th Sind horse, and the 2nd and 3rd Mahratta horse. The reductions in the cavalry force in this Presidency are ordered to have effect from the 1st of October next, and are to be completed before that time.

MR. ROBERT McKENSIE, Engineer of the Hydraulic Cotton Press, Bombay, has invented an iron band for cotton bales as a substitute for the lashings hitherto in use. The whole operation of screwing and fastening with the iron band occupies about a minute. It is a great improvement and cannot fail to be adopted.

BANK OF BOMBAY .- The annual meeting of the Bank of Bombay was held on the 4th August. The directors laid before the proprietors a statement of the affairs of the bank, made up to 30th June last, showing the gross profits of the half year to be Rs. 334,392 6-10. From this sum the current expenses of the establishment, amounting to Rs. 80,735-0-9, and the amount of income-tax payable on the profits, have to be deducted, leaving a balance of Rs. 245,197-15-10, out of which the directors declared a dividend at the rate of nine per cent. per annum, clear of income tax, carrying forward the unappropriated balance of Rs. 10,072-15-10 to the credit of the reserve

THE BHEELS are again giving us trouble. They have broken out in open rebellion, and are looting villages and committing great depredations. An European military force has been sent against them from Mhow. Europeans, however, cannot follow the Bheels into the jungles at this season of the year. The punishment of the rebels will not, therefore, be inflicted till after the rains, when it is hoped that it will be such as to teach them a salutary and lasting lesson.

THE DHARWAR GOLD FIELDS.—Dr. Birdwood of Bombay has just issued a "Catalogue of the Economic Products of the Presidency of Bombay," in a passage of which he gives us a valuable fact and not a bad pun. "I have recently seen it argued that Malabar must be Ophir, because in addition to Lassen's proof, Mr. Le Soeuf would find gold there; but the largest of les œufs d'or of the Gold Company's protracted gestation sent me is unmitigated pyrites, and another mica." Thus the visions of an Australia in Dharwar are dispelled.

Indian Navy.-Parents and guardians having sons or wards in the Indian Navy, now undergoing dissolution, will be glad to hear that it is a fact that the midshipmen of that service, who entered it previous to the abolition of the Company's government and the transfer of India to the Crown, are to be berthed in the same rank in the Royal Navy, and to receive a pension of £40 a year whilst in that service until their promotion to lieutenant, which, with the pay of a Royal midshipman, £32 a year, will give them an annual income of £72 until they get into the ward-room. As to those midshipmen who have entered the Indian Navy since the annihilation of the Company's power, the Government does not consider that they have any claim to pension, but confines itself to an expression of its intention to do the best it can for them. They are looked upon as midshipmen now, and from the commencement of their career, in the Queen's service, and, as such, justly liable to be dealt with as the Government shall think fit. These arrangements are just, and considerate, and we are glad that Government has determined to act liberally towards all officers, down to the lowest rank, of the late Company's navy.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. E. F. WHITE, C.E.—The staff of assistants in the East Indian Railway engineering department lately presented Mr. E. F. White, c.E., district engineer, with a hand-some service of silver plate on the occasion of his departure for England. Mr. White has been in the company's service since 1853.

REGIMENTS FOR CHINA.—The two regiments ordered to China are the 22nd N.I., now at Ahmednuggur, and the 29th, or 2nd Beloochee Regiment, now at Hyderabad. The latter is commanded by that gallant officer, Colonel Hough. The 22nd is to relieve our 5th N.I., now in China, and the Beloochee to relieve the 15th Punjabee Regiment N.I.

Imports (Bombay, August 12).—At the date of our last we reported a quiet business in Piece Goods, in consequence of speculators having ceased purchasing after the arrival of the English mail on 3rd ultimo. In the early part of the fortnight a few European houses and wealthy natives kept the morket in a steady position by purchasing to a fair extent of 30 in. Shirtings, and a little later on two extensive purchases of Jacconets were reported, the purchaser being a speculator. The bazaar is almost bare of stocks, whilst more than half the goods on the spot are held by speculators. Importers, whose stocks are now greatly reduced, are very firm in refusing to make any concession in values, but bazaar dealers are slowly acquiring stocks again at reduced rates by purchasing from speculators (Bombay, August 12).—Cotton.—In the early part of the fortnight this staple showed considerable firmness, and prices slowly but stendily advanced, notwithstanding few buyers entered the market until Dhollers reached Rs. 421 per candy, just before the arrival of the Galle telegram on 4th inst. The advices then to hand, being rather obscure, had little effect on prices, which, however, rather receded than otherwise. On the 7th mst, the direct mail of the 18th ult, with telegrams to the 26th, arrived, reporting a weak market at Liverpool. This intelligence caused prices to recede further here, and Phollers soon after changed hands at Rs. 395 for December delivery. As we close prices have rallied again, and we hear of Rs. 405 having just been paid for this same exception. Exports to Europe from 1st January to date are 706,042 bales, against 762,033\(\frac{1}{2}\) bales, against 762,033\(\frac{1}{2}\) bales adar prices to recede further here, and Phollers soon after changed hands at Rs. 395 for December delivery. As we close prices have rallied again, and we hear of Rs. 405 having just been paid for this same

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, September 10, 1862.

ROUTE TO CALCUTTA.

A CORRESPONDENT of the leading journal suggests that on the renewal of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's contract for the conveyance of the Indian mails, the navigation round the Island of Ceylon should cease and determine. He states, truly enough, that the harbour at Galle is a statio male fida crainis, and that much time is lost in the present circuituous route from Aden to Calcutta. These facts are altogether undeniable, but while fully recognising the reality of the inconveniences of which he complains, we cannot regard the course he proposes to substitute as by any means an improvement. His proposition is to disembark passengers and goods from Europe at Beypore, a small scaport on the Malabar coast; transport them to Madras across the peninsula by railway; and thence forward them by the ordinary sea-route to Calcutta. The objections to this scheme are obvious and manifold. Already constant and serious complaints are made of the damage caused by the two trans-shipments at Alexandria and Suez, and invalids and children are, to some degree, thereby prevented from making use of the overland route. At both of these termini, however, the operations of embarkation and disembarkation are conducted under comparatively favourable circumstances. There is no heavy surf to alarm and disquiet passengers, or to endanger the safe delivery of the goods. But at Beypore, and still more so at Madras, he sea breaks with terrific force upon the coast, and renders all communication with the shore generally unpleasant, and frequently hazardous. It is true that a pier is being constructed at Madras, and at Beypore small steamers may be employed to communicate with the larger one lying in the roads, but even these improvements will not entirely remove the natural impediments to secure and easy traffic. In any case there will be four trans-shipments and two fatiguing railway journies to be endured between Calcutta and Malta, and invalids will be thus entirely debarred from having recourse to this route. At the same time, there is little doubt that in less than two years the mails and the majority of the Bengal passengers will have their point of arrival and departure on the Western coastbut it will be at Bombay, and not at Beypore. As soon as railway communication is completed between the two Presidency towns, the Peninsular and Oriental Company will, for their own sakes, adopt the shorter line for ordinary traffic, and restrict themselves to one steamer per month for the voyage round the peninsular. On the completion of the railways now in course of construction, Bombay and is contributed by an officer of the Indian,

will become the commercial capital of India, | and apparently of the Bombay, army. and the most important city in all Asia. It will become the true Porte, or Gate, of communication between the Eastern and Western Worlds, and will take the place held in olden times by Alexandria and Constantinople, while nothing could ever raise Beypore above the importance of a third-rate Folkestone.

KING'S COLLEGE AND THE CIVIL SERVICE.

To use a hacknied phrase, the King's College, London, has taken a step in the right direction. It has filled a very "obvious void." Young men who have passed the first examination for the Indian Civil Service are often sorely perplexed as to how and where they are to complete their preparation for "the further examination." All difficulty on that head, however, has been removed by the establishment of an oriental department by the Council of King's College, London. The course, which will commence on the 2nd of October, embraces every subject which the successful candidate will have to take up for his final examination. Professor Ballantyne will lecture on Sanscrit, Bengali, and Hindu Law; Professor Howley on Tamil and Telugu; Professor Leitner on Arabic and Mahomedan Law; Professor Slater on Hindustani, and the History and Geography of India; Professor Stephen on English Law and Jurisprudence; and Professor Rogers on Political Economy, while the Jurisdiction and Procedure of the Courts of Law in India will be explained in a thoroughly competent manner, though the choice of the council has not yet been made known. It is by no means neces sary, however, to attend all these classes. It is optional to attend a course comprising two languages and the different branches of law and general literature, or to join only a single class. Lecturing will be combined with oral and written examinations, and at the end of the year Certificates of Honour and Merit will be awarded to those who have fairly deserved the destinction. The terms are very moderate, and may be ascertained by inquiring of Professor Leitner, Dean of the Section, either at the College, or at his private address, 7, Belgrave-road, Abbey-road, N.W. It is not only the successful candidates at the first examination who may derive immense benefit from this new arrangement, but those who are looking forward to the preliminary ordeal may now be thoroughly prepared for their prospective profession under circumstances somewhat analogous to the old system at Haileybury College. They will, at least, acquire that esprit de corps which has been proved by experience to produce the most beneficial results. The experiment is certainly worthy of encouragement, and there can be little doubt that the majority of the second year's men will prefer to complete their studies under the direction of such an able body of Professors to running unnecessary risks with private and irresponsible teachers.

SHIRAZ TO BUSHIRE.

A REMARKABLY well-written and entertaining article with the above title appears in the September number of Blackwood. It is one of those papers of which that excellent periodical enjoys an almost exclusive monopoly, author was one of the small and gallant band that rode from Teheran to Herat, to ascertain by personal inspection that the Persian troops had actually evacuated that town, in conformity with the terms of the treaty that stopped General Outram's march upon Shuster. Every obstacle was, of course, thrown in the way of their leaving the Persian capital to proceed on their adventurous mission; and when they insisted upon setting out the Prime Minister plainly told them they must go at their own risk, without escort, and without being accompanied by a Persian Commissioner. How it happened that the British Minister at that semi-barbarous Court submitted to this insolence is not explained in these pages, and probably it was not easily explicable without exhibiting the utter fatuity of English diplomacy in the East. Indian officers, however, are not often diverted from their purpose by the prospect of danger or fatigue, and, accordingly, taking their lives in their hands, these brave men resolutely undertook to accomplish their appointed task. Aftermany long marches, and the endurance of many hardships, the Mission reached Herat in the month of September, 1857, and remained in that city during the winter, hospitably entertained by Sultan Jan, the present enemy of Dost Mahomed. In the early spring the Englishmen returned to Teheran by a route untravelled by any European since Forster in 1783-84. From the capital they pushed on to Bushire by way of Ispahan and Shiraz, and finally reached that port in safety after "completing a journey of about 3,000 miles, every foot of which had been ridden on horseback."

The paper under notice is more particularly devoted to the record of the various incidents that occurred in the ride from Shiraz to Bushire. At the former place the Mission, consisting of three officers and a doctor-and accompanied by a Swedish traveller, of stalwart frame and energetic character-were detained ten days, with a view to rest their wearied horses and attendants. The treatment they received here from the Princegovernor was marked by the absence of the commonest civility, in accordance with instructions received from the Prime Minister; but this was personally rather a relief than a disappointment to the travellers, though the attendants naturally felt aggrieved by the loss of the presents and feasting which would otherwise have fallen to their share. During their detention at Shiraz a romantic adventure befell the narrator, and reduced him for ever to the condition of "a blighted being," haunted by the memory of a lovely vision. At Shiraz the party broke up-one member returning alone to Teheran, two others proceeding to Bushire by the lower road "which turns the stupendous mountain passes of the Kotul-i-dokter and the Pier-izun," while the author and the Swede took the direct road through those defiles, "which lead down from the high table-lands of Persia to the low-lying country around the shores of the Persian Gulf." For what befell them on this difficult and dangerous route we must refer our readers to Maga, our only object being to direct their attention to one of those pleasant articles for which Blackwood has been so frequently indebted to the Indian services, and which have so largely contributed to our knowledge of Eastern countries, and the customs, manners, and superstitions of their inhabitants.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA.—The directors of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, have announced that their loss from the recent opium fraud at Hong Kong may amount to about £40,000, and that, as this will just absorb the profits of the half-year, they recommend the suspension of a dividend on the present occasion. Apart from this event the progress of the establishment is said to have been very satisfactory.

Drafts on India.—The India Council have notified that their next monthly drawing of bills on India will be for £450,000, instead of £300,000, as on previous occasions. This increase in the amount is from the circumstance that for the bills lately offered the tenders have fallen short about £230,000. Supposing the whole £450,000 now to be taken, as will probably be the case, in consequence of the augmented demand for bills on India to pay for cotton purchases, there will remain about £80,000 to add to the next monthly total. The drawings are expected to continue monthly for a considerable time.

Mr. Laing.—The Glasgow Chamber of Commerce have voted an address to Mr. Samuel Laing, congratulating him on his safe return to his native land, and expressing their high appreciation of the important financial measures which he so successfully inaugurated in India during his residence there, was also adopted. The address contains an expression of the conviction of the Chamber that the policy which Mr. Laing had adopted was wise, sound, and liberal.

APPOINTMENT.—(Downing-street, Sept. 1.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint F. W. Mitchell, Esq., to be Postmaster-general, and J. Simpson, Esq., to be Assistant Postmaster-general for the Colony of Hong Kong.

ORDER OF THE BATH.—(War-office, August 20.)
—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of John Forsyth, Esq., late Principal Inspector-general of the Medical Department of the Bengal Army, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Third Class or Companions of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

THE ANGLO-CHINESE FLEET OF THE FUTURE. The arrangements for the formation of this fleet are being pushed forward as rapidly as possible by Mr. Lay, who represents the Chinese Government in this country, and Captain Sherard Osborn, c.B., who takes the command in chief. The Amoy screw gunboat, late the Jasper, and purchased from the Admiralty, is under orders to leave Portsmouth, under the command of Commander Salwell, for the Victoria Docks, where the squadron will assemble and complete their outfit prior to sailing for China. Captains Sherard Osborn, Burgoyne, and Allen Young, will proceed at once to Devonport to take possession of the Mohawk and Africa screw gunvessels, which have been placed at the disposal of the Chinese Government by the Admiralty. The Africa is a new vessel fitted to carry four guns, has a tonnage of 669 tons, and is fitted with screw engines of 150horse power, nominal. The $Mohaw\bar{k}$ has been in commission, but is a very fine vessel of her class. She is of 670 tons, fitted like the Africa to carry four guns, and has seven engines of 200-horse power. The purchase of the Nimrod screwvessel at Portsmouth has been declined by Mr. Lay and Captain Osborn, owing to her defects having been found to be far more extensive than had been anticipated. Mr. John White, of the Medina dock and building yard at West Cowes, has been commissioned to build for Captain Osborn's fleet a paddlewheel steamer of the Psyche class, but of rather larger tonnage and horse power of engines. She is estimated to realise a speed of eighteen knots per hour. Messrs. Laird, of Birkenhead, have also been commissioned to build two improved gunvessels, their sides to be covered with shell-proof armour plating.

THE SUPPLY OF COTTON .- Now that the cotton risis has nearly if not quite reached its maximum intensity, it is interesting to take a retrospective glance at the supplies which have come to hand in former years. The import last year amounted to 1,256,984,736 lbs., a total in excess of the receipts of any former year with the exception of 1800, when the deliveries from the various sources of supply were 1,390,938,752 lbs. The import of the present year, having regard to the experience of the last eight months, will probably not exceed 400,000,000 lbs., or not quite up to the level at which affairs stood in 1846, when 467,856,274 lbs. were received. The very prosperity which has prevailed in the cotton manufacture since 1846 has then proved an evil, for if manufacturing enterprise had not experienced a prodigious expansion during the last ten or fifteen years the receipts at present obtained would have nearly met current requirements. Notwithstanding the attempted blockade of the ports of the Southern States of America, the Transatlantic driblets which have come to hand-and which have rather increased in importance of late-will probably "foot up" this year for from 15,000,000 lbs. to 20,000,000 lbs., about the quantity ordinarily received from the Brazils. It is worthy of remark that, notwith standing all the discussion which has prevailed during the past twelve months, India is at present the only part of the world which has in any de gree proved a substitute for the vast cotton field of America. Thus last year India sent us 369,040,448 lbs., as compared with 204,141,168 lbs. in 1860. The largest receipts of cotton from India in any former year occurred in 1857, when 250,338,144 lbs. came to hand; and it is satisfactory to find that on the whole. India has made great progress during the last twenty years, in regard to the export of cotton, having forwarded to this country 145,179,216 lbs. in 1855, as compared with 118,872,742 lbs. in 1850, and 58,437,420 lbs. in 1845. It is not too much to say, that if such progress has been achieved in the face of many economic and political difficulties, the industrial development of the country will proceed at an accelerated rate with the increased transit facilities now afforded. The United States last year sent us 819,500,528 lbs. of cotton, as compared with 1,115,890,608 lbs. in 1860, so that it was not after all till the present year that the disturbance of the regular course of trade began to be seriously felt. It is not a little singular that not with standing all the writing and talking on the subject, miscellaneous sources of supply, such as the Brazils, countries bordering on the Mediterranean, the West Indies, &c., actually sent us less cotton last year than in 1860, the deliveries having been 68,443,750 lbs. in 1861, against 70,906,976 lbs. in the preceding twelve months.

PAPER.-Among the botanical specimens sent ver from Japan to the Société d'Acclimatation by M. Eugène Simon, there are a few young trees, out of the bark of which the Japanese make very good and strong paper. In China the bark of the Broussonnetia papyrifera, a kind of mulberry tree, is used; that of Japan is a variety of the same species, to which Van Sieboldt has given the name of Broussonnetia Kaminoki. Considering the daily increasing difficulty of meeting the demand for rags, which are sold at about £2 per cwt., the bark of this tree, imported from Japan, would prove extremely valuable to the paper trade, inasmuch as it would not cost more than half that price. The Broussonnetiv Kaminoki might be easily acclimatised in various parts of Europe; it prefers a stony soil, especially of a calcareous nature, and should be planted at intervals not exceeding three feet; otherwise the branches would extend, whereby the bark would become full of knots, causing much loss of sub-The soil is not stance in the manufacture. manured until the second year; in the autumn of that year the plant is lopped close to the root, and this operation, as well as that of manuring slightly, is repeated every second year; 100 lbs. of branches thus obtained, stripped of their leaves, yield 10 lbs. of bark. The branches, on arriving at the manufactory, are put into hot water for half an hour; the bark can then be easily stripped off with the hands, and is afterwards left in the sun to dry. It is next macerated for three days in river water, and bleached in the sun. These operations having been several times repeated, the bark is at last boiled in a lye of ashes for the space of three hours, then manipulated for some time to separate any epidermis that may have remained, and lastly, when dry, the mass is pounded fine and made into a pulp with water, to which a glutinous liquid, extracted from a shrub called Nebooriko—probably the Accia Nemu—is added, in the proportion of about two pints per cwt. of pulp. The latter is then made into sheets much in the usual way.

THE WAX TREE OF JAPAN .- On this remarkable plant, the Rhus Succedanea of botanists, the Bulletin de la Socièté d'Acclimatation publishes an interesting paper by M. Eugène Simon, now at Nagasaki. The vegetabte wax of Japan is one of the chief articles which that country exports. It is not exactly of the same nature as common wax, since it melts in summer at the common temperature; but this inconvenience is obviated in Japan by protecting the candles made with this wax by a coating of bees'-wax. It appears that in England a process has been discovered for increasing its consistency, since the demand for the article from that quarter has considerably increased of late. The tree itself might be easily acclimatised in the southern parts of France. It thrives on mountains and on stony and barren ground, unfit for other agricultural purposes. M. Simon has sent over about twenty kilogrammes of its seed for trial. The young trees are planted in Japan along the highways, when they are two years old, leaving a distance of about three feet between the stems, but if planted in squares, the distance must be double. The trees are kept low by lopping, and trimmed in the shape of pyramids. In the fifth year after planting, each tree yields on an average 4 lbs. of seeds; in the eighth year, 6 lbs.; in the tenth, 18 lbs.; in the twelfth, 40 lbs.; in the fifteenth, 60 lbs.; in the eighteenth year the tree enters upon its decline. 400 lbs. of seed yield 100 lbs. of wax. At present 200 lbs. of this wax are sold in London at the price of £5; so that a plantation of 10,000 trees in their prime may produce £1,000. The seed is gathered towards the end of autumn, thrashed, and then left to dry for a fortnight, after which it is slightly roasted. It is next crushed under a millstone, and the produce exposed to the heat of steam in canvas bags; the wax is then obtained by the action of a screw press. This wax is of the third action of a screw press. or lowest quality; to bleach it, it is rasped, rinsed in water, and then exposed to the action of the sun and dew for three days. A still higher quality is obtained by repeating this operation.

Indian Cotton .- Some disappointment having been expressed at the slow progress of British India as a cotton field, it may be interesting at the present moment to state that one obstacle in the way of increased deliveries of the now so urgently required staple is the non-completion of the Thul Ghât inclines on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. The incline will not be finished till next year, but when it is completed, the branch contemplated to Nagpore, the great cotton mart of Central India, will become available, and the movement of cotton down to the coast will be immensely facilitated. That this is no mere theoretical matter may be shown by the fact that during 1860-1861 the company incurred an expense in conveying traffic across the Ghât of no less than £45,851. In spite of every obstacle, the arrival of cotton at Bombay, one of the termini of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, has very largely increased this year; and there is no doubt that when the Thul Ghât difficulty is overcome, the shipments from Bombay will undergo a very great expansion.

THE INDIAN RAILWAYS.—The profession of civil engineering has to lament the loss of another of its eminent members in the death of James John Berkley, engineer-in-chief in India, of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. After a lingering illness contracted in India he died at his home at Sydenham on the 25th ult. at the early age of 43 years. He was an accomplished man, and possessing more than ordinary engineering abilities. The late Mr. Robert Stephenson included him among his intimate and attached friends. Mr. Stephenson entertained so high an opinion of his talents and character as to associate him confidently with his professional life, and at an early age to intrust him with the responsible office of chief resident engineer of the Churnet Valley and Trent Valley Railways. Under the advice of Mr. Stephenson he was appointed engineer-in-chief, in India, of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, and in January, 1850, he commenced the important work of laying out and making nearly 1,300 miles of railway. He was the engineer who constructed and opened the first Indian railway. At a time when the passage of locomotive engines up long and very steep gradients was deemed to be somewhat doubtful, Mr. Berkley designed the two great inclines over the lofty mountains (2,100 feet high) of Western India, known as the Bhore and Thull Ghauts, and by which an uninterrupted communication will shortly be opened from Bombay, and respectively from Calcutta and Madras. The boldness and skill displayed in the construction of these truly gigantic works are perhaps unsurpassed, and they are noble monuments of English engineering. Without sacrificing efficiency and durability in the execution of his works, Mr. Berkley was decidedly an economical engineer; he subordinated all interests to those of the share holders, and it is not therefore surprising that his line-the Great Indian Peninsula-bids fair to be the cheapest and most profitable line in The employment of native agency in all branches of his works was a favourite and successful practice with him; and although this might, in some degree, appear to explain his remarkable popularity with the natives in Bombay of all ranks, it was really by his conciliatory manner and continuous efforts for their good that he won their confidence and esteem. It was a favourite expression of George Stephenson's, that he could engineer matter very well, but his difficulty was in engineering men. His son Robert Stephenson, on the occasion of presiding at a public dinner given to James Berkley in April, 1856, in Lon don, said,-" He had succeeded not only in engineering matter in a foreign country, with few available resources for railway operations, but he had also been eminently successful in that more difficult task of engineering men," no small tribute to his talent and temper.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The India and China mail steamer Ripon took out £300,659 in specie, of which £4,000 in gold was for Ceylon; £5,002 in gold for Madras; £70,100 in silver for Calcutta; and the remaining £221,557 in silver for China and the Straits.

EAST INDIA AND LONDON SHIPPING COMPANY. A special general meeting of the East India and London Shipping Company was held on September 9th, at the company's offices, 9, Mincing lane; Capt. Pelly, R.N., in the chair. The report of the directors, which went fully into the operations and proceedings of the company, was received and adopted, and an interim dividend of £5 per cent. per annum was declared upon the B shares. Much satisfaction was expressed at the rapid passages now being made by the company's ships, and the chairman stated if the passages could be maintained, the success of the company was beyond question. A vote of thanks was unanimously passed to the chairman and

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Comte is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some clauses of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be diaregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics itself, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1862.

A SHORT TRIP in HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. ANSTED. Post 8vo., cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted's descriptions are written with a neat-ness attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. His volume is one both of value and entertainment: a book calcu-lated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube."— Athenseum, Aug. 16, 1862.

"Many a tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Professor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a four than the author of this interesting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN HISTORY. By J. G. EDGAR. Author of the "Boyhood of Great Men," &c., &c. With Illustrations. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children. Mr. J. G. Edgar never makes a contribution to juvenile literature that does not deserve a certain measure of commendation. We can conscientiously recommend it ('Memorable Events') as a work at the same time entertaining and useful."—Athenseum, March 6, 1662.

time entertaining and useful."—Athenseum, March 6, 1662.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the envisible talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so describing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ('Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agrecable, high-minded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failures."—Spectator.

By Duncan Forbes, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15a.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes a stout fight for the Hindoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative etymology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the tule-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical sivle, but freshly, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Herald.

SIN: its Causes and Consequences. An Attempt to Investigate the Origin, Nature, Extent, and Results of Moral Evil. A Series of Lent Lectures. By the Rev. Henry Christmas, M.A., F.R.S. Post 8vo., cloth, Sa. Sd.

"These lectures are learned, cloquent, and carnest, and though they approach the 'limits of religious thought,' they do not transgress those limits; and they present the reader with a comprehensive review, based upon revelation, of the nature, extent, and consequences of moral evil or sin, both in this world and in the world to come."—Civil Service Garsette.

neum, March 9, 1861.

"Mr. Young is well-known as the author of undoubtedly the best treatise on the 'Theory of Equations' which is to be found in our lauguage—a treatise distinguished by originality of thought, great learning, and admirable perspicuity. Nor are these qualities wanting in the work which we are reviewing.

. Considering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparting accurately and luridly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation commend this work to the public as by far the best elementary course of mathematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861. view, April 6, 1861.

"This is not only one of the most amusing books that we have read for a long time, but also the best and most reliable account of Russian life and manners which has hitherto been given to the public."—Spectator.

Translated from the German of C. M. von Wieland. By the Rev. H. CHRISTMAS. 2 vols., post 8vo., cloth, 18s.

"As a prose satire, 'The History of the Abderites' yields only in breadth of humour, and pungency of wit, to Dean Swift's immortal travels of Captain Lemuel Gulliver; and of works of that class we know of none in any language that can compare with either of the two."—Observer.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English men and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution towards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to mankind, of the Quinotes', Gullivers', and other human foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to on shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of national thanks, we undertake to conveyour share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."—London Review.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta mail of the 8th August has been received but brings no news of any kind. The most important intelligence is given in our "Official Gazette," and relates to the unsatisfactory findings of three native Courtsmartial. The Bengal Sepoy appears to be a singularly unteachable animal, and has certainly not learned aright the lesson taught by the suppression of the great mutiny. Prompt and severe punishment will alone succeed in curbing the innate insolence of his character. Fair words and gentle reprimands are a mere waste of breath.

We rejoice to learn that the Maharajah of Puttialla has repudiated the contemptuous expressions he was alleged to have used with reference to the Governor's Council. His Highness positively denies that he ever uttered or entertained a single thought disrespectful to the British Government, and it must be admitted that his antecedents give ususual weight to this denial.

In a like manner, if the Madras Athenseum be correctly informed, the charges made against the Nizam were purely fictitious. It is now asserted on seemingly good authority that his Highness took the Insignia of the Order from Colonel Davidson with his right, and not with his left hand, and did not thrust them under his seat as described in the public prints. The investment was conducted with the strictest attention to the proper ceremonial observances, and becoming acknowledgments rendered of the royal approbation implied in these symbols of honour.

A shocking affair is reported to have taken place in Travancore. The Coil Tambooran of Mavellicara, a relative of the reigning family, had some reason to suspect that his wife was carrying on an adulterous intercourse with a servant in the employ of his son. He accordingly resolved to be avenged, and contrived that the destroyer of his domestic happiness should be inveigled into a bath-room, where he was murdered by some of the Tambooran's attendants. Death was inflicted by beating the poor prostrate wretch on the abdomen and other vital parts by a green jack-fruit of great weight and size, and the body was then thrown into a neighbouring tank. Rumours of foul play, however, got abroad, and inquiries were instituted which led to the detection of the crime. The man who actually beat the deceased to death has received sentence of capital punishment; the Coil Tambooran and the servant who held the deceased on the ground are to be imprisoned for life; while the other accomplices are to the servant who held the for life; while the other accomplices are to the servant who held the for life; while the other accomplices are to the servant who held the for life; while the other accomplices are to the servant who held the servant who held the deceased on the ground are to be imprisoned for life; while the other accomplices are to the servant who held the servant who held the deceased on the ground are to be imprisoned for life; while the other accomplices are to the servant who held the servant who he undergo various periods of imprisonment, the shortest of which is twenty years.

The news from China is less unsatisfactory than it has been for some time past. The Taipings appear to have acquired a wholesome terror of European fire-arms, and have not been heard of in the neighbourhood of the protected ports.

In Japan, however, another attack has been made upon the British Legation, though it is possible that nothing more was intended than an act of burglary. Only one man has been charged with the offence, and he was instantly disposed of by the guard, but not until he had mortally wounded with his spear two of the Renard's marines who happened to be on duty that night. Business, however, was at a stand-still, the Japanese carefully avoiding much intercourse with foreigners.

BENGAL.

HOPE FOR NORTH BENGAL.

The great chain of the Himalayas which shuts off India from all the world besides, stretches for a length of 1,500 miles and has an average breadth of 150. Geographers have divided the range into two parts, the eastern and western. The former extends for 800 miles from Suddya, near which the Dihong falls into the Burhampooter, which there rounds the corner of the hills, to the Kalee, which is the western boundary of Nepal. For these 800 miles we have an exposed frontier almost destitute of military defence, and broken near its middle by only the bright spot of Darjeeling, which, in its defencelessness, adds to our weakness. On the western portion of the Himalayas more troops are massed than in any other part of India. There are the great sanitaria of Landour, Simla, Dugshai, Subathoo, Dalhousie, and Murree; there are the great cantonments from Meerut to Peshawur; there are the frontier posts guarded by the Punjab Irregular Force and the Sind Horse. But on the northern portion, if we except the garrisons of Oudh, there is no defence. For the 600 miles from the Gunduck to the Dihong, from Bettia to Suddya, there is hardly one complete corps along the frontier.

Yet Nepaul has to be watched, Sikkim to be coerced, Darjeeling to be protected, Bhootan to be punished, Cooch Behar to be cared for, and above all fertile Assam with its growing population and wealth to be defended. Nor can it be said that this frontier is so peaceful as not to require attention. Nepal has long coveted Sikkim. With Sikkim we have had three en counters, the last of a most serious character. There has been peace with the Booteahs only because, since the days of Warren Hastings, we have found it more profitable to submit to insult. Since 1857 the wild tribes farther to the east and south-east have maintained with us a chronic warfare in which, despising them, we have not always come off best. The naval brigade which was stationed at Debrooghur in 1857 will never forget their pitched battle with the Abors, in which their dead were left on the field. Often since then have Abors, Nagas, Garrows, Koookes and other branches of the Indo Chinese race risen, while at this moment the Jynteans maintain a successful stand against us in the very heart of Assam. It is, doubtless, very disagreeable to confess the fact, it is certainly not pleasant to the Military Department, but the frontier of North Bengal can no longer be left defenceless. It is cheaper to maintain a small native force, permanently and for ever to overawe these savages, than every year to fit out an expensive and fruitless expedition against them. Not only so, but a military force is the first element in good government, and under its shadow civilisation may steal over the hills and transform the rude tribes into prosperous labourers or soldiers. The policy which has so succeeded on the Punjab frontier, where we have to deal with real warriors, should be more cheaply and speedily successful in Bengal. Accordingly, Brigadier-general Showers is at present, we understand, concerting with the Lieutenant-governor a plan of defence for the frontier. Nothing is wanted but a few posts and a small moveable column of sepoys, with perhaps a few mountain guns in the hands of European convalescents at Darjeeling and Assam. The sepoy army is large enough still and can well spare a thousand men for the duty. With these and mounted volunteer corps at Darjeeling, Tirhoot, and Assam, the work should be done. Besides this as a temporary force, we hear, an expedition will, in the cold season, be sent against the Abors, whose conduct in 1857 is still unpunished. Meanwhile we should like to see the Jynteans quieted. The death of the Rajah of Independent Tipperah, just reported, will enable us to make better arrangements with IND han uccessor for the pacification of the Kookees. Though " independent" and never subject even to Joob-Raj, or heir-apparent. We recognised the Chief now dead in 1849.

Fearing the slough of despond into which his predecessor dragged all Nuddea with himself, Mr. Beadon is wisely devoting his personal attention to Assam. At Gowhatty a fortnight ago he received in Durbar the representatives of the hill chiefs and the few native gentry of the province. His words were wise and full of hope for North Bengal. He is reported as having thus concluded his address: "The province, I am glad to say, has improved vastly during the last thirty years. Its population and revenues have increased; its trade has expanded; its agriculture spreads over the hills, and tracts covered until lately with impenetrable jungle; its products are now known in the markets of the world; property is secure; and the people are beginning to understand and appreciate the advantages of education. I trust that this improvement will continue from year to year, and that, before I lay down the government of Bengal, Assam will not be behind any part of India in anything that betokens prosperity and advancement." For the first time has Assam seen its ruler on its own soil. His presence on this occasion it owes primarily to the English capitalists who have settled as tea planters in its valleys and on its hilly slopes, and partly to the turbulence of its tribes. It is true of provinces as of men that, to succeed, they must make a noise in the world, a fact Madras has yet to learn. By personal inquiry Mr. Beadon will be able to see what it is in our rule that makes the Jinteahs so discontented, and how honest subordinate officials will probably secure that submission on their part which sepoys alone have been unable to effect. In Major Haughton the province has a Commissioner who gives promise of a most successful administration, and one who will certainly leave no stone un-turned to "develope its resources."

It will not be his or Mr. Beadon's fault if the day is far distant when the trade of the Burhampooter shall rival that of the Ganges, when railways shall penetrate into districts where at present there are not even roads, and when, taking a start from Suddya our north-eastern outpost of civilisation, some adventurous surveyor, officer or planter shall settle the vexed questions of the course of the Dihong, the position of Bonga, and the nature of the country between Suddya and Lassa on the one side and the Burhampooter and Yangtse-kiang on the other. We do not dream. Within the past three years Pekin has been taken, the island-continent of Australia has been crossed, Ichang has been reached by boats on the Yangtse, and an English officer has accomplished the far more arduous and daring task of measuring the heights of Karakorum, and mapping the mighty glaciers of the Indian Caucasus, Friend of India

HAUNCH-SQUATTING ▼. CHAIRS.

The serious and the ludicrous are frequently divided from each other by a line so narrow as to be invisible. When we overcame our first impression of incredulity at even the most moderate of the accounts we have published of the Star of India Durbar at Hyderabad, and realised the spectacle of forty English officers squatting uneasily on their haunches, headed by officials, who to their stocking-feet below added cocked-hats and waving plumes above, we at once thought "what a scene for Punch!" Our mind reverted to the stories told by grave annalists of the etiquette of the Court of Madrid, long the Pekin of Europe, where one sovereign perished because the proper official could not be found, whose duty it was to remove his master's chair from the over-heated fire-place, and through which the charming and unfortunate Queen Marie Louise of Orleans for once prevailed on her imbecile husband to break. As an example of the other extreme we thought of the American Minister at the Court of Vienna, who has never yet been presented because his democratic instincts are shocked at a court-dress. and who therefore transacts all business through officials.

quette is of the very essence of politics and has been the cause of many a desolating war, when especially we realised the fact that Asiatics attach to izzut an importance as great as to life itself, looking on it as the very symbol of power, we felt that the subject was one for treatment different from that of the laughing philosopher. Whether the Christian representatives of Her Most Christian Majesty are to walk shoeless and squat on their haunches in the presence of her idolatrous and Mussulman feudatories, or whether, showing them all the signs of respect which are customary in the presence of English nobles and gentlemen, they are to sit on chairs is, seriously, a question which involves in the eyes of the Asiatics the supremacy of the Queen and in the eyes of Englishmen the preservation of self-respect and national honour. We are, therefore, glad to find that the Government of India so consider it, and that, acting on our representations, the conduct of the Hyderabad agency is a subject of official inquiry, while political agents and residents have been called on for a statement of the custom which they follow. and the department which corresponds to the Heralds' College in Calcutta is searching for precedents. This fact and the death of Colonel Davidson prohibit further discussion as to the details of the Hyderabad Durbar, and render it superfluous for us to publish the many letters on the subject which we have received. Meanwhile, not a few officials who have only winced at the degradation to which they have been compelled to submit are grateful to us for having raised the question. The public may rest satisfied that English honour is safe in the hands of an experienced "political" and fearless soldier like Colonel Durand, and of a Vicerby who was the successor in China of Lords Macartney and Amherst, and who burned the scene of that hateful kow-towing in Pekin, which has been on a smaller scale so long imitated in India.

A practice has certainly existed in Central India and Rajpootana similar to that at Hyderabad, but with this difference, that the political agents have always done their utmost to put a stop to it. In the many States of Rajpootana the practice of taking off the shoes and squatting on the haunches is contemporaneous in its origin with our suzerainty. At first, we believe, when Sir Henry Lawrence became agent, he did take off his shoes at the chief Courts; but even he, the best and wisest friend the natives of India ever had, who had left the Punjab because he did not approve of the policy of Sir John and Lord Dalhousie, soon had chairs substituted, although the late Maharana of Oodeypore opposed the in-novation. This reform his brother, Brigadiar G. St. P. Lawrence, the present agent, steadily adhered to, but unfortunately during his absence in England, and after the mutiny, the officer who officiated for him returned like the sow to her wallowing in the mire. General rence came back, and at the late installation of the young Maharana proposed to revert to the chairs; but the time was as politically unsuitable for the change as it had been well adapted for it when the Queen assumed the direct suzerainty over all Indian nobles. The chief Thakoor or premier declared that the odium of the act would fall on the boy's advisers; that they would be represented to the whole Rajpoot race as having taken advantage of the Maharana's minority. Accordingly, at the installation, unwilling to dishonour themselves like "the forty" of Hyderabad. the mounted and dismounted officers who were to be present did not enter the durbar but remained outside, while General Lawrence and his staff, whose duty it was to be present, reduced the disgrace to its lowest possible minimum by riding on elephants in slippers, which they quiety dropped before stepping on the exquisitely wadded thoor-cloth of the durbar room. The party kept on their hats, only raising them on nearing the chief. Similarly at Holkar's durbars in Central India no chairs are now used. But at Nagpore, when the late Rajah was alive, Colo-But when we remembered that with a semi-his seat in a chair. So at Gwalior, Scindia's is a chair, and not a haunch-squatting, shoeless durance. nel Durand, on presenting his credentials, took bar. So at Bhopal. Even Holkar, when he received Colonel Durand in 1857, had chairs for him and all the officers of the column who accompanied him. Like the saying of General Fraser, a predecessor of Colonel Davidson's, who told the Nizam, when he objected to the presence of a certain officer with cavalry boots on, that if the boots came off the breeches must follow, Colonel Durand told them he was too tall to tuck up his legs under him. The durbars of Lahore and Cabool, ruled over by "sovereign princes" in reality, by our allies, not our mere feudatories, were chair durbars.

As to Burmah, we hasten to correct the impression which we ourselves, on good authority, conveyed, that Colonel Phayre submitted to a ceremonial, on hands and knees, almost as humiliating as kow-towing. We are informed that, at the Court of Ava, he has always sat upright, on a carpet, without lowering his head, exactly as he is represented in "Yule's Mission to the Court of Ava," and in the same position as the King's brother, except that he crouches with his head down. Colonel Phayre considers the word "Phra" as bearing exactly the same varied meaning as "My Lord" in English, according as it is reverently applied to God or to a Still the envoy appeared bare-headed and bare-footed, the former as a matter of convenience to himself and the latter according to Court etiquette, and we must say that we agree with Colonel Yule in his remark on the spectacle, when he describes Colonel Phayre as "looking very absurd as he walked in his stockings, and as we all doubtless did presently.' We are content to obliterate the past. But Colonel Phayre is now Chief Commissioner, a title translated "Mengee" or Great King, a name which is part of the gold-footed one's own title; and if he, next month, is ordered by the Viceroy to approach the King in any other way than as the lordly ambassador of the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India, we shall be astonished. Did we go to war with China because we would not kow-tow to a celestial Emperor, and are we to suffer any longer her Majesty's representative to perform an act which we must consider as humiliating before the petty sovereign of a people not so large as that of Scotland?

We do not overlook the political aspect of this question. It is because Asiatics attach so extravagant an importance to courtly ceremonial that we are glad Lord Elgin has acted on our representations. From the first we have admired that native policy with which Lord Canning's name is associated, because its object is to raise up a great and enlightened aristocracy who shall, on the one hand, stand between tyrants like the Nizam and their subjects, and, on the other, between us and such a rebellion as they helped us to quell in 1857. Give them exalted knightly orders, legal rights and privileges, even lands and moneys, if by such means their loyalty may be secured. But let humble submission to the Queen, let at least passive loyalty, be the tenure on which such honours and rights are held. If by making a high English official squat shoeless on his haunches an Asiatic produces or hopes to produce the impression among his countrymen that he is, in some way, not the devoted subject of the Queen, then we must risk the empire rather than submit. It matters not whether the occasion be a greased cartridge or a Resident's boots, every man in India, from the Nizam to the parish, must be made to know that Victoria is Queen. It was a mistake, due to the slowness with which Lord Canning awoke to his position after the rebellion had been put down, that contemporaneous with the Royal Proclamation on 1st of November, 1858, the Company's coinage was not called in, the Royal Order of Knighthood was not proclaimed, and a new ceremonial instituted for all Durbars attended by her Majesty's representatives. That mistake we are gradually awaking to. The year 1860 gave the native chiefs new sunnuds; the year 1861 gave them a royal order, the Star of India; the year 1862 saw an Act passed for a new coinage with the Queen's effigy upon it, and notes bearing that effigy cur-inhabited by a race of Hindoo fanatics, who take empire. The year 1863 will certainly see uniform orders on the subject of durbar etiquette.

But there is a higher view to take of this than the Asiatic and the purely expedient. That self-respect which is the fruit of Christianity in every true Englishman's breast must not be wounded. That national and truly humble dignity which we have asserted at the walls of Pekin must not be lowered. Suetonius has a strikingly apposite passage in his "Life of Tiberius." scribing the effeminacy of which that prince of sensualists was guilty, how he gave up riding and the use of weapons of war, he says that, like a womanish Greek, he laid aside the grand old Roman toga for the pallium, and the cothurnus or high boot for the crepide or slippers, and so for the space of two years he daily became more degraded and more despised even by the luxurious Romans of the Empire-" Redegit se," Suetonius says, "deposito patrio habitu, ad pallium et crepidas: atque in tali statu biennio fere permansit, contemtior in dies at invisior." The honour of England and the self respect of English officers no less than the highest political expediency demand that the days of stocking-feet and haunch-squatting in Durbars shall come to a perpetual end. Our children when they read the chronicles of the past will wonder that their fathers ever submitted to such dishonour, even as we wonder at the great harems, ill gotten wealth and open idolatry of those Hindooised officers of last century of whom Job Charnock, Scot, Waring and Stuart are representatives .- Friend of India.

TRIBES ON THE TRANS-INDUS FRON-TIER.

The invasion of Affghanistan by the Heratees has excited no little interest among the tribes on our North-Western frontier. The ordinary course of the caravans is blocked up, and the effects on trade of the prevailing disorganisation in Central Asia will be felt still more next cold season. These highlanders are destined to play no trifling part in the struggles which seem to be impending.

The two main denominations of the races in habiting the Trans-Indus frontier are the mixed tribes chiefly of Affghan and Turkish descent, and the Belooch tribes. The mixed tribes hold the mountains from Hazara and Peshawur to Dera Futch Khan, and consist of Turnoulees, Eusofzaies, Mohmunds, Afreedees, Khuttuks, Bungush, Bazotees, Sipahs, Oorukzaies, Wuzeerees, and Sheoranees. The Turnoulees chiefly belong to the Hazara district. They can boast some 5,500 fighting men. In December, 1851, Mr. Carne, a collector of excise, and his assistant, Mr. Tapp, while travelling through Turnoulee, were seized by a band of marauders and slain in cold blood after they had surrendered and yielded up their arms. They had visited this wild country contrary to the advice of the civil authorities. Towards the end of the following year an expedition, conducted by the Commissioner of Peshawur, the late Lieutenant-colonel Mackeson, c.B., entered the Hussunzaie country, assailed the murderers in their strongholds, known as the "Black Mountains," and quite humbled the pride of the clan, who had boasted that their mountain sides had never been scaled by an enemy. The Eusofzaies inhabit the upper portion of the Peshawur Valley bordering on the Swat Mountains. They are proud, warlike, and extremely sensitive in all matters connected with family custom. During the Sikh War they never paid revenue, unless it was taken from them by force of arms. They number about 30,000 fighting men. The tribe who inhabit the Valley of Swat and the mountains opposite to Hoti Mardan, were formerly called Swatees, but they have, during the last fifty years, become so mixed up with the Eusofzaies that they are generally known now by their name. They are under a religious leader called the Akhoond, and, as may be supposed from their form of government, they are the most fanatical of all the tribes-their last leader being a Syud, or descendant of Ali, the cousin or nephew of the Prophet. There is a high mountain on the right bank of rent as coin throughout the greater part of the their name from Sitana, a village near the base of the mountain. Some few sepoys who escaped, in 1857, from Peshawur and Nowshera found shelter here. The Momunds, mustering some 12,000 fighting men, inhabit the hills north of the Kyber, and hold both banks of the Cabul river. Their capital, Lalpoora, is situated just beyond the north-western extremity of the Kyber. Their former chief, who died very lately, named Saadut Khan, bore an old grudge against the British. During the occupation of Cabul he was expelled from his country, and his cousin Torabaz Khan installed in his place, for which purpose a British brigade marched to Lalpoora. After the evacuation of Cabul, Tarabaz Khan was ousted in his turn, and Saadut Khan reinstated. The Momunds at one time held considerable tracts of land in the Peshawur Valley, on both sides of the Cabul river, known under the designation of Michnee and Punchpoo. These tracts were held in feoff-dom under the British Government. Their villages, however, became an asylum for malefactors and outlaws; and whilst they could traverse, at will, the whole valley, and freely enter the Peshawur markets, not a Government official dared to make his appearance in their villages, except at the risk of his life. Eventually a force under Sir Colin Campbell moved out from Peshawur. destroyed their fortified villages, and expelled the tribe from the valley. A fort called the Michnee Fort was built at Dubb, where the Cabul river emerges from the hills. Whilst this fort was being erected in 1852 the engineer officer, Lieutenant Boulnois, while riding towards a small mud tower in its vicinity, was shot by some men within it, who cut off his head, and carried it to Lalpoora, whence it was recovered. It now lies buried with his body in one of the ramparts of the fort. During 1853 the Momunds gave a great deal of trouble, and attacked the Fort of Shubkuddur with 6,000 men, but were repulsed by Sir Colin Campbell. They were at last allowed to reoccupy their lands after giving assurances for their future good conduct. The Momunds resemble the Afreedees in many points of character, but are inferior to them as soldiers.

The Afreedees hold the Kyber and Kobat Passes, and muster about 15,000 fighting men. The several sections of this tribe are usually divided into as many factions, and they only unite to levy "black mail," or to oppose invaders. They are brave and hardy, good soldiers, and first rate shots, but few comparatively have taken service in our frontier regiments. They are not to be trusted as sentries over treasure, but when called upon to fight they are true to their salt, and will willingly fight against their own brethren. The Boree Afreedees kept up for some time a regular body of mounted men to carry on their plundering expeditions. In November, 1853, an expedition was formed against their chief town, Boree, which lies in a little valley beyond their first range of hills below several spurs of great steepness, to which on a moment's warning they can retire, and which they at that time considered impregnable. Our troops having passed the outer range of hills without opposition, crossed the valley and attacked their fortified villages, destroying everything which fell into their hands, and retired to camp the next evening. This had the effect of dispelling the idea of the impregnability of Boree. The Afreedees have a strange mixture of character. They are frank, hospitable, brave, and high spirited, and as a rule true to engagements they make with a stranger who takes refuge with them. They are, at the same time, cruel, indifferent to the shedding of blood even on slight occasions, faithless to public engagements, avaricious, and sensual. The Khuttuks dwell in the hills south of Peshawur and the plains which lie between the base of these hills and the Cabool River. They are a quiet and well-behaved tribe, and have, in their neighbourhood, been uniformly faithful and obedient. Of these four latter great tribes the Afreedees and Momunds have been repeatedly against us, and the Eusofzaies and the Khuttuks have never fired a shot except on our side, and yet neither of the latter are inferior in manliness of spirit to the former.

The Bungush tribe number about 5,000 fighting men, and inhabit the enclosed plains of Their denominations are-Kusranees, Bozdars, Meeranzaie, and also the Koorum Valley, within the Cabool limits. The Barotees are the next tribe. They only number some 2,000 fighting men, and inhabit a valley of the same name about three miles from Kohat. This tribe used to employ their time in plundering and cattle lifting, but they have now turned their attention to agriculture. Next to the Barotees are the Sipahs, a small tribe famous for their courage and thieving propensities. They have a share in guarding the Kohat Khotal, and furnish their quota of guards for it. The Sipals have not more than 300 fighting men, but they are well armed, and have the reputation of being the best shots among these tribes, the whole of which are armed with rifles of Kohat manufacture, to which are fitted the flint locks of our old muskets, which have been purchased in thousands from our magazines. Next to the Singhs come the Oorukzaies, numbering some 27,000 fighting men. This tribe used to commit many depredations on our border, but some of their worst characters were seized and made examples of at one time, and they are now comparatively quiet.

The Wuzeerees are the next tribe of note. They are divided into three great sections, the Ahmedzaies, who are 11,000 strong; the Outmanzaies, 11,500, and the Mahsoods, 15,000, or 37,500 in all. They are so severally named from the three sons of the parent of the tribe, Wuzeer. Of these three sections not more than one-third are armed with muskets, the remainder carrying a sword and shield with, sometimes, a pistol and dagger. The two first sections are migratory, passing their lives in tents during the winter in the low country near the Koorum Valley, and during the summer in the Peerghul, Shozdar, and Koondaghur Hills. The Wuzeerees have become the most powerful and dreaded tribe on the frontier. They are proud of their numbers, of their conquests, and of their freedom, for they say that in no time past have they paid tribute to any ruler. They are tall, muscular, and courageous, and until 1856 they had boasted that they had seen Kings coming, and Kings going, but had never seen the King who had taken revenue from them. The Wuzeerees occupy a tract of country extending from the north-west border of the Kohat district to the Ghwalarah Pass in front of Tonk. In November, 1859, the Kabyl Kheyl clan of the Ootmanzaie branch cruelly murdered Captain Mecham, of the Bengal Artillery, and refused to give reparation for it. Consequently, in the following month, an expedition, under Brigadier-general Chamberlain, c.B., entered their The clan fought well, but were signally defeated with the loss of their encampments and property, besides a large quantity of sheep and cattle. They eventually gave up the murderers who were tried, convicted, and executed on the very spot where the murder was committed. The Mahsood branch of the tribe are the most daring and troublesome. Such were their depredations that in April, 1860, a force under Brigadiergeneral Chamberlain, c.B., was marched against them, advanced on their strongholds, and inflicted a great loss on them in cattle and crops. For a year, however, they held out, suffering an embargo on their trade before they would give in to our terms, but at length they opened negotiations with the civil authorities, and are now tolerablywell behaved neighbours.

The Ghuhur mountain, between Bunno and Tonk, is infested with a predatory tribe named Mitanees, who are perpetually at feud with the Wuzeerees. The Sheoranees inhabit the country next to the Wuzeerees. They number about 10,000 fighting men, and are celebrated for carrying off men and women, in addition to cattle, whom they never release without ransom. Previous to annexation they made themselves the terror of the border, but an expedition under the late Brigadier Hodgson, commanding the Punjab Irregular Force, and which in 1853 destroyed their strongholds, had a marked effect on the tranquillity of the border.

The Beloochee tribes tenant the hill ranges from Dera Futeh Khan to the south-west extremity of the Derajat and to the borders of Scinde. The Rev. Mr. Stamper then opened the ceremony maunds—the only kind capable of producing Goorchanees, Murrees, and Bhoogtees. The Kusranee tribe is the most northern of the Beloochees. They muster about 4,000 fighting men, and occupy the country between the Vehowa and Sunghur Passes. They are notorious thieves, and very troublesome. The Bozdars come next. They are the most powerful tribe in the neighbourhood, and number about 3,000 fighting men. In March, 1857, a force entered their hills by the Sunghur pass and drove them from their positions one by one, since which they have become quiet and submissive. South of the Bozdars come the Goorchanees, whose turbulence and love of plunder were at one time proverbial; of late years they have been tolerably quiet. They inhabit the border villages near Hurranah, a fortress constructed of burnt bricks, and said to have been built over a Grecian mound. The Goorchanees number about 2,000 fighting men. They have on several occasions been roughly handled, and many of their valuable mares captured by our troops. Below the Goorchanees are the Murree and Bhoogtee tribes of Beloochees, mustering some 5,000 fighting men. These tribes are now in the habit of making raids, but some of their best horsemen have taken service under Government, which tends more than any thing to keep them quiet, as they fully appreciate the advantages of pay and influence which connection with the British gives them. Besides these five tribes of Beloochees there are several others, amounting in all to some 30,000 men, extending along the frontier towards Sind; but these shove named are the last over which the troops of the Punjab Irregular Force have to keep watch. The Beloochees say themselves that they came from Aleppo. They boast of a small breed of horses which have all the traces of Arabs, and are evidently of Arab origin. The peculiarity of the Beloochee tribes is, that when they fight they dismount from their horses, saying that only cowards remain on horseback, and, resting their muskets on the pommels of their saddles, they fire from them in that way .- Friend of India.

MEMORIAL CHURCH AT CAWNFORE. - The foundation stone of the Memorial, or All Soul's Church, at Cawnpore, was laid on Thursday evening, July 17, at six o'clock, in the presence of a very large concourse of Europeans. It was significantly remarked that, with the exception of Sheopershaud, the commissariat contractor, and another Bengali, there was not a single na tive present. For once Asiatic curiosity suc-cumbed to a feeling of shame and remorse. Her Majesty's 46th regiment, a detachment of the Queen's bays and the artillery, formed three sides of a square, with the band of the 46th on the left front. The down train had the night previously brought a cargo of visitors from Agra, and a special train on Thursday morning the elite of the Allahabad community, a few from Lucknow having arrived during the day. Mr. Patten's spacious apartments were put into requisition, and tables laid from end to end, groaning under the weight of a really sumptuous and excellent supply of cold collation, with beer, wine, brandy, and sodawater, ready to the call. From eleven A.M. to half-past five P.M. not less than three hundred persons could have partaken of the good things here provided by the committee of management. It was between eating, drinking, and lounging here, and calling upon friends and visiting Mr. Dalziel's splendid establishment, that the time was passed till the hour for the ceremonial arrived. By six o'clock all were assembled at the site in Wheeler's entrenchment, where seats were provided more than enough to accommodate all. The weather was particularly auspicious. It had been cloudy and cool all day, and towards evening a gentle breeze sprung up. Not a drop of rain fell, though every moment threatened a fall. Precisely at six the Reverend Mr. Stamper, chaplain of Cawnpore, and the Reverend Mr. Cowley, chaplain of Allahabad, ascended the platform, while four other clergymen stood by the stone.

with a short, but appropriate prayer; Mr. Cowley followed by reading the 19th verse of the 2nd chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians. After which the 233rd hymn of the Calcutta Hymn Book was sung by the congregation, the band of her Majesty's 46th, in softened strains, forming a most excellent accompaniment; and we were here struck, more than in any other part of the ceremony, with the solemn grandeur of the occasion. This over, Mr. Thornhill, the commissioner, read aloud the following copy of the inscription to be deposited under the stone :- " To the Praise and Glory of the ever Blessed Trinity, God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, and in remembrance of many Christian Men, Women, and Children, who near this spot entered into their rest amid much suffering, the first stone of a church, to be called

ALL Soul's Church, Cawnpore, was laid by Brigadier Mark Kerr Atherley, in the presence of the chief civil and military servants of the State, and of many Christian residents of the station and its vicinity, with prayer to Almighty God for His blessing, on the seventeenth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, in the twenty-sixth year of the reign of her Majesty Queen Victoria." The Right Hon. James Earl of Elgin being Viceroy of India. George Frederick Edmonstone, Lieut.-Governor of the North-West Provinces. The Right Rev. George Edward Lynch Cotton, Bishop of Calcutta, and Metropolitan. The Rev. J. A. Stamper, Chaplain of Cawnpore. "Except the Lord build the house their labour is but lost that build it." The Lord shall speak peace unto his people: the Lord shall give his people the blessing of "We are come unto Mount Zion and peace." unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and Church of the First-born, which are written in Heaven, and to God, the Judge of all; and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel. Brigadier Mark Kerr Atherley then took up the silver trowel, and said, "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, one God blessed for ever, I lay this Foundation Stone of

ALL Souls' CHURCH, CAWNFORE, in faith and hope, and humble thankfulness, to be erected for the worship of Almighty God, according to the usage of the United Church of England and Ireland," and so saying, deposited the inscription in the recess made for it; after which the stone was gradually lowered to the foundation, and adjusted. The 118th Psalm (Confitemini Domino) was then chaunted by the congregation, accompanied by the soft, solemn music of the band. After which Mr. Stamper delivered the following prayer:- " Almighty God, our heavenly Father, who hast taught us not to sorrow as men without hope for them which sleep in Jesus: we yield Thee humble thanks for the faith and constancy of those who were here visited with sore afflictions, and died in Thy faith and fear: we bless Thee that Thou permittest us in peace and safety to offer our prayers and praises unto Thee; and we beseech Thee that in the church to be here erected and consecrated to Thy service, Thy holy name may be ever honoured by zealous pastors and faithful worshippers, through Jesus Christ, our Lord—Amen." And with another short prayer, and the usual collect, the ceremony The spectators then adjourned to the aforesaid refreshment-rooms, where they found a capital dinner laid out for them, and having partaken of this, by nine o'clock every visitor was on his way back to the station whence he had come .- Oudh Gazette.

THE INDIAN FLAX COMPANY .- In October. 1860, the company deputed to the Punjab their first agriculturist, Mr. J. Wightman, with a view to ascertain and report upon the capabilities of that country for the successful production of flax. On his arrival at Sealkote, this gentleman found a small quantity of acclimated seed-four or five

This was sown, and the produce was thirty-six maunds seeds, and twenty-two maunds fibre, which is now on its way home with three hundred and fifty bushels native seed, and twentyeight maunds of native fibre, as the result of the experiments of the first season. In the month of October the thirty-six maunds of seed were distributed to the zemindars of the Sealkote district, and during the present season Mr. Wightman purchased the produce at the average rate of one rupee for three maunds for flax straw, and five Rs. per maund for seed. This has produced on an average a return of about Rs. 40 per acre to such of the cultivators as took care and paid attention in the cultivation of it, and the farmers are now impressed with the conviction that the flax crop is far superior in comparison with the results of grain cultivation, and have evinced an anxiety to continue its cultivation on a large scale. To meet the deficiency of seed, the company have forwarded from Belfast a supply of Russian seed to the extent of one hundred and fifty barrels, and to secure its reaching in good condition, the consignment has been sent by the P. and O. Company's steamers to Alexandria, thence to Egypt and Suez. Two consignments have already arrived at Kurrachee, and the third is expected to arrive by the next mail steamer at Bombay. Mr. Wightman was directed to proceed to Bombay to receive charge, and see to its being transmitted safely to its destination at Sealkote. Two lots have been received by him. One lot is on its way up the Indus in the steamer Frere: the second is at Kurrachee, where it has to be dried before shipment; and the third consignment is expected to come to hand in a few days. Mr. Wightman desires to acknowledge his obligations to the Custom's authorities at Bombay, and at this place for the facilities afforded him in the trans-shipment of the seed. company are very sanguine of success in their operations on receipt of this large accession to their stock of seed. The climate and the soil are also well adapted for the production of this very useful fibre; they have also had tanks made at Sealkote, where they can steep any quantity of flax, and are now engaged in the erection of flax machinery, imported from Messrs. MacAdam and Co., Belfast, which, when completed, will be worked by oxen. It is of the most simple and, at the same time, of the most effective de-The l'unjab Government, we are happy to record, are giving every encouragement to the successful carrying out of the company's interests, thus aiding in the development of the resources of that rich and fertile province Scindian.

NOT SO BAD AS WE SEEM .- The Indian Miror has a letter from one of the two Hindoo vouths who have gone to England to study for the Civil Service examinations. The writer expected to find England as bare of vegetation as Arabia. Remarking the brutality and corrupt conduct of the native porters on Indian railways, he was delighted with the good manners of English servants who did not bother him for "buxis." will soon discover the secret law which underlies English society on this subject. He is delighted, too, with the politeness of the policemen, and prays that Calcutta may have such omnibuses, cabs, and fare regulations as London enjoys. He forgets that the free-trade sensibilities of legislators, like the late representative of Madras. would be shocked. He complains bitterly of the cold in June, but the season has been the coldest in England for forty years. He eulogises the English because he thinks "they consider dark-He eulogises the ness of complexion a passport to respect," but will probably discover that the cause of this respect is a combination of pity and a love for

 A correspondent of the Mofussilite says the cantonment of Morar is not to be abandoned any more than that of Dum-Dum. The writer recommends Sepree, which is sixty miles off, as a better station for Europeans. But, apart from the expense of moving, there are political reasons why our barracks should be in sight of Gwalior. Cholera has ceased in Morar and Poshawur.

Customs Revenue, N.W.P.—The Report of the internal customs department of the North-Western Provinces and Punjab for the year which expired on 30th April last, shows an income of 1073 lakbs of rupees, or 18 above last year. Including a duty on cotton the revenue in 1843-4 was only 484 lakhs. Of the 1073 lakhs 94 1-3rd are due to salt and 12 2-3rds to sugar. The Lieutenant-Governor has recommended the increase of Mr. Wigram Money's salary to the former level of the appointment-Rs. 36,000 a year. At Rs. 3 per maund, the present rate of duty, and the accepted annual average of 12 lbs. per head, the ordinary day labourer does not spend more than 1½ per cent. of his earnings in CHANGE OF DESIGNATION .- The Calcutta Gazette notifies that in future those districts, brigades, or field forces in which the command is exercised in direct subordination to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and independently of the divisional authorities, will be uniformly designated "districts," and those which are subordinate to the divisions, "brigades." The Rohilcund field force and the Gwalior and Saugor districts will henceforward be designated the Robilcund and Gwalior and Saugor districts, and the Agra and Muttra and Sind Saugor districts the Agra and Rawul Pindee brigades, respectively.

MILITARY SCANDALS.—An officer in high command, a member of one of the many committees now sitting, forgetful of the privileged character of a private conversation, is likely to bring one of the most estimable officers in the Bengal army into trouble. We trust the Commander in-Chief will show his magnanimity, his sense of fairness and his contempt for meanness by refusing to be influenced by the officer's report to him of remarks made at a club table, though they are not flattering to himself. The case is similar to that which resulted from the 4th Dragoon Guards court-martial in England. Lieut. Rintoul dropped some loose expressions after dinner in another officer's room, and the conversation was reported to the Duke of Cambridge, but he declined to take action on information obtained in so disreputable a manner. We have ascertained the truth of the recent disgraceful occurrences at Dinapore and are glad to be spared the necessity of exposing the guilty party, by his resignation of office.

PORT BLAIR, July 15 .- An event lately occurred here which caused much anxiety. Certain Burmese life convicts transferred from the Allipore jail, after long imprisonment there, and behaving well for over one year here, were allowed to become cultivators on their own account. Of these five deserted, followed next day by three more from Chatham Island and five Burmese and Chinese from Viper Island. They had with them three small canoes, and their object must have been to take advantage of the extremely fine weather and get across to Burmah, or to coast along these islands, north to Bassein, or south to the Nicobars. Within two hours of the time the intelligence reached the separintendent the Lady Canning was steaming out to sea, and one armed launch cailing up the coast to the north, and the other to the south. Information which subsequently reached the superintendent led to the belief that the runaways were still in the har-bour, and the whole of the provisions of one party, their clothes, and the boats they had taken, together with one men wounded by the Andamanese, were captured two days after the escape, the party having been robbed of its iron tools by the natives. A day or two later the boat of the other party was detected, endeavouring to proceed north, and one of the runaways, a Chinaman, surrendered. Seven others gave themselves up about the same time in another place, and finally the remaining four were captured, endeavouring to make their way north on a raft, by the Malays employed by a Chinese bird's nest contractor. They had got as far as the Middle Straits, and represented themselves as shipwrecked lascars. I understand that the original plan had been to build a large boat on the west coast, and then make their way to Bassein. The recapture of the whole of this party is a very fortunate event, for if they had been successful it would have been debt, what recompense is there to us?

difficult to retain the other Burmese prisoners here. The hospital commenced by Dr. Walker on Ross Island, and a number of temporary buildings which the Superintendent had determined to replace by more substantial ones, have been blown down by the heavy gales which have lately visited the settlement.—Englishman.

JAULNAH, July 26.—The high price of grain has caused many of the poorer classes to resort to looting as a means of subsistence, and constant reports are being brought in of raids on surrounding villages. Last week a place called Peepulgaon, about fourteen miles from this on the Secunderabad road, was attacked by a band of men, who looted it, killing two and wounding three of the inhabitants. Of course under the paternal government of the Nizam no redress for the sufferers and no punishment for the ruffians is to be expected. The rumour gains ground that Jaulnah is to be done away with as a military station, or rather that in the stead of the present force a small detachment of the Contingent are to garrison it. The advisability of the measure (considering the present temper of the Nizam) is very doubtful; if carried out, it will cause the ruin of many here. So to avert the threatened calamity, a petition, signed by all the respectable and well-to do natives in the place, has been sent both to the Supreme and the Madras Government. Much is being done with regard to improving the communication between this part of the country and Bombay. A new road is in course of construction from Aurungabad to Nundgaon (about fifty-two miles) where it meets the train: the road also from the former place to Toka, on the banks of the Godavery, which formerly was quite impassable during the rains for any wheeled conveyance, has been bridged, metalled, and gravelled. Were this good work carried on further inland it would be of incalculable advantage. It, however, seems a mistake to make roads in patches; for instance, one can now proceed at any season of the year, with the greatest ease from Aurungabad to Bombay, either by the Nundgaon route or by Poonah. These new roads are a great boon to the country through which they pass, but to the exporter inland they are scarcely of any service. What does it avail him to know that after reaching Aurungabad his cart can travel without let or hindrance, if it be impossible for them to get so far? I understand that very little advantage has hitherto been taken of the rail in sending cotton to the coast. This is attributable to the unfinished state of the Bhore and Hurt ghats; but when these noble works are completed, and when the rail is laid down to Comrawatee, the time-honoured hackery and the long-strings of Brinjara bullocks will be but reminiscences of the past in this part of the world.—Englishman.

TEA IN ARRACAN.-Tea seems to be cultivated in Arracan also. A correspondent of the Englishman says, " McMillan's tea plantation is getting on first-rate, and we shall drink this year Akyab tea. I will send you a sample; it is a superior stuff to the Assam, and I wonder that a company is not formed in Calcutta to establish a large tea plantation in Arracan, where a grant of land could be had of Government, and labour to any amount imported from Chittagong.'

CACHAR, July 25 .- If you would bring to the public notice the real position of the tea planter and his imported labour, you would confer a great favour on the planting community of this small, yet important, province. To make a long story short then, the imported labourers, who cost from Rs. 27 to 35 per head to land in the province, are no more compelled to serve us than are those who never signed any document to that effect. For instance-if a coolie runs away, which, I am sorry to say, is an hourly occurrence throughout Cachar, and when caught and brought before the authorities in the zillah Silchar, he is asked why he ran away, his invariable answer is, "I want to go to my home!" "Will you go back to your work?" 'No." He is then ordered to jail for one month, at the expiration of which time he is set free, and unless his employer has a writ ready to present to him when he comes out of jail, he can, and does, go wherever he likes. If he is seized for

THE MAHARAJAH OF PUTTIALLA.—The English-on recently brought a charge of treasonable language against the Maharajah of Puttialla which seemed so grave and improbable that we urged the Punjab Government to inquire into it. Sir R. Montgomery has done so, and the Maharajah accordingly denies he ever said or thought such things as were ascribed to him. The Maharajah, in the Mutiny, in his correspondence with Mr. Barnes and Sir J. Lawrence, which was really the foundation of Lord Canning's native policy, and in the Legislature, has been an example to all our feudatories.

IMDIGO.—The prospects of the indigo crop in some of the districts of Bengal, where the manufacture is late, have improved, and Tirhoot is expected to yield a bumper season. The Benares districts, however, have suffered much from the rain, and will not show so well as last year. Accounts from the Doab are satisfactory.

THE DINAPORE BUSINESS has ended in Brigadier Burney sending in his papers to resign the service. Colonel Pott is talked of as his successor. Colonel Pott is well known as a determined man, and not afraid of responsibility. The Commander-in-Chief and Government were, we (Delhi Gazette) understand, much pleased with the way he dealt with a sepoy of his regiment who attempted to re-awaken the old spirit of mutiny. A better selection could not be made.

GWALIOR, July 15.—The country about here is in a very unsettled state. The Bhoondala rebels made an inroad in the neighbourhood of Garuspore the other day, in some force, and the authorities immediately sent an application for troops. These people are keeping the whole country on the qui vive, and detachments of troops innumerable have been sent out to check them, but somehow they never get caught. The Goomapore people, too, have been plundering the village of Khoolasah, in Central India, with the usual results—fire and desolation. They were considerate enough not to kill any of the villagers this time, but they have wounded several severely.

COURTS MARTIAL. - We (Friend of India) lately recorded the finding of a court martial, in which a sepoy guilty of mutinous language was hardly punished at all. Two more of a similar character appear in General Orders. In one the native members of the Court first of all bring in a verdict of "not guilty" on a sepoy of the 20th P.N.I., who last February remained a passive spectator of an affray between several Pathan soldiers of his own regiment, and some Muzbee soldiers of the 32nd native infantry, instead of using his authority, as an officer, to restore order. Subsequently they passed a sentence of suspension for four months, and recommend the man to mercy because he refrained from interfering "from a sense of bodily fear." A brave soldier, truly! Sir Hugh Rose merely declares this sentence is inadequate. "A native officer who has so imperfect an idea of the duties of his position, as calmly to witness a serious affray between soldiers without making an effort to put a stop to it, is unworthy of that position, and the Court ought to have dismissed the Jamadar." In the other case a Naick of the same corps used highly irritating language to Meah Sing, sepoy of the 32nd (Punjab) regiment native infantry, by styling him a "sweeper," and intimating that many others of that regiment were also sweepers, who did the work of coolies. At first he was also found not guilty, but subsequently was sentenced to be reduced to the rank of a sepoy. The Commander-in-Chief directed his summary dismissal, and passed a most insufficient order. Does Sir H. Rose want to tempt another sepoy mutiny?

Mr. George Dickson.—At a meeting lately, the shareholders of the Bank of Bengal adopted a resolution of the directors, in which they ask he acceptance, by Mr. George Dickson, the secretary and treasurer, of 1,500 guineas. The terms of the resolution are as honourable to the directors and shareholders as they must be gratifying to Mr. Dickson, who has not only established new branches and made new arrangements with the Treasury with singular wisdom, but has proved of no little service to Government in recent financial changes and currency reforms.

Ensien Machinite.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has found it necessary to remove from his appointment as Barrack Master, Fort William, Ensign R. Macniminie, of the unattached list, in consequence, as we understand, of inefficiency and repeated complaints. This is the officer who was promoted from the ranks in consequence of his ready and gallant conduct when the 5th European regiment mutinied at Dinapore in 1859, and attempted to seize the guns of the battery to which Sergeant Macniminie was attached, but were foiled by his promptitude and presence of mind. His Excellency has tempered the severity of his visitation by giving the removed officer the choice of any station to which he may wish to proceed and do general duty; until, as we hope, some employment may be found for him more suitable than that from which it has now been found necessary to depose him.

RANEEGUNGE, August 6 .- The usual serenity of this station was disturbed out of "the even tenor of its ways" at the inconvenient hour of 1.45 A.M., by the explosion of the powder magazine containing many thousands of pounds of powder, live shells, and the like dangerous customers. The magazine had been struck by lightning, and some stray ammunition was still going off. I to give you but one-tenth part of the most miraculous escapes everyone seems to have had. a ream of foolscap would be about the mark for it. Strong men and strong-minded females were removed bodily from their beds (about 150 yards from the magazine) and deposited with violence on their backs at the other end of the room. One British soldier was removed some twenty yards off into a skittle alley, and there slept till morning nothing on his mind, I should think. Live shells were embedded under the very steps of the barrack-room. The scene of devastation that was presented to the eye this morning must have been seen to be appreciated. No one was hurt, though all were frightened; and the amount of repairs for the P. W. D. is extensive, for many of the ranges of barracks are rent from top to bottom.

STAMP RECEIPTS .- The Bombay Government has recently referred to the Governor-general on a point of considerable interest to holders of appointments in Government offices, namely, as to whether a stamp is required under the terms of the Act to be affixed to their receipts for their monthly salaries. The question was referred to the Advocate General, who ruled that a receipt given by an employe of Government to Government was in no respect different from that given in an ordinary transaction, and clearly needed a stamp. Concurring in this view, the Governorgeneral has accordingly ruled that in future every employe whose monthly salary exceeds twenty rupees shall pay one anna for receiving it. The necessity of a similar course, in the case of a receipt given by the head of the office, however, to the Bank of Bengal, for the total amount of the pay abstract was open to some doubt, inasmuch as he acts on the part of Government. The Governor general, however, held that, to avoid confusion, it was better that no further exceptions should be made than those specified in the Act and accordingly desired that the practice may be adopted.

THE BENGAL CIVIL FUND .- The managers of the Bengal Civil Fund, headed by the Hon. Mr. Beadon, were defeated in their attempts at a meeting on the 31st July to saddle the unmarried men of the service with a larger proportion of subscription to the fund for widows and orphans than they have hitherto been in the habit of paying. The letter of Mr. Aitchison, the champion of the bachelors, was too lucid and convincing to he set asidc. Without entering on the merits of the dispute, it certainly seems to us ill-judged of the managers to-day to ask Sir C. Wood to guarantee the civil fund, and to-morrow to attempt to reduce the subscriptions to it without consulting a professional actuary. Had the managers carried their point the few unmarried ladies in India would have blessed them, for the only revenge the bachelors could have taken would have been at once to marry.

THE NEW RUPEES .- The first revolution of the obliterating roller is about to be made over another of the traces of poor John Company. John's "rupees," famous the world over, and which the old Bahadoor used to dispense with so much liberality and good will, are about to disappear; as from this month (August) all the coins struck in the Calcutta Mint will bear on the reverse side the device, "Government of India." and the familiar "East India Company" will be seen no more. It is probable that this change will be hampered by an inconvenience which will render its operation slower and less obvious than is to be desired. We believe that all the rupees heretofore made in the Mint have been struck with dies bearing dates some ten years prior to the day of coining; because it is the practice of the natives to collect and hoard the newest Company's rupees which they could procure, but by this manœuvre they were to some degree foiled. This ruse it will be impossible to adopt with the "Government of India" rupees, and the probability, consequently, is, that for some time to come they will be engulphed and disappear almost as quickly as they can be made.—Englishman.
THE UNION CLUB DEFUNCT.—The native papers

record the extinction of the Union Club, which was established in Calcutta to promote friendly intercourse between natives and Europeans. There seem to have been some twenty English and thirty native members, but ham was tabooed for one class and greasy fish curry for another, and so an attempt to unite oil and water failed, as was to be expected. So long as caste rules the Hindoo, institutions like the Bethune Society, where the only feast is that of reason, are alone calculated to effect the desirable object of a union of classes. One mourner ascribes the death of the club to the fact that "we have in this country those very elements in active operation which in Austrian Italy keeps the Italian audience in a theatre perfectly distinct from the Austrian." One month's independence of a foreign rule would be to the Bengalees at once a novelty and their ruin. But this is Bengali "patriotism" and gratitude.

DEATH OF BABOO RAMAPROSAUD ROY .- The Friend of India regrets to record the death of Baboo Ramaprosaud Roy, member of the Bengal Legislalive Council. He was the youngest son of the celebrated Rammohun Roy, and held successively the office of Legal Remembrancer of the Sudder Court, First Government Pleader, and Member of the Bengal Council. He had a high reputation for learning, and, had he lived, would probably have been a judge of the High Court of Bengal. From the fact of his father having visited and died in England, his family were outcast, and a great career as a reformer was open to Ramaprosaud. But, not long before his death, by large payments he induced the Brahmins to re-admit him to caste, and so he and Baboo Prosonno Coomar Tagore, who might have been the regenerators of the Bengalis, purchased orthodoxy, and became the victims of the Bengalis' failingwant of moral courage. Baboo Ramaprosaud Roy has left a very large fortune made at the bar. It is reputed to exceed that of the late Mr. Ritchie. Advocate-general.

Assistant Surgeons .- The Delhi Gazette publishes an order by Dr. Gibson, Director-General of the Army Medical Department, to the effect that " the number of assistant surgeons who have undergone the necessary examination, and been reported fit for promotion being sufficient, not only to fill the average vacancies in the ranks of surgeons for a considerable period in time of peace, but also to meet any augmentation that the demands of war may require, and the object of the examination being to ascertain that previous to promotion the assistant surgeons have kept pace with the progress of medical science, so many only will in future be examined annually, as will maintain the present number on the passed' list. Those assistant surgeons, however, who entered the service in 1854, and who have not passed, will send in on the 31st March of each year a notification that they are prepared for the examination whenever they may be called upon to undergo it."

THE BENGAL PHOTOGRAPHIC SOCIETY have agreed to present the album of one hundred Indian photographs, which was being prepared for the late Countess Canning, and subsequently for Earl Canning, to the Marchioness of Waterford, Lady Canning's sister.

Major Bagor.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has refused to sanction the admission into the Bengal Staff Corps of Major Bagot, late commanding the Nusseeree battalion on account of the circumstances connected with the equivocal, if not mutinous, conduct of that regiment at Jutog and Simlah in the year 1857, immediately after the great mutiny broke out in the plains, of which circumstances Major Bagot's explanations did not satisfy his Excellency.

REMOVAL OF TROOPS.—The Supreme Government, after consulting his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and taking his opinion on the matter, have ruled that for the future troops should not be removed from any fort without their withdrawal having been previously made the subject of a communication with the local government within whose jurisdiction the stronghold may be situated. The reason of this judicious order is obvious, as, although of course the Su preme Government and his Excellency are paramount, it is nevertheless advisable that the local governments should at all times know the extent of their military strength and resources, and be made acquainted with any intended increase or diminution of them.

Rangoon, July 30.-The murderers of Lieut Halhed have, it is said, been apprehended and sent up to the capital for punishment, together with the governor of the frontier district, under whose auspices they entered our territory. The punishment which will be inflicted will, of course, be very inadequate. The King's religious scruples will not permit him to condemn anyone to death, and the probability is that the miscreants will be sent up to some district in the North where we cannot gain any intelligence about them. Colonel Phayre goes up to Mandalay in September, and it is said that he will proceed in as undignified a manner as he did before, i.e., he will go in a steamer to our frontier, and from thence crawl up without an escort to the golden feet, in indifferent boats provided by the governors of the districts through which he may pass. If such be the case he can hardly be going with the intention of demanding reparation for injuries-nor can he expect to secure a treaty or freedom for trade; indeed, it is difficult to imagine what beneficial result can be expected from a visit paid under such circum-The intercourse between Northern stances. China and Upper Burmah is now becoming freer than it was, which is a sign that the rebellion which was raging in Yunan is becoming feebler. By the King's steamer which arrived a few days ago from the capital, two novel importations were introduced. They were some Tartars from Independent Tartary, and a large quantity of opium of fine quality manufactured in the North of China and brought down here because there was no outlet for it to the Eastern provinces of the Chinese Empire, on account of the disturbances which are raging there. This is an astounding fact, and may, perhaps, make the Indian Government not very anxious to improve our communication with Yunan. A faux pas of the deputy-commissioner of Tongpoo has lately furnished a stock subject of gossip to people down here. Col. O'Grady, the brigadier commanding at Tonghoo, caught a couple of natives riding furiously through can-bring a suit in the civil court before the deputy commissioner of Tonghoo " for payment of Rs. 800, damages for defamation of character, for having falsely imprisoned the plaintiffs and flogged them publicly." The deputy commissioner entertained the suit and gave judgment for plaintiffs in the sum of Rs. 50 each. The brigadier was clearly acting in his judicial capacity and exercising those powers which are given by the last articles of war to commanding officers of stations and regiments, to punish even civilians for breaches of cantonment regulations; and though the punishment awarded by him may have been excessive, the mere fact of his having jurisdiction to entertain the case was a clear bar to the entertainment of a suit against him in the civil court for having punished the men. Another remote station also has furnished its quota of news during the last week; a little military revolution has taken place at Shwegyeen, the consequences of which, however, are likely to be more amusing than serious. The station is occupied by a detachment of the " Pegu Sapper Battalion," a Madras corps raised for special service in Burmah. The European officer in charge of the detachment having left the place, the command devolved upon a native duffadar. This poor duffadar, either from the weight of responsibility thrown upon him, or from a too free use of drugs, or alcohol, or some other cause, lost his head, and showed such unmistakeable signs of aberration of intellect that the three European officers at the station, viz., the Assistant Commissioner, the Civil Surgeon, and the Superintendent of Police, considered it necessary to depose him from his command and put the next senior duffadar in his place. To such supercession, however, the mad duffadar strongly objected, and in order to display his sanity turned out his men with fixed bayonets and loaded muskets, and quickly ordered the trio of Europeans into confinement. Resistance of course was impossible, and these three gentlemen were kept for a whole day in the guard-room of the regiment. The se-poys of the detachment then appear to have thought that matters had been carried quite far enough and released them. Colonel Blake, the commandant of the regiment, has hurried up from Maulmain, and a detachment of the 2nd M. N. I., has been sent down from Tonghoo. This little affair will probably result in the immediate disbandment of the corps, which is already under orders for gradual extinction by not entertaining any more recruits. It was raised some years ago in Madras, for special service in Pegu, to replace a regular regiment, and as the men were not to have pensions, it was supposed to be an economical measure; but as the men are provided with free passages for their families to Madras and back whenever they are sick, it has been found to be actually more expensive than a regiment of the line.-Englishman.

flogged. They were then advised by some one to

SNAKES AND DRUGS .- The July number of the Madras Quarterly Journal contains a valuable article on the Snakes of the Presidency, by Captain R. H. Beddome, who took a collection of 200 species to England. Mr. Bidie, writing on Indian substitutes for European medicines, says, "besides her indigenous drugs India is capable of producing many valuable remedies, natives of other countries. Indeed, at present Madras is independent of England for supplies of Hyoscyamus, Taraxacum, Digitalis and Belladonna, and there is no reason why we should not cultivate many other medicinal plants. Jalep, Ipecacuanha, Conium, &c., have been introduced and found to grow remarkably well; but their cultivation has never, strange to say, extended beyond an experiment. There are also in India many indigenous plants, producing medicines, which are imported at present from other countries, such as the Cissampelos Pareira and Cucumis colocynthis."

THE RAJAH OF MYSORE.-We see from the Madras Times that the Rajah of Mysore has given a series of races and entertainments, fola couple of natives riding furiously through can-lowed by a review, to the European residents. On tonments, for which he had them arrested and the 14th of July the dinner in the palace was conducted with every consideration for English wants and appetites. The Rajah himself did not sit down, but looked on occasionally from behind a curtain. After dinner the health of the Queen and of the Rajah was drunk, a display of fireworks took place, the ladies went in to see her Highness the Rance, and Mr. Hillier's performance with elephants and horses in the circus closed the entertainments. The Prince of Wales Cup, a vase of pure gold two feet high, surmounted by an effigy of the Prince on horseback with a curious representation of an English hat on his head, the whole the work of a native artist, was the great race prize.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PARSEES.-Ignorant of their own sacred books and past history, the Parsees of Bombay always consult Dr. Haug as their Pope, in such purely ceremonial questions as that of wearing shoes and eating with other religionists. Hitherto the Parsees have always associated more freely with Hindoos and other idolaters than with Europeans. But now Dr. Haug tells them,-" It is not specifically mentioned in any of the books of Zoroaster that his followers are not to eat with those who do not profess his religion. In one place it is only said that Zoroastrians are not to do anything with idolaters. In the Zend-Avesta Hindoos are called idolaters; but they are at liberty to eat with Mahomedans, Jews, Christians. and all who worship the true God." Like Indian Mussulmans, so corrupting is the influence of idolatry, that the Parsees have sunk to its level from the purer monotheistic faith of Zarathustra Spitama.

Wood for Sleepens .- The attention of the Bombay Government has been called by the Home authorities to the "Jarrah" tree of Western Australia-the Eucalyptus -as admirably adapted for railways and all work in the tropics and on the sea coast. Neither the white ant nor the sea worm will touch it, and it suffers very little from exposure to the sun or atmo sphere. It can be delivered in India or the Mauritius in picked logs, or in bulk, provided quantity of not less than two hundred loads is purchased at one time, for less than 4s. s cubic foot, and if arrangements were made for a larger quantity it might be delivered for 3s. 6d. a foot, or less. The chief expense incurred in obtaining this timber is the cost of transport to the place where it is to be used. The consulting engineer of the Madras Railway says, "the wood is well spoken of by our engineers." The trial has not yet been long enough to enable the qualities of the wood to be thoroughly tested on the Madras railway; but the engineer says, in January, that those placed on the road in July are in good condition, and form an excellent substitute for teak in girder bridges. The wood and utterly failed to resist the Hooghly worm and white ant. Captain Pearson, superintendent of the Central India forests, in his last report draws the attention of Government to some eight or ten little known woods as well fitted for "sleepers.

THE MAURITIUS.—To the loss of India, the population of the Mauritius has increased more than 100,000 in the last twelve years, and is now 310,050, of whom 225,000 are Indians, and of these only 50,000 were born in the colony; 84,380 are employed on the sugar estates. In the capital there are more than 2,000 Chinese traders.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, July 26.—As regards the rebels, everything is quiet at present. No traces of them have been seen in the neighbourhood of Shanghai for the last few weeks. Their absence may be accounted for by the hot weather, but it is more likely that the pressure upon Nanking has caused the recall of all the rebel forces that could be spared. The feeling against the rebels in Hong Kong is sufficient to decide public opinion against them, on the whole; but it cannot be denied that they persist in maintaining a claim to our sympathy by not molesting foreigners who tra-vel in their territory. At Shanghai the panic feeling has been fostered by young residents who speculated in land and sold at high rates to terrified Chinese, who looked upon the place as a sure city of refuge from every danger. The amount of Chinese capital in that city at present is very large; and a class of Europeans, chiefly young men who have no money of their own, are entrusted with dollars to invest on Chinese account in shares of steamers, silk speculations, and so on; and as the Chinese in Shanghai are quite carried away with respect for the power of foreigners and gratitude for their services, they are found surprisingly ready to furnish the money for all sorts of purposes. The consequence of all this is, that mushroom firms are doing an extensive trade, to the utter astonishment of those who do not know the source whence their capital is drawn. By those men the Admiral's policy is loudly upheld. The older houses look upon the present state of affairs with considerable doubt; they have not yet forgiven the unwonted state of subordination into which they were thrown by the establishment of a foreign Customs inspectorate; and there were not wanting hopes that the rebels might have been more easily dealt with than the present men. The impossibility, however, of openly stating their feelings in the circumstances, gave an appearance of acquiescence on their part to the turn affairs had been made to take, and as no course but approval was open to them, they adopted that course with as much display of earnestness as possible; but those who know best say that the large houses are not the warmest friends of the present policy.

It is needless to say that the Imperial authorities view our present attitude with unmixed satisfaction. The six gunboats under Captain Osborn's command, which are coming out here under the title of revenue cutters in the Imperial service, but destined immediately for the operation against the rebels in the Yangtsze, will form a sort of counterpoise to Ward's regiment, which might probably become troublesome in course of time without such a check. It is well that men of honour and good reputation should enter the Imperial service if foreigners are to enter it at all: otherwise the service would soon become crowded with filibusters. The example such men will show in the capacity of mandarins doing their duty without squeezing will not be lost upon the Chinese. The only fear is, that these foreign mandarins will comply with the customs of the country, and squeeze on their own account, so that, for the next half century, China will be a second India to the bold, penniless adventurer.

At Pekin, and in China generally, matters are much as they were when we last wrote. Cholera was tried in the Calcutta Government dockyard is said to prevail at Taku.

The gist of the rumours from Japan is that a ection of the Damios have determined to set at defiance any little remnant of authority that the Tycoon may possess over them; they decline to give any further attendance at Yeddo, and have quitted the capital without leaving the usual hostages; they mean to remain in revolt until foreigners are shut out of the country. The next rumour is that parties of discontented retainers have quitted their masters and banded themselves together for irregular purposes. Prince of Satsuma is said to be preparing for the worst: he is disaffected towards foreigners. Mikado is alleged to have summoned the Tycoon before him, or rather to have called upon him to pay the usual visits required by the constitution of the country, but which had not been insisted on for some time; the Tycoon is at a loss what to do or to think. The French Minister has been assured that the persons of foreigners are in no danger, and it seems as if matters in this instance would come to an issue among the Japanese nobles themselves. By later advices from Yokuhama, received per Fiery Cross, we learn that another attack was made upon the British Legation on the night of June 25-26. During the night, when the members of the legation were in bed. Colonel Neale heard a cry of pain from one of the marines who kept guard outside. He assembled the inmates of the house into one room, lest the assassins might prove too numerous to sally out upon. It proved, however, on investigation, that there was only one assassin; he was killed, but not until he had mortally wounded with a spear a corporal and a private of marines from the Renard, who were on guard that evening. The spear used by the Japanese assassin proves to be the same as those belonging to the Japanese guard furnished to our minister by the authorities. There is every reason to believe that the affair was only a private adventure on the part of the man who attempted the deed. Two extracts from the Japan Express serve to show the state of feeling prevailing among the upper classes in Japan at present. It is to be feared that a crisis is at hand. Business at Yokuhama is nearly at a standstill: scarcely any produce in the market. The Japanese are unwilling to enter into business engagements unless money is advanced. They seem to think that a crisis is at hand. There are fewer Japanese stirring abroad in the foreign settlements than usual. Everything indicates that there will be some extraordinary development ere long. There has been an unusual movement throughout Japan. Miako and its vicinity has a large collection of Damios and troops. Well-informed Japanese seem to understand the nature of the movement, but are cautious in their communications to foreigners. We are informed that the conference with the Mikado resulted in the determination to send a deputation to Yeddo, to hold a convention of the Damios, and determine the great questions to be discussed, by vote. The Mikado (who cannot personally attend, as it would be derogatory to his high station) has deputed as his envoy Ohora-Sa-mond Dona or Dheng (which is the highest title conferred by the Mikado). This dignitary passed through Kanagawa on the 2nd July, on his way to the Court of the Tycoon, between the hours of ten and twelve A.K., with thirty companions, all men of rank—the retinue in command of Shi ma-tue La-bur-so Sa-me, of the third military rank, the entire cortege consisting of some 200 men. The Ohara-Samong is the "Kerai," an officer of the Mikado's household. and is commissioned by the Mikado to preside at the convention or conference at Yeddo. He is. for the time being, of more consideration than the Tycoon himself. They say that the Tycoon and all the nobility at Yeddo must do him homage, although he is one of the humblest of the Mikado's servants. He has been selected on account of his great wisdom and intellectual acquirements. The Government states that this conference is held for the purpose of arranging some points of family etiquetto regarding the Mikado's sister, who was lately married to the Tycoon. This, however, is denied by well-informed Japanese, who say that the conference relates to the foreign relations of the empire, and that the questions to be determined are of the highest import to the foreign population in Japan. We have been told the precise objects of this conference, which we withhold for the present, as no good can arise from its publicity. The public mind is quite alive to the importance of the coming events. One thing is certain, that the Ministers of the Treaty Powers will be the last to learn the character of these extraordinary movements. In Yeddo they can learn nothing of the doings outside of their temple walls. In connection with this conference there passed through Kanagawa on Thursday, July 3, the old Prince of Satsuma (the father of the powerful Prince of that name, who has no partiality for foreigners), on his way to Yeddo. It is said, and generally believed by the Japanese, that he has a large body of Ronans, or enthusiastic patriots in his train. His retinue consisted of several hundreds of his own followers, besides a large number of Ronans, alias patriots. The precise object of taking these Ronans under the protection of the Prince of Satsuma can only be surmised-perhaps to intimidate vacillating Damios. It is a proverb in Japan, "When the Prince of Satsuma sleeps, Japan is safe." By the bye, inquiring how it was that there are two Princes of Satsuma, we learned that the elder prince voluntarily resigned his titles to his son a number of years since, retiring himself from public life, which is not an unusual thing in Japan. On the present occasion he represents his son at the conference. We have just learned that there are placards posted in conspicuous places in Yeddo, stating that Ohara Sa-mong, the Mikado's Viceroy, publicly says that in his opinion the nation has degenerated to a deplorable extent, within the last fifty years. In a public admonition he cautioned all, both lay and official, to bestir themselves, and to endeavour to think and act as they used in former times. He says the Tycoon must repair periodically to Miako, and that power and dignity will be conferred on him in proportion to his fidelity and obedience to the Mikado. Anonymous papers are being freely circulated in Yeddo, unfavourable to foreigners, particularly opposing their residence in Yeddo. Satsuma and Hosokawa clamour against the building of legations on Goteng Sama, in Yeddo. The Damios who have palaces in the vicinity are very much annoyed, and demand that the buildings for the legations be removed. Goteng Sama is one of the most commanding positions about Yeddo, and no doubt is looked upon as a dangerous point in the hands of foreigners, particularly as he English Minister considers it necessary for his safety to turn the legation into a garrigon."

With reference to the attack on the legation, it is noticeable that all the ministers resident in Yeddo have determined to remain there. The French minister, who was about to leave the capital for a short time, changed his intention as soon as he heard of the attack; and the American minister has written a letter explaining that he went to Yokuhama to celebrate the 4th of July with the consul there, and means to return immediately.

At Nagasaki two Japanese policemen have been killed by a couple of drunken French sailors whom they were authorised to take into custody. The men will be duly tried for this crime. Punch has been started at Yokuhama, and its artist has been assaulted by one of the gentlemen caricatured. The latter was fined by the consul for the assault. Mr. Vyse assured the artist that the community there were much too thin-skinned to bear such a publication.

In Hong Kong matters are in their usual way. The opium swindle has reached a first stage in the sentence to imprisonment for eight years of W. K. Stanford, who signed the fictitious receipts. The charge brought against him was theft of opium committed to his charge. There seems less prospect than ever of bringing home a criminal charge against Rustomjee, and it is to be regretted that no revelations have been made by Stanford; he pleaded guilty to the charges against himself .- Overland China Mail.

Regimental Reports.

CIRCULAR, No. 3,200.

Adjt. Gea.'s Office, Head Grs., Simla, June 30.—
Sir,—The C. in C., considering that the confidential reports of the periodical inspection of regts. should contain the most ample and minute particulars, not only regarding the drill, discipline, and interior economy of the corps, but also in respect to the professional capacity and knowledge of each individual officer, particularly of the officer comdg.; and the adjt. has directed me to annex copy of a G.O. on this subject issued to H.M.'s British forces in 1860, and to request that more complete information on these essential points may be afforded in future, with a view to the qualifications of all European officers being brought under the notice of His Excellency.

In furtherance of this object, Sir Hugh Rose desires that all officers commanding corps of cavalry and infantry may be directed to assemble their officers once a week, when practicable, and examine them in the drill instruction and duties which belong to their respective arms; and I am to beg that it may be pointed out to commanders that, unless instruction be imparted in the manner indicated, the interests of those under their authority are likely to suffer very materially when examined by reviewing officers whose duty it is to report at their half-yearly inspections on the merits or demerits of each, individually and by name, particularly as regards their knowledge of company, battalion, and light infantry movements, and of outpost duties, and also on their sequaintance with the Articles of War.

I am to add that, in the event of any officer giving proof of marked inefficiency, and of even being obviously unlikely to qualify himself for the perform-proof of marked inefficiency, and of even being obviously unlikely to qualify himself for the performance of his duties with advantage to his regiment, a ance of his duties with advantage to his regiment, a special report of his inaptitude and unfitness is to be made for the information of His Excellency. In the same manner full information is to be given of all officers who evince aptitude, zeal, intelligence, and knowledge of his duties; and when any officer has been absent from his duty for an unusual length of time, full part culars are to be furnished.

G.O. H.M.'s British Forces, No. 146, dated Oct. 1, 1860.

H.E. the C. in C. having had before him the half-yearly inspection returns of H.M.'s British regiments in India, finds it necessary to remark upon the very meagre replies of several of the inspecting officers to meagre replies of several of the inspecting officers to the questions in the confidential reports, as well as the absence of that information which should be afforded under the head "general observations." Under the latter should be mentioned, in addition to the general efficiency of the regiment, the names of any officers who evince a marked knowledge of their professional duties and zeal in performing these, as well as those who have not given proof of the same good disposition.

Sir Hugh Rose's great wish is to advance promis ing young officers, and it is through the medium of the "general observations" that he should be informed of their merits.

If this information is not accorded, he is unable to do justice to them, and to the rights of the sergreatest attention may be paid to this important duty.

Courts Martial.

Head Ors., Simla, July 23.—At a general court martial assembled at Peshawur on Thursday, May 22nd, 1862, Nezamdeen, Naick, No. 833, of the 20th (Punjab) regt. N.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, and tending to produce disturbance, in having at Attock, on or about the 17th Feb., 1862, used highly irritating language to Meah Sing, Sepoy, of the 32nd (Punjab) regt. #### REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C. IN INDIA.

The 32nd N.I. are performing the valuable service of pioneers, and as such are engaged in one of the most important works, the excavation of a tunnel under the river Indus, as a link in the grand trunk under the river Indus, as a link in the grand trunk road from Calcutta to Peshawur.

This Naick and other soldiers presumed insolently to taunt these good and useful soldiers with their employment as pioneers, and applied to them an epithet which, according to their ideas, was meant to be most insulting and hurtful to the feelings of the 32nd regt.; words, moreover, of which the tendency was to deter them from, and make them ashamed of performing the accellent service in ashamed of, performing the excellent service in which they were engaged by the order of the C. in C. in India, under instructions of the Government

The conduct, therefore, of Naick Nezamdeen and

The conduct, therefore, of Naick Nezamdeen and other soldiers of his regiment, who were equally guilty with himself, although they have not been discovered, was mutinous and unsoldierlike, and deserving of the severest punishment.

The court committed a serious error, in the first instance, in acquitting the prisoner of the crime with which he was charged; and, in the second, they were much to blame for having merely sentenced him to reduction on having found him guilty—a nunishment wholly inadequate to the serious nature. punishment wholly inadequate to the serious nature of the offence.

With a view to maintain discipline and proper feeling in the native army, the C. in C. directs the summary dismissal of Naick Nezamdeen in presence of the troops of the garrison.

This court martial will be a proof that no class distinctions will be recognised or permitted in the ranks of the army; that no man or class will be allowed to assume superiority over another on ac-allowed to assume superiority over another on account of social position; and still less to taunt others with their inferiority.

All soldiers have equal claims on the justice and the protection of the Commander in Chief; and military merit, of which discipline and obedience are the first principles, is the only road to distinction.

The proceedings of this court martial, and the Commander in Chief's remarks, are to be read at the head of every native regiment in the service.

Head Quarters, Simla, July 24.—At a general court-martial, reassembled at Peshawur on Tuesday, the 20th day of May, 1862, Jemadar Mehmood Khan, 30th (Punjab) regt. N.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For gross misbehaviour and neglect of duty to the prejudice of good order and military.

Charge.—ror gross misbehaviour and neglect of duty, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Attock, on or about the 23rd February, 1862, remained a passive spectator of an affray between several Pathan soldiers of his own affray between several Pathan soldiers of his own regiment, and some Muzbie soldiers of the 32nd N.I., instead of using his authority as an officer to quell the affray and to restore order.

Finding.—The Court, taking into consideration the defence urged by the prisoner, Jemadar Mahmood Khan, 20th (Punjab) regiment N.I., is of opinion that he is not guilty of the charge, and acquit him thereof.

Revised Finding.—The Court is of opinion that the prisoner, Jemadar Mahmood Khan, 20th (Punjab) regt. N.I., is guilty of the charge preferred against him.

Sentence.—The Court does now sentence the pri-oner, Jemadar Mahmood Khan, 20th (Punjab) regt N.I., to be suspended from rank and pay and allo ances for the period of four calendar months. (Signed) SEWDYAL TEWARY, RECOMMENDATION BY THE COURT.

The Court beg most respectfully to recommend the prisoner, Joundar Mahmood Khan, 20th (Punjab) regt. N.I., to the merciful consideration of his Excellency the Commander in Chief, on account of the character borne by the jemadar, his services, and also, as the Court consider that he refrained and also, as the Court consider that he refrained from interfering, not from a sense of bodily fear, but because he did not think it right that he should place himself in a position in which he had every reason to expect he would be insulted.

(Signed) SEWDYAL TEWARY, Subadar Maj., Peshawur, June 24.

President.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C.

The finding of the Court was revised with the following observations:—
"The Commander in Chief is at a loss to understand on what grounds the Court has pronounced an acquital. "The prisoner has confessed that he was present throughout the affray, that he looked on quietly and did nothing himself, through fear of being ill-treated, since he was not in uniform.

"This excuse, the C. in C. observes, is quite inadmissible.

"It is the duty of every native officer to use his best endeavour to quell affrays, and to preserve order and discipline among sepoys, whether on or off duty, and in or out of uniform.

"The fear of personal risk is an unworthy plen to advance by any officer for the non-performance of a positive duty.

"This plea was as untrue as it was unworthy, for there was a police-station close at hand, to which Jemadar Mahmood Khan might have applied for as-

"This shows that fear of personal risk was not the only cause of the Jemadar not interfering, but that he had no thought of doing his duty."

The Court have now convicted the prisoner, and sentenced him to suspension for four months.

sentenced him to suspension for four months.

This sentence is inadequate. A native officer who has so imperfect an idea of the duties of his position, as calmly to witness a serious affray between soldiers without making an effort to put a stop to it, is unworthy of that position, and the Court ought to have dismissed the Jemadar.

His very good service alone induces the C. in C. not to order his dismissal.

Jemadar Mahmood Khan is to be released from arrest. His suspension will commence from the data

By order of H.E. the C. in C. E. B. Johnson, Lieut. col. Officg. Adjt. gen. of the Army.

Allowances to Chaplains

Extract from the proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, dated July 26, 1862.

Financial Dept., No. 125.—Read again the under-mentioned papers relative to the travelling allowance payable to ecclesiastical officers for visiting out-

Notification of the ecclesiastical department, Government of India, dated Dec. 18, 1832.

Financial resolution, dated Dec. 24, 1858.
Resolution.—H.E. the Governor-general in Council observes that, under orders of December 18, 1832, chaplains and assistant chaplains are authorised to draw travelling allowance for visiting out-stations up to Rs. 200 per mensem, calculated at the rate of one day's allowance for every ten miles, allowing one day's allowance for every ten innes, allowing for a halt on the Sabbath.

This ruling, however, gives rise to numerous unnecessary and inconvenient references, and it is believed that in many cases the ruling is not satisfactory to the parties affected by it.

For this reason, H.E. in Council considers it would be a better plan to adopt a fixed mileage allowance. He observes, that such a rule has already been laid down in Financial Resolution, dated Dec. 24, 1858 which permits chaplains to draw travelling allow-ance at their option either under the rule of 1832, or at the rate of eight annas a mile; but that rule is not sufficient to remove the evils complained of, for not sufficient to remove the evils complained of, for not only does it not altogether supersede the rule of 1832, but it also fixes a mileage rate, which, in the opinion of the Governor-general in Council, would not be a fair allowance, nuder all circumstances, if substituted for the old rule.

H.E. in Council believes that twelve annas per mile very nearly equals the allowance under the rules of 1832, and would not be an improper remuneration to chaplains when they have occasion to visit out-stations, and if this rate were adopted in lieu of the allowance fixed in the order of 1832, there would in the end be no additional expense to the State.

Accordingly, he resolves that the following rule be adopted in supersession of the rules of the 18th

Dec. 1832, and 24th Dec., 1858, viz.:—

Chaplains and assistant chaplains when visiting out-stations under ecclesiastical authority, shall be allowed travelling allowance at the rate of twelve annas per mile, except for the distance traversable by railway, for which they shall be allowed three annas a mile.

THE MAHARAJAH OF PUTTIALAH. From the Secretary to Government, Punjab, to the Agent Lieut.-Governor.

Cis-Sutlej States, No. 411, dated June 6, 1862.

In the Englishman newspaper of the 28th ultimo the Maharajah of Puttialah is asserted to have said, in the presence and hearing of his own court, on his recent return from Calcutta, that "the Governor's Council is nothing but a name; its policy is full of tricks; and its great object is to deceive the Indians and sweep all the riches of India to England." copy of the paper is herewith enclosed.

2. The Hon. the Lieut.-governor desires you will make inquiry into this matter, and ascertain whether there is any truth in the statement. The Lieut.-governor himself entirely disbelieves it; and is of opinion that, if the statement is incorrect, it should, in justice to the Maharajah, be publicly contradicted.

FROM THE COMMISSIONER AND SUPERINTENDENT, CIS-SUTLEJ STATES, TO THE SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT PUNJAB.

No. 1,844, dated July 5, 1862. In reply to your No. 411, dated 6th June, I have the honour to report for the information of his Honor the Lieut.-governor that, considering it impossible to make any other satisfactory inquiry as to what the Maharajah of Puttialah might have said in his own durbar, I sent for his Highness's Vakeel, and translated to him word for word the accusation in the Englishman newspaper of May 28th, desired him to acquaint his master thereof, and inquire whether it were true or false, for his Honor's satisfaction.

2. At the same time I expressed his Honor's belief that no such expressions of disrespect towards Government had ever been used by his Highness.

3. The Vakeel thought it necessary to go in person to Puttialah with this inquiry, and returned with the fullest denial of his Highness--" Neither had he ever said, or thought, such things."

4. I beg to add my own entire belief in this assertion of the Maharajah's.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

GROWING OUR OWN SILK.

Passing strange would it be if future generations should be able to trace back the prosperity of India to three civil wars in three great countries. Such, however, is more than likely to be the case. The consequences of the Sepoy mutiny have already proved highly beneficial, and promise to become still more so, provided care be taken to avoid excessive and minute legislation. The restoration of the Talookdaree system in Oude, the fusion of the supreme courts of judicature, the reduction of the native army, the energetic prosecution of public works, the recognition of European settlers as one of the chief bulwarks of the State, the experimental institution of a paper currency, the diffusion and progress of English knowledge and ideas among the natives, the increased facilities for the acquisition of real property, and the prospect of a permanent settlement of the land revenue, are all to a large extent due to the terrible convulsion which threatened at one time to subvert the British Empire in the East. At no long interval has succeeded the lamentable disunion of the States of North America, attended by the almost entire discontinuance of the cotton supply. The unparalleled distress caused in our manufacturing districts by the want of the raw material on which the very existence of the industrial population depended, has given a stimulus to the cultivation of cotton in India, the importance of which can hardly be overrated. As yet, indeed, the impulse to the increased production of that invaluable plant has scarcely been felt, but in another year it cannot fail to achieve great results. The extension of railway communication into the very heart of the cotton growing districts will not only afford the means of cheap and expeditious transport, but will also enable European agents to travel into the interior and deal directly with the agriculturists. European superintendence and machinery will further ensure the absence of adulteration, and will prepare the cotton to satisfy the requirements and caprices of the Lancashire millowners. But however vast may be the advantages India will gain from the disruption of the United States, not inferior will be those she is likely to derive from the anarchy that is gradually pervading the choicest provinces of the Chinese Empire. The auxiliary fleet commanded by Captain Sherard Osborn will, doubtless, succeed in putting down piracy in the open seas and navigable creeks, while the co-operation of the allied forces will be effectual in affording protection to the principal seaports engaged in the foreign trade. But it must not be imagined that the Taeping hordes will be ment was then occupied with matters of more it was "very hard work indeed" to go against they happen to be excluded from half-a-dozen cities frequented by Europeans. Those ruthless marauders will simply retire further inland, and lay waste the lands now devoted to the cultivation of the tea plant, or the rearing of silkworms. At any time a "tea famine" may supervene upon the "cotton famine," while the scarcity of silk will seriously affect another large section of the industrial classes. Here, again, India is ready to step forward to the rescue. It is established beyond all question, that the lower slopes of the Himalaya, throughout its entire range from east to west, are eminently adapted to the growth of the tea plant. At Kangra, in the Dehra Dhoon, in Kumaon, at Darjeeling, in Cachar, and Assam, the fragrant shrub is cultivated as successfully as in the most famous districts in China. Something, indeed, is yet to be learned with respect to the manipulation of the leaf, but there is no reason why it should not with a little practice be sufficiently adulterated and spoiled to gratify the palate of English maids and matrons. Within a very few years the Himalayan and Neilgherry plantations will be capable of supplying the European market, and of supplanting the Chinese growers, and the monopolist firms at Hong Kong, Canton, and Shanghai. Nor is tea the only produce in which India may be brought to rival the Central Flowery Land. Experiments now in progress at Umritsur go far to prove that the silkworm may be reared in the Punjab with a success at least equal to that already attained in Bengal. More certain is it that on the lower spurs of the Himalaya the mulberry flourishes naturally and abundantly, while Saturnias, Actias, and more than one species of Bombyx are found in vast numbers. The rearing of silkworms requires no large amount of capital, no particular dexterity, no special knowledge of any kind. It may be conducted on almost any scale, and in many respects is admirably suited to the native character. As the Punjab Government is evidently in earnest in the matter, and holds out every reasonable encouragement to speculators, it may be confidently predicted that ere many years have elapsed the export of silk will rival that of tea; and thus in regard to three great necessaries of life Great Britain will be rendered independent of foreign countries. Her own colonies and distant possessions will suffice for her wants, and while in other countries people are cutting one another's throats for an idea," she will calmly pursue the arts of peace, offending no one, but ever ready to resent insult or aggression.

A WILD GOOSE CHASE.

Were we capable of perpetrating a bad pun we should have headed this article "A Wild Guinea Fowl Chase," but we care not to trespass on the preserves of our "facetious contemporaries." The Epping Hunt, however, in its palmiest days was never more deliciously comical than the Galena Hunt of Tenasserim. It seems that in the year 1855 an "intelligent Karen" carried into Mergui a lump of lead ore -or what was taken for such-and presented, or sold, his lustrous prize to Assistant-surgeon Evezard, who immediately communicated the important fact to his superiors. The Govern-necessarily destroyed or disbanded because immediate urgency, and no further steps were taken until the 13th September, 1861, when Mr. Secretary W. Grey called upon the Commissioner of the Tenasserim Provinces for a report upon the long dormant discovery. Anxious in every way to "develope the resources of the country," to "stimulate industry and commerce," and to "encourage the introduction of British capital and enterprise," a paternal Government could no longer tolerate the apathy of its subordinate officials with regard to a mineral production bearing such a high market value. Peremptory orders were accordingly issued to institute an active search for the lode whence Mr. Evezard's samples were obtained, and two very intelligent officers, vested with magisterial powers, were directed to postpone all other affairs in order that the Supreme Government might be enabled, at the International Exhibition, to offer to the admiring gaze of all the world ponderous specimens of Tenasserim Galena. The narratives of these two officers, detailing the difficulties they encountered, and did not overcome, are printed for the public benefit in a supplementary sheet of the Calcutta Gazette, concluding with a magnificent anti-climax from the pen of Dr. F. N. Macnamara, Chemical Examiner to Government. If the editor of the official Gazette be gifted with any sense of humour, nothing but a miracle could have saved him from suffocation under the paroxysm of mirth with which he must have been seized on receiving these papers for publication.

Major J. F. J. Stevenson was the first to act in cordial compliance with the instructions of his superiors. His own conviction, indeed, was that "the site of the ore of Galena" was in the district of his neighbour Captain Harrison, but as that officer was somewhat incredulous on the subject, the major offered to accompany him. Starting from Tavoy they travelled without impediment to Metta, a large Karen village on the forks of the Tenasserim river, about thirty-four miles distant. There they embarked in canoes on the 28th February, and on the 3rd March had descended seventy miles, to the confluence of the Thay-wah stream. At that place they were informed that the ore was not more than a dozen miles distant, near the mouths of the Sawng-wah-corrupted by Mr. Evezard into the Sownlore Creek. The bed of the Sawng-wah, however, proved impassible, and Captain Harrison having reached the limit of his own district, declined to proceed any further. Nothing daunted, Major Stevenson resolved to pursue his investigations by himself, and arrived at the conclusion he could strike the desired point by making a detour of some seventy miles across the mountains. Unfortunately he was unable to procure a reliable guide, but succeeded in getting an elephant and half-a-dozen men, besides the companionship of Mr. John Davis, Inspector of Police. On the 4th March the little party set out, but after struggling on for a whole day it became evident that the elephant could go no further, and that there was no other means of carrying provisions and other necessaries for the journey. The order was, therefore, reluctantly given to face about, and on their way back a herd of bison charged the Karen coolies, "who saved themselves by spring. ing up some tall bamboos." In four days more the major reached Metta, and complains that the stream. However, a few days afterwards a Karen brought him some of the stone, which he lost no time in forwarding to the Commissioner, who, in his turn, sent it on to Calcutta "in a separate package." It would be superfluous to notice Captain Harrison's account of the same adventure, though it is not without considerable merit from a literary point of view. His scepticism "crops out" more than once, if the ore does not, and on describing his parting with his travelling companion, he slily expresses a fear lest "the inaccessibility of the place where the Galena is said to have been found will prevent its being worked to profit and advantage." The point of the story is yet to come. The "separate package" reached Calcutta in due time, and its precious contents were instantly placed in the hands of the Chemical Examiner to the Government. The report of that officer, addressed to Mr. E. C. Bayley, Secretary to the Home Department, is so brief and pithy that it will not bear abridgment. Thus it runs :-

"Sir,—With reference to your letter No. 3,069, I have the honour to report that the mineral therewith ent contains no Galena or other ore of lead. lustrous black constituent of the mineral is black

It is a pity that the sample forwarded by Mr. Evezard was not subjected to analysis, as all this ridiculous trouble and loss of time would then have been avoided. But why the correspondence should have been puzzled in the Gazette is, as Lord Dundreary would say, " one of those things which no fellah can find out."

CORRESPONDENCE.

A CORRECTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL." Sir,-I request your correction of the following paragraph, appearing under the head of "Miscellaneous," in your issue of yesterday:—

" CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA. The directors of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China have announced that their less from the recent opium fraud at Hong Kong may amount to about £40,000, and that as this will just absorb the profit of the half year, they recommend the suspension of a dividend on the present occasion. Apart from this event, the progress of the establishment is said to have been very satisfactory."

This Bank ("The Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China") and "The Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China" are two separate institutions, as their titles indicate; and I beg reference to the enclosed notice of a dividend, &c., for 30th June last, and which I sent you on 21st August.*

For your information, the paragraph following the one above copied is also wrong, as it refers to the bills drawn by Government for this month, as you will discover on reference to the advertisement of 28th August last.—I am, sir, your obe-D. I. ROBERTSON, Manager. dient servant, Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, Threadneedle-street, Sept. 11. [ A dividend was declared at the rate of 5 per cent. (free of Income-tax) for the half-year ending 30th June last. The loss sustained by this Bank is stated at about £8,000 -rather less than more. -ED. A.I.M.]

done the best to bring any grievance of officers before the public, to the facts therein stated. It is, unfortunately, too true that we are all in a state of doubt and uncertainty as to our ultimate condition; and I think it is but right that the officers should write in the manner " A Lieutenant Unposted" has done, and endeavour to elucidate, if possible, the problem therein contained. am, sir, your obedient servant,

POSITION OF INDIAN ARTILLERY OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,-The recent amalgamation, and its results to the local armies in India, appear to be a very important question. I would venture to ask, "Are Indian artillery officers to consider themselves liable for service in this country, contrary to their own wishes and interests?"

Is the power of the Indian military authorities to become "Vox et præteres nihil?" Surely India has the first right to the distribution of artillery officers enlisted in Indian corps, and in this state of things it would be fair if all artillery officers were placed on an equal footing. At present, generally speaking, they are like dogs that pick but the crumbs off their master's table.-I am, SIC VOS NON VOBIS. sir, &c.,

BOOKS,

Northern Europe, Local, Social, and Political in 1861. By Capt. W. F. B. Laurie, H.M.'s Madras Artillery. Saunders, Otley and Co.

To Indian readers Captain Laurie is not altogether unknown as the writer of an unsatisfactory narrative of the concluding operations of the second Burmese War. He has now extended the sphere of his failures in authorship to the larger, if not more benevo-lent public at home. Perhaps he would have acted wisely had he remained contented with the obscurity that attended his first attempt to acquire a literary reputation, for his second adventure is even worse than its predecessor. Having returned to Europe, apparently with indifferent health, Captain Laurie resolved to accompany his father on a tour to St. Petersburg, by way of Hamburg, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Helsingflors, and Cronstadt, taking Berlin and Hanover in his homeward journey. This route has been so frequently described that it might be deemed a work of supererogation to add to the numerous octavos already devoted to that purpose. Captain Laurie, however, had really something new to write about. Other travellers had for the most part about. Other travellers had for the most part confined themselves to relating what they beheld, and what few incidents befell themselves, but none of them were so orientalised as to mistake the Elbe for the Hooghly, or to expect a Bengal pilot to come off at Heligoland. This is the keynote of the entire volume. Does he come across muddy water, straightway he bethinks him of the turbid stream which quenched the burning thirst of the British troops before engaging the Sikhs at Moodkee. Does he alight upon an illustrated MS. of the time of Charlemagne, in which a soldier is represented in the act of slaughtering a woman and two children, his mind at once reverts to the Indian mutiny, and the barbarities perpetrated by the mutinous sepoys. Is he shown a primitive pickaxe made of "a long sharp shown a primitive pickaxe made of "a long sharp stone with a horn stuck through a hole in the centre of it," he suddenly remembers that he is an ex-Commissary of Stores, and that the most important part of an axe, "looking at it as an article in store, is the eye, for which the above hole did service." And so on in like manner through 260 pages of tedious common-places. As this would make thin volume two old lectures on the but a thin volume, two old lectures on the Neilgherries and the Moghuls are inserted by way of padding—a few shavings in the shape of political and scientific reflections being strewn over the top to keep the various angular and heterogeneous articles in their proper place. In short, Captain Laurie may be an excellent artillery officer, and a first-rate judge of commissariat stores, but he has no pretensions, or rather, he has nothing but pretensions, to be an author.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. 23; or, on cloth, in a case, 22. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honoursible East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 is. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being mitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.— HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.— maladies arise from obstruction to the free circulation of blood through the blood-vessels or capillaries, and the only rational mode of cure consists in removing the local impediment, at the same time that any impurity engendered by stoppage should be filtered from the blood. Holloway's Ointment applied to the part effects the first, his Pills accomplish the latter object. The influence skin derives softness, coolness, and ease from the application of the unguent, which gradually penetrates to the affected tissues, and soon restores the circulation and its channels to a healthy condition, and saves the sufferers from most serious diseases, which too frequently follow from carclessness or injudicious medical trestment.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. cloth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Corate is the apostle. . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to trend than the defined circle of metaphysics itself, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1862.

A SHORT TRIP in HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. ANSTED. Post 870., cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted's descriptions are written with a neatness attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. His volume is one both of value and entertainment: a book calculated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube."—Athenseum, Aug. 16, 1863.

"Many a tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Professor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a tour than the author of this interesting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

THE SCIENCE of HOME LIFE. By ALBERT J. BERNATS, Professor of Chemistry and Natural Philosophy, and of Practical Chemistry at St. Tho-mas's Hospital Medical and Surgical College (lafe Lecturer on Chemistry and Practical Chemistry at St. Mary's Hospital), &c., &c. Illustrated by several cuts. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s.

MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN HISTORY. By J. G. EDGAR. Author of the "Boyhood of Great Men," &c., &c. With Illustrations. Post 8vo., cloth, &s. 6d.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children. Mr. J. G. Edgar never makes a contribution to juvenile literature that does not deserve a certain measure of commendation. We can conscientiously recommend it ('Memorable Events') as a work at the same time entertaining and useful."—Athensoum, March 6, 1862.

time entertaining and useful."—Athensoum, March 6, 1862.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-heards, and of so describing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ('Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable, highminded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human folices and failures."—Spectator.

By DUNCAN FORDES, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes atout fight for the Hindoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He ahows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that Ican on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative etymology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the masners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but freshly, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Herald.

SIN: its Causes and Consequences. An Attempt to Investigate the Origin, Nature, Extent, and Results of Moral Evil. A Series of Lent Lectures. By the Rev. Henry Christmas, M.A., F.R.S. Post 8vo., cloth, An At-

"These lectures are learned, eloquent, and earnest, and though they approach the 'limits of religious thought,' they do not transgress those limits; and they present the reader with a comprehensive review, based upon revelation, of the nature, extent, and consequences of moral evil or sin, both in this world and in the world to come."—Civil Service Gazette.

Svo. volume. Pp. 648. Price 12s.

"In the work before us he has digested a complete Elementary Course by aid of his long experience as a teacher and a writer; and he has produced a very useful book. . . Mr. Young has not allowed his own tastes to rule the distribution, but has adjusted his parts with the skill of a veteran."—Athenæum, March 9, 1861.

"Mr. Young is well-known as the author of undoubtedly the best treatise on the 'Theory of Equations' which is to be found in our language—a treatise distinguished by originality of thought, great learning, and admirable perspicuity. Nor are these qualities wanting in the work which we are reviewing. . . . Considering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparting accurately and lucidly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation commend this work to the public as by far the best elementary course of mathematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861.

By Sutherland Edwards, Esq. 2nd Edition, with Illustrations. Price 10s. 6d.

"It is a book that we can sincerely recommend, not only to those who are desirous of abundant and reliable information respecting the social economy of the Russian people, but to those who seek an entertaining volume, that may be perused in any part with both profit and amusement."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

"This is not only one of the most amusing books that we have read for a long time, but also the best and most reliable account of Russian life and manners which has hitherto been given to the public."—Spectator.

"The tone is so genied, the descriptions are so vigorously touched, and the author's perfect acquaintance with his subject is so marked throughout, that his sketches are sure to delight any one into whose hands they may fall."—Literary Gazette.

Translated from the German of C. M. von Wielaud. By the Rev. H. Christmas. 2 vols., post 8vo., cloth, 18s.

"As a prose satire, 'The History of the Adderites' yields only in breadth of humour, and pungency of wit, to Dean Switt's immortal travels of Captain Lenuel Gulliver; and of works of that class we know of none in any language that can compare with either of the two."—Observer.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English men and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution towards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to mankind, of the Quixotes', Gullivers', and other human foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to our shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of nationa thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."—London Review.

MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—These for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are daspatched via Southampton. on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 27th August has duly arrived, but brings no intelligence of much general interest. Cholera, we regret to state, continues to hover about the North-West Provinces, but its victims do not seem to be very numerous. On the cessation of the rains it will probably disappear entirely.

The Court of Nizamut Adawlut at Agra has confirmed the sentence passed by the Sessions Judge, Mr. F. B. Pearson, upon Pandoo Rung Rao, better known as Rao Sahib, nephew of the Nana Dhoondoopunt. The charges proved against the criminal were fivefold. He was accused of being accessory before the fact to four separate murders on various dates between the 6th June and 9th July, 1857, and of being accessory after the fact in two of and linseed unchanged.

those cases, and further of being a leader of the rebels in 1857-58-59. The native Assessors found him guilty of rebellion, but acquitted him on the more serious charges. Mr. Pearson, however, over-ruled their verdict, and convicted him on all five heads. That judgment has been upheld by the Sudder Court, and long ere this Pandoo Rung Rao has no doubt expiated his crimes on the gallows.

It is again rumoured that chupatties are being circulated in the Deccan and in Kandeish. This time no great importance appears to be attached to the movement, which will probably turn out to be the result of an accident, or of some trifling misunderstanding.

Frightful mismanagement has been discovered in the affairs of the Bombay Steam Navigation Company, which, in all likelihood, will soon be wound up. A general meeting of shareholders has been convened to decide upon this point.

A terrible shipwreck has occurred near Rutnagherry. The ill-fated vessel was the Columbus, of 760 tons, bound from Jeddah to Singapore, and commanded by an Arab. Her crew consisted of forty men, in addition to whom there were two hundred and thirty passengers, chiefly Malay pilgrims, with the exception of two Austrian gentlemen and their wives. The ship went ashore in a heavy gale, and almost immediately broke up, with the loss of a hundred lives.

The High Courts of Bombay and Madras have been formally opened; the former on the 14th, the latter on the 16th August.

The latest news from Affghanistan contradicts the previous report that the Ameer was within a few days march of Herat. It is now stated that on the 4th of August he was still at Furrah, but was on the point of setting out. An absurd rumour prevailed that the Shah of Persia had ordered a khillut worth Rs. 100,000 to be sent to the Ameer, on condition that, among other things stipulated, the Ameer would govern the whole country from Herat to Cabool, having the Candaharee, Caboolee, and Peshwaree chiefs under him.

The Governor of Bombay held a native durbar at Poona on the 20th August, which seems to have passed off to the satisfaction of every one, and without any revival of the ridiculous shoe question.

The Calcutta papers give credit to a report of an expected visit from the Prince of Wales an event not very likely to happen.

THE RAINS.

We are not sure that the public is fully aware of the energetic steps which have recently been taken to ascertain and improve the various spots throughout India which are marked out by locality, climate and accessibility as convenient for establishing sanitaria. The enervating atmo sphere and constant malarious influences at work in this country are fruitful of disease and lassitude, and medical science is not always able even to remove disease, far less to restore to strength, without invoking the assistance of a more bracing or less baneful climate. It is difficult to say what portion of the year is in reality the most trying to the constitution of a European in India. The action of the sun in the tropics can never be braved with impunity. But while the drain upon one's physical powers is greater in those months which are illumined with the glare of oriental daylight than at any other time, the rains appear to be the really unhealthy season. The mortality among the English in India is not so great then as in May, but the general level of health is much lower. Welcome as the rains are after the intolerable oppressiveness of that first fortnight in June, they have no sooner cooled the air and rendered existence endurable than they forthwith open Pandora's box and scatter right and left, especially amongst the latest arrivals, a pleasant epidemic of fever, dysentery, indigestion, and the other varieties of good things with which Anglo-Indians disturb the monotony of their lives. There does not seem to be anything in the rainy season so hopelessly unhealthy as to baffle all the precautions which science can suggest and prudence attend to; on the contrary, it seems to be in many respects a more pleasant period of the year than the hot months. We are, however, launched into it with all the effects of the heat we have just survived ripe upon us. We encounter its damps and the well-known unhealthiness of sudden change with frames disagreeably susceptible of each and every ill that the climate may apportion to our respective constitutions. It is a searching ordeal, that acclimatising process which old stagers allude to with the happy indifference proper to bye gones, and the amphibious race of Griffins undergo with varying luck and uniform discontent.

The rainy season, however, is by no means partial in bestowing its favours, and the question of sanitaria is one of general, and may at any moment become to any one of us of individual interest. In the tropics there is malaria in the very soil. The miasma produced by the rains is dangerous to life, especially at night, but it is said to be confined to a stratum varying from 8 to 12 feet above the surface of the ground. In selecting sanitaria regard should especially be had to elevation above the level of the sea, the influence of which is in proportion to the height up to 8,000 feet. This influence, however, is modified by many local circumstances, a lower elevation near the sea being more healthy than a greater elevation in the neighbourhood of jungle. To residents in Calcutta the neighbourhood of the Sandheads has pointed it out as the most accessible sanitarium. Tugs constantly plying up and down are ever at hand, and the sea-breeze of the Bay of Bengal soon does the work of invigorating the victim of miasma and damp. The Bentinck, well known on the P. and O. line, is in course of preparation to receive invalids, and will be fitted up with every accommodation, and all the means of affording amusement and recreation, which are as important restoratives as the strong fresh air from the bay. A sea voyage as well as a sanitarium is often necessary, and reminds one of the advantages said to be possessed by Curlew Island, which we have before described. This island seems to offer unusual ALTITUDES NO IA Nie same time we cannot forget that he hatti iness or unhealthiness of a partithe facilities of each of by such a sanitarium as a sanitarium and by the rapidly extending the sanitarium and by the rapidly extending the sanitarium as sanitarium as sanitarium and by the rapidly extending the sanitarium as sanitarium as relish for mere existence which Mr. Fox used to display in the gardens of St. Anne's when, as Lord Russell informs us in his Memoirs, he used to perform his matutinal perambulations, expand ing his huge sides as he inhaled the fresh pure air of an English spring, and indulging in exclamations which showed that his whole physical nature felt the glow and sensation of vigorous health and spirits.

Doubtless those who wish to devote a holiday to health should take it in the rains. A rapid visit to England at such a time gives the fortunate holiday-maker the finest weather in the world. But as if there were no detail of our administration and even our life in India over which it may be said that the trail of the serpent has not passed, Sir Charles Wood has declared war with a rule which allows those officials who are ailing from hard work, but not ill, to enjoy a holiday in what may be described as a perpetual Sandheads. Civilians are allowed a month's leave in the year, when it can be taken without detriment to the public service, and this leave they may accumulate for three years, but not more. Accordingly, it has been the custom for those who could afford it to pay a brief visit to England, and they have been allowed to take a fourth month, keeping their appointment, but receiving no pay. This boon gives the civilian just a month in England, and by indulging every five years in such a scamper as this, officials are generally able to keep their health up to that vigorous level which hard and monotonous work requires. The public service benefits by such a rule. But the boon of the fourth month, having on one occasion been abused, is to be taken away, and the officer who hoards his three months must either spend them in the tropics, or in steamers which will just take him to Dover, allow him to see the white cliffs of the dear old isle, and return made more wretched by chronic sea-sickness and a torn heart .- Friend of India.

THE COMMISSARIAT SCANDAL.

The military scandal alluded to in our last has become the subject of comment in the daily journals, and all reticence on our part is, therefore, unnecessary. Major Fitzgerald, of the Bengal commissariat, and Colonel Priestley, commanding H.M.'s 42nd Highlanders, were both nominated members of a committee appointed at the request of the Commander inchief, professedly to inquire into the mode in which the European soldiers are fed. There can be no doubt that such a commission is calculated to do much good, if it confines itself to an attempt to remedy certain abuses in provisioning the army. But the impression prevailed, and on good grounds, that the ultimate object of Sir Hugh Rose was to bring the commissariat officers more under his control, not, as has been repeatedly asserted, to adapt its organisation to that of the English commissariat which failed so lamentably in the Crimea, a proceeding which would defeat his great object, for in that case the officials of the Indian Commissariat would cease to be military men. To all who understand the relation of the Commander-in-Chief in India as well as in England to the civil authorities, it must be evident that no department which, like the Commissariat, originates and manages expenditure, can be freed from the direct control and patronage of the civil Government, which is responsible for the finances. But the mere fact of the appointment of the Commission excited the suspicions of the Commissariat, which is virtually on its trial. Major Fitzgerald represented his own department, Colonel Priestly was the avowed channel through which Sir Hugh Rose acted, and there could be little cordial feeling between them. It so happened, too, that while Major Fitzgerald is one of the most estimable and efficient officers in the army, Colonel Priestly was unfitted by previous experience, temper or judgment for so delicate a duty. He is said to have declared that he had made up his mind on the subject when he first took his seat, and that all evidence was unnecessary.

Well, these two officers meet at the United enable Anglo-Indians to realise that intense | Service Club. They privately discuss in strong language the official proceedings of the Commission of which they are members: Col. Priestly invokes the authority of the Commander-in-Chiefwhose "succedaneum" he is, and Major Fitzgerald in the heat of argument declares " he has no respect for either the public or private character of Sir Hugh Rose," or uses words to that effect. Much stronger language than this may be heard at every mess-table in the country, nor are the sacred precincts of Government-house free from such whispered confidences of military men. Even if Sir Hugh Rose were immaculate, private gossip would not spare him any more than others in this charitable world. It is quite open to Major Fitzgerald not only to hold such an opinion but to express it unofficially in private conversation, but it is not open to an officer and a gentleman, whether under a mistaken sense of duty or from a feeling of resentment, to repeat that conversation officially to his superiors. Colonel Priestly, whom we will not prejudge at present, did report this remark, and the result is a notice in Saturday's Gazette, put with all delicacy and kindliness, that Major Fitzgerald is re-lieved of the duty of sitting on the Commission, and that Major Wroughton will take his place. But why is Colonel Priestly not so relieved? His is the social offence, and if rumour is correct the other members of the Commission decline to sit with an officer who may officially repeat their private remarks, while Colonel Priestly has himself removed from the Club until it is decided whether he has violated its rules.

There can be no doubt as to how the Commander-in-Chief will act in this matter. Major Fitzgerald has apologised—an act which seems to us both premature and unnecessary, and Sir Hugh Rose will doubtless show his abhorrence of tale bearing in one of those Orders which he knows so well how to pen .- Friend of India.

The Secretary of the Bengal United Service Club in Chowringhee has addressed a letter to Lieut.-Col. Priestly, of H. M.'s 42nd Highlanders, and a prominent Member of the Commissariat Commission now sitting at the Presidency, asking him for information as to the fact of his having officially reported to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief some remarks made to him in a private conversation at the club table with Captain Fitzgerald, also of the commission and of the Bengal commissariat. Lieut.-Colonel Priestly's answer is not, we believe, very explicit and satisfactory; and, with reference to the steps which his admission of the alleged fact would render inevitable, he has expressed his intention not to dissolve his connection with the United Service Club, except by the determination of a general meeting of the members of the Presidency. In the meantime, Lieut.-Col. Priestly has left the club premises, and gone to reside elsewhere; and we hear that a general meeting is about to be called, to consider and decide upon this very unpleasant affair, and upon the steps which it may be necessary to adopt, in the interests of the club, and of the generally accepted sanctity of private conversation .- Englishman.

Colonel Priestly has since been ordered to rejoin his regiment.

THE TRADE OF CALCUTTA, PAST AND FUTURE.

Mr. P. Bonnaud's "Commercial Annual" appears three months after the close of 1861-62, and contains, as usual, a detailed history of the external commerce of Bengal for the year, intelli-gently arranged. While expressing our acknowledgments to Mr. Bonnaud and his predecessor for supplying the public for so many years with this important information, only three months old, we at the same time must declare our satisfaction at the prospect of soon being independent of an annual publication. Mr. Laing's statistical committee, now sitting, will probably recom-mend, for the adoption by Government, the publication of monthly and quarterly as well as annual tables, showing the trade of each presidency and province in itself, and combining in one statement the trade of the whole Empire. In some respects the Indian public will have advantages in the early publication of commercial and financial statistics, superior to those afforded by the tables of the Board of Trade in England. The first quarterly financial statement will appear in October, giving full details of the imperial income and expenditure from May to July, and a similar statement will appear for each quarter. The necessity for obtaining the adhesion of the various Presidencies and Provinces to the new system of trade returns, and of providing an organisation for making them up, may delay the publication of the commercial tables, but there is nothing to prevent the new statistical machinery being in working order by the beginning of 1863, if not earlier.

For the last time then we turn to the "Commercial Annual" for a commercial history of Bengal in 1861-62. The exact position of its trade will best be seen by a comparison with the five previous years, which have all more or less, from mutiny, its reaction, famine, and the cotton crisis, been very exceptional. The figures denote pounds sterling :-

Year.	Імро	RTS.	Ехро	Total
	Merchan- dise.	Trea- sure.	Merchan- dise.	Trea-	Trade.
1857 58 1858-59 1859-60 1860-61 1861-62	10,377.830 13,074,144 11,466 445	5,087,146 5,263,125 3,873,405	14,629,875 13,195,055	626,850 1,022 631 1,721,371	29,455,252 30,721,731 32,554,955 30,842,754 30,138,750

Thus, looking at merchandise and treasure, there is a decrease in the value of the trade of 1861-62 compared with its predecessor of £704,004, but if we take only merchandise the decrease is £307,410. We took £744,056 worth of goods less from the rest of the world, chiefly from Great Britain, but we exported £436,646 more. This result is entirely satisfactory when we consider the character of the year. America having failed there was a demand for the articles which she had been in the habit of supplying. Unlike Bombay, Bengal sends little cotton, so that the export, which in 1860-61 was 41,432 cwts., valued at £67,326, rose to only 56,255} cwts., valued, however, at the high figure of £113,124, or nearly double. An instance recently occurred in which Pegu cotton was landed in Liverpool at a cost of threepence per lb., and sold for one shilling. But though we could not send much more cotton than usual, the alarms of war took from us a quarter of a million sterling worth of saltpetre more, while the export of opium to China and Singapore increased by £650,000, of gunnies for cotton bags to the Malabar Coast by £70,000, of hides and skins to Great Britain by £160,060, of jute fibre thither and to Bombay by £53,000, of shellac to Great Britain by £75,000 worth, of rice to all the world by £650,000 worth, and of gram to the Mauritius and Bourbon by £41,000 worth.

On the other hand the total absence of a demand for cotton goods and twist, caused by the previous over-doing of the trade and the fickle ness of the native buyers on account of the American war, reduced our imports in these articles alone by £764,531. As was to be expected, our export of indigo was less by half a million sterling-a loss we should not lament if only we saw its counterpoise in the improvement of the ryot, and the peace and general prosperity of Lower Bengal. We exported also a quarter of a million less of sugar and a third of a million less of silk in value, China distancing us in the latter and the colonies in the former. In the current year our exports are likely to be still more affected, for distress in England and the whole manufacturing world will largely check the consumption of even common luxuries. The increasing demand for caoutchouc in the manufactures doubled our export of that article. Bengal cigars cannot be in favour, for while the world took nearly £4,000 worth last year they were satisfied with only £2,600 worth this year. On the other hand, we sent chiefly to Pegu and Aus-

£2,000 worth the previous year. ported £1,100 worth of books less, but the same amount of paper, the two together amounting to £138,757, or considerably less than the value of the port, sherry, claret, and champagne con-sumed. The value of the beer and porter imported was £150,984, of which Bass sent £20,404, and Allsopp £43,322. The number of vessels which arrived in the year was 907, or 41 less than the previous year. Bengal takes about 701 per cent. of its imports from Great Britain, only 21 from France, 51 from China, 51 from Australia, and 6 from Singapore. On the other hand, it sends 301 per cent. of its produce to Great Britain, 21 to China, 9 to Pegu, 1 to Australia, and 4 2 3rds to North America. It is not a pleasing fact to record that in the year Bengal exported 6,891 adult human beings to Mauritius, 4,174 to the French colony of Bourbon, 1,741 to Jamaica. 2,564 to Trinidad, 4,814 to Demerara, and 330 to Grenada-a loss of 20.534 men, women, and children to the labour market of a country so under-populated that it cannot meet the cry of Lancashire for cotton from a want of people to sow and hands to clean an enlarged crop, while half of the country is jealously kept by its rulers

The dulness which has affected the import trade of Calcutta during the past year is now likely to cease. Already cotton goods have attained the level of the Manchester rates, at which they can be sold without a loss, and by the close of the year the fortunate holders of large stocks will certainly make a profit of thirty per cent. By next hot season there will probably be no cotton goods for sale, and the balance of trade will go up still higher in favour of Bengal. If the difference is to be paid in treasure, while the paper currency sends the native hoards into the vaults of the Bank of Bengal, money will be even more plentiful than it has been, and prices will be accordingly affected. Meanwhile an active export trade, caused by the deficiencies of America and the disturbances in Russia, is likely to prevail, and for the next six months temporarily to employ much floating capital. A reference to the table we have given will show that the trade of Calcutta, if not advancing, is returning to its normal healthy state, from which it was disturbed by the exciting reaction of 1859-60. Then it attained its highest but unnatural level, of more than twenty six and a-quarter millions' worth of merchandise, or thirty two and a-half millions' worth of merchandise and treasure .-Friend of India.

MISCLLLANEOUS.

THE CHERRA PANIC,-We have news from the Cossya hills down to the 22nd of July. We are sorry to inform our readers that the European and native residents of Cherra were but just recovering breath after the delirious horrors of a panic-Sunday. In India, ever since May, 1857, all panics, as is well known, have happened on The day is believed to be a convenient Sunday. one for the purposes of wholesale massacre; the enemy, whoever they may be, are always presumed to be aware of this fact, and so get credit for many will-digested schemes which, unhappily for the wisdom of the contemplated victims, but happily for their heads, never ripen into action. Well, of course the panic which paralysed the good people of Cherra came off on a Sunday. circumstances connected with it are creditable to all concerned. On the morning of the day in question, a letter was received from Major Raban, who was on his way over the hills to Assam, stating that there was a report that the rebels intended to attack Shillong, and that they were already on their way thither in considerable force. The tidings had been communicated to the officer in command of Cherra station, but somehow they got wind, and everybody began to consult everybody else as to what means should be adopted for the defence of Cherra. If the rebels attacked Shillong, of course they would attack Cherra; and in that case what was to be done? The police were sent off at

of the Sepoys, who were ordered post haste to Moophlong and Shillong. The natives, who had heard no report of any intended attack, now fled in all directions, as much probably with a view to escape the impressment as to get out of the way of the rebels. Some concealed themselves in holes and caves, others escaped into the jungles; and others, scared out of their lives, lost themselves in the intricacies of the hills, and were not restored to their friends till after diligent search. We are sorry to add that the state of mind in which the Europeans received the report of the advance of the rebels was scarcely more creditable. The usual morning service at the church was out of the question. The live-long day was spent in anxious and troubled expectancy. As the evening came on, finding that the enemy had not appeared, both Europeans and natives became somewhat re-assured. The former mustered courage sufficient to have an afternoon service: the latter returned to the market. But the night had not yet passed, and the thought of the darkness revived the apprehensions of the residents. Their state of mind was not improved by a report which began to circulate a little before sunset, that the rebels were already between Moophlong and Cherra. So sundry precautions had to be taken. Some would not sleep in their own houses; others had the servants called in to defend them in case of need; and with all it was an object to be as near to the sepoys as possible. We can fancy how the night must have been passed. What listening there must have been; what peeping out of windows; what planning of escapes in case of an alarm! And after all, there was no reason to apprehend the slightest danger. The report which Major Raban had heard, and which he stated simply as a report, had not the shadow of truth in it. The only quarter in Cherra where no panic prevailed was Nungsoulia, where the missionaries and their people reside, and the reason was that they knew the report to be groundless. _ Dacca News. A SHORT CUT TO CHINA,-A project has been submitted to the Government of India for the construction of a railway across the Isthmus of Kraw, which separates the Gulf of Siam from the Bay of Bengal. It has more than once been proposed to cut a ship canal through the Isthmus, but the proposal has never met with much encouragement, principally, it may be assumed, on account of the great expenditure such a work would involve. It is, however, quite practicable to construct a railway that shall cost a comparatively small sum, and yet suffice for the transport of goods and passengers between the Eastern Seas and the Bay of Bengal and the waters westward of that Bay. This would not only lessen passengers and goods' transport charges, but effect a time-saving of two-and-a-half or three days. The country which the line would run through and open up is rich in minerals, and the cheapening of China goods, which its construction would bring about, would be of great importance to commerce. The project would further tend to facilitate the introduction of Chinese labourers into Burmah and other Indian provinces where labour is scarce. Kraw is situated on the shore of the Bay of Bengal, and is distant from the Gulf of Siam only fifty miles. The town, or rather village, consists of fifty or sixty houses, and close by runs a river which debouches near the Mergui Archipelago. Ascending the river's course, on either side are found rich deposits of tin, the stream itself forming the boundary between the British and Siamese dominions. Travellers proceeding eastward from Kraw to Taypoung, the port on the Gulf of Siam, experience great difficulty in procuring means of locomotion. After two or three miles through a clear and fertile tract, the route lies through dense forests of bamboo and other trees of luxuriant tropical growth. Then, for a distance of miles, the bed of the stream constitutes the only road, and travellers have to wade their way onwards for hours together. The stream, however, contains but little water. Its sides are steep and of rock, which walls it in to the height of ten feet. There are also numerous small falls. At tralia some £20,000 worth of tobacco against once to the market to impress coolies for the use the eighth or ninth mile lies the water shed of the of Siam. It is a small grassy plain, and from it to the Gulf of Siam the country is much the same as that which has to be passed to reach it from Kraw. There are one or two villages, but in general the soil is covered with jungle until the town of Resompy is reached, a place about twenty miles from the Gulf of Siam, but to which the tide reaches, and which is of considerable importance. This neighbourhood abounds in fuel, and it is from it that the King of Siam's steamers are supplied. This country, thus proposed to be railed over, it will be seen, is a very difficult one, but those who have examined it are of opinion that a cheap railway from sea to sea may be constructed. It is further urged that the construction of such a line should be undertaken by the Government of India, whose heavy disbursements for China Mail service it would considerably reduce, besides opening up a tract rich in its mineral productions, and cheapening Chinese goods and facilitating the importation of Chinese labourers into Burmah .- Phanix.

Indigo.-So far as the indigo manufacture is concerned, fine weather has prevailed in Bengal and Tirhoot. The prospects of the latter district especially continue excellent, and the crop will most likely be an excellent one. The factories in Bengal which are at work are getting better produce, but Burdwan and Midnapore, which suffered so much from the rain, have fallen off considerably in their expectations. From Benares the accounts continue gloomy, and kootees have been almost destroyed by the heavy rains. Prospects in the Doab are firm, and manufacture has commenced. The total out-turn for the season may be estimated at 100,000 to 110,000 maunds. The cultivation of the dye is also extending in Upper Scinde. The latest published report of the statistics of that province quotes the area under cultivation in 1861-62 as 6,600 beegahs, against 6,459 during the previous year. A beegah produces from fifteen to thirty seers and this sells at from Rs. 70 to 80 per maund. The local papers mention that, with some capital and enterprise, this branch of agriculture might be developed to a great extent in the Shikar-pore district. The capital of this district is a town of considerable importance, and a ready market would be easily obtained for the dye, as well as means of transport, which could be found in a branch of the Scinde canal passing close by the town. The suggestion thrown out by the local press is that some enterprising Europeans should establish a factory at Sukkur, also a town of great commercial importance, and where, in accordance with an order of Government passed in 1851, an annual fair is held, commencing on the 31st of January, and lasting forty-five days. As the town is on the banks of the Indus there would be no difficulty in obtaining means of transport, and there can not be the slightest doubt but that the establishment of a central factory in such a place would give an impetus to the trade. Whether, however, such a speculation would prove a paying one is a very different matter, for agriculture is far behind hand, and the cultivators evidently require too much looking after .- Englishman.

THE POLICE OF INDIA .- The cost of the police employed in India on the 1st of May, 1860, was discovered by the commission which was appointed in the August of that year to revise the system, to be in round numbers three crores and five lakhs of rupees. By a complete renewal of the system they estimated that this might be reduced to one crore and eighty thousand; but Lord Canning. thinking this an under estimate, named two crores as the more likely expenditure which it would be found necessary to incur. In the budget estimates a balance was struck between these diverse estimates, and two crores and fortysix thousand rupees were set down as the probable cost of a police force for all India. The matter was first submitted for Colonel Bruce's opinion, and he considered two crores and six lakhs a fair allowance, including some items which were not concluded in the commissioner's country between the Bay of Bengal and the Guif towns. In this estimate Lord Elgin concurs, in into camp. It so happened that the Sutlej steamer so far as he considered that it "ought" to suffice; but making due allowance for the looseness of calculations for which Indian officials are famous, he has expressed himself willing to allow two crores and ten, or even if good reason can be shown, fifteen lakhs. The amount is apportioned as follows :-

> Bengal (including Calcutta) ...Rs.42,50,000 Bombay (including Scinde and North Canara) ... 28,64,566 Canara) ...
> Madras (including city) ...
> N. W. Provinces ... 36,00,000 36 00 000 ••• ••• ••• Puniab 26,00,000 Oude and the Central Provinces--each 22,00,000 11 lakhs ...

> > Rs. 1,91,14,566

The remaining fourteen lakhs and a-half are distributed between the Deccan, Burmah, the Eastern Settlements, and "Sundries."-Englishman.

OPIUM.-In spite of the low prices of opium ruling in China, which do not give a return of more than about Rs. 1,300 per chest, clear of expenses, the gamblers have raised the price here and in Bombay to Rs. 1,550 and Rs. 1,600 respectively; and we (Englishman) hear that the 300 chests usually reserved for the French Government have all been applied for from the ensuing sale on 6th August. But these will most assuredly not be cleared, thus leaving only about 1,000 chests of Patna opium, in which alone the gambling takes place, to be put up at the sale. The object of this ruse is to raise the average sale price, which is more easily done on a small than a large quantity, as the wagers are principally laid on the average. In May, 1861, a similar game was played, the price being then forced up to Rs. 2,600 per chest; but a great portion of the opium was not cleared, and it had to be resold on account of Government at a fall of some Rs. 800 per chest, the loss being never recovered from the defaulters. There can be no doubt that transactions such as these are detrimental to the interests of Government, as also to those of legitimate traders, and those in authority are bound to use their best endeavours to check them. This may be easily effected by demanding at the sale that the deposit of 25 per cent. be paid in cash, instead of in promissory notes; and we would strongly urge the adoption of ome such measure.

DEATH OF THE RAJAH OF TIPPERAH.-Letters from the North-East announce the death of the Rajah of Tipperah, whose territory of Independent Tipperah lies between Comillah and Independent Burmah, having Sylhet and Cachar on the north, and Chittagong or Islamabad on the south. The British Government has no treaty with Tipperah. The reigning Rajah stands in a peculiar position, inasmuch as in addition to the hill territory known as Independent Tipperah, he is the holder of a very considerable zemindary in the district of Tipperah in the plains. Though independent, he receives his investiture from the British Government, and is required to pay a nuzzerana. The custom is to invest a Joob-Raj or heir apparent, and the Rajah is incompetent to do this until he has himself been invested by the British Government. The country is not held by gift from the British Government or its predecessors, or under any title from it or them, never having been subjected to the Moghul. The late Rajah was recognised by Government in 1849. Tipperah includes within its limits the country of the Kookies .- Phanix.

THE BAREE DOAB .- A brief communication from the Baree Doab, dated the 4th of August, informs us (Delhi Gazette) that the rains still continued most favourable. A heavy down-pour had occurred on the afternoon and night of the 1st idem, after three or four days of great heat, that enabled the zemindars to complete their sowings. On the 2nd and 3rd it was fine, but the monsoon was threatening on the 4th. Our correspondent adds with regret that cholera was showing itself somewhat extensively in the Doab. Several fatal cases had occurred in the town of Lahore, some at Kussoor, and villages to the estimate, namely,—the police for the Eastern cast, a few at Umritsur, and also at Ferozepore. Settlements, Thuggee and the three Presidency At the latter station the troops were ordered out was at the ghat, and Mr. Brown, the managing director, most obligingly offered his services to convey the European troops to any desirable place up or down the river. "Will you believe it," says our informant, "that his most opportune offer was declined, because such a thing had never been done before and the whole country was harried to furnish carriage to move the troops according to the authorised marches?"

UNATTACHED AND INVALID ESTABLISHMENTS We (Hurkaru) notice that Lieut. J. Moore, of the Unattached List, and the Invalid Establishment, has been allowed to retire on a pension of six shillings per day, and the extra bonus of £50 a year, i.e., on £159. 10s. Lieut. Moore only received his Ensigncy unattached on the 10th February, 1816, consequently on the 1st of October last he had done less than sixteen years' service. The rules of 1796, which Sir Charles Wood has lately been so particular about, require that an officer should have served twenty-two years in India for the pension of his rank. Lieut. Moore has had leave in Europe, which takes away from the service he has completed. An officer in India some time ago applied that he might be allowed to retire on a captain's pension and the extra £50, as he had completed twenty years' service in India, but his application was not even sent home, although he also was an invalid officer. His pay and bonus would have been £241 annually, instead of £408 out here, where his services are of no use to the State. We have heretofore contended that both the unattached and invalid establishments should be paid up, and the officers pensioned. which would be alike acceptable to themselves and profitable to the State. More than a lakh of rupees could thus be saved-and in these days we have a right to expect that the interests of Government should be respected as well as that of its servants.

STATISTICS. - The following EDUCATIONAL. figures show at a glance how many children are educated by the State at a cost of £250,000 and how many by Missions at a cost to the State of only £16,500. There are in all 30,000,000 of children in India who should be at school. Of these missionaries educate 100,000 and the State only 127,513. These are the details-for missionaries. The Church Missionary Society sustains no less than 781 schools, taught by 12 European and 846 native teachers, and containing about 27,000 children. The London Missionary Society has 319 schools, with 589 native teachers, containing about 15,000 children. The Wesleyan Society sustain 53 schools and 100 teachers, having an attendance of about 3,000. The Free Church of Scotland numbers in its schools 9,132, and the Baptist Mission 2,500, and if to all these are added schools connected with the Propagation Society, the Church of Scotland, the United Presbyterian Mission, and the Irish Presbyterian Mission, we get about 100,000 children under Christian education. For the State. In Bengal the number of colleges and schools is 281, and the average daily attendance of pupils is 14,498. In Madras there are 142 colleges and schools, and the average daily attendance is In Bombay, including Scinde, there are 610 colleges and schools, and the average daily attendance is 25,187. In the Punjab, including Delhi, there are 156 colleges and schools, and the average daily attendance is 8,301; and in the North-West Provinces, 2,944 colleges and schools, with an average daily attendance of 68,689; making a total of 4,131 schools and colleges, with an average daily attendance of 125,268. Then, including Agra and some others, we have a grand total of 4,158 schools and colleges, and 127,513 scholars. These figures are unanswerable. Let us have free trade in education: let the missionary schools have grants from the State in proportion to their numbers and standing.

RAILWAY TELEGRAMS .- The rule which prevented the railway companies in India from transmitting private messages by their telegraph lines has been rescinded. Government resolution of the 6th August abolishes the prohibition. All other conditions of the licences remain as heretofore, JHANSI, August 5.—Cholera has increased, I am sorry to say. Almost all the troops have gone into camp. The day before yesterday there were seven deaths in the 52nd and one in the Artillery. Yesterday only one or two. It is also very bad in the city, but nowhere else. It is very hot. We want rain; a week's good rain would perhaps drive the sickness away.

THE COMING MAN.—The Christian Intelligencer gives an account of the expected Mussulman prophet, Imam Maihdee. Imam Maihdee, also called Imam Akir-ooz-zuman, or the last Imam, and Sahib-i-zuman, Lord of the time, is prophesied of in the "Hudees," or sayings of the prophet Mahomed, as collected and explained by different compilers. He is expected to appear in the West (Arabia) in the thirteenth century of the Hijree Era; he will, the Mahomedans say, act as an Imam or leader of the Mahomedan religion, and destroy the Nusaras (Christians) after they shall have taken Mecca. Niamut olla Shaw, a Cashmeeree Mahomedan Fukeer, of celebrated sanctity, who died upwards of 400 years ago, has prophesied-and his divination is most commonly believed-that Imam Maihdee, or Shah Gurbee (the King of the West), will come in the Hijree year, 1280, which is 1863-64.

SUNGUM SINGH, the great dacoit, appears to care so little for the price set on his capture, that he goes about from district to district, heedless of risk-rumour says in the garb of a policemanand visits the courts and holds conversation with the civil officers. I suppose this is a shave, but still it is strange that he has not been captured yet, as he is known to be in the eastern parts of Oude. I dare say you have heard that the authorities have at last sanctioned an iron pontoon bridge over the Ganges at Mhow Sariah Ghaut, near Allahabad, on the imperial line to Fyzabad, which will complete the road in a manner worthy of such a magnificent thoroughfare. will be maintained all the year round; and both Oudh and the Allahabad districts will derive immense advantages from it .- Oudh Gazette.

The detachment that was in camp at the Taj suffered most severely, that at Secundra less, but that remaining in barracks least. The first crossed the river and pitched at Rambaug; since then the men have not suffered. In the event of the disease re-appearing they go by rail to Ferozabad. LIMITED TENURE.—The Gazette notifies that the tenure of the offices of agent for gun carriages, agent for gunpowder, and superintendent of the foundry will, as respects future incumbents, be limited to five years, and that such appointments may be retained on promotion to the rank of colonel regimentally, but will be vacated on promotion to the rank of colonel commandant, or on succession to the colonel's allowance. Also, that when an officer is granted permission to return to his duty by a particular ship, it is equivalent to granting him an extension of leave until the arrival of that ship in India.

FRENCH STEAMERS TO THE EAST.—The first steamer for Calcutta and China will leave Marseilles on the 19th of October, and that from Calcutta to Marseilles on the 3rd of November, and on the same date of every subsequent month. The following steamers have by this time left Marseilles to proceed round the Cape to take up their several stations:—Imperatrice, Donai, Cabodje, Hyduspes, Erymanthe, and Alphie, and they will of course be followed by others.

SCARCITY IN HOLKAR'S TERRITORY.—A very great scarcity of grain is said to prevail in the country of Holkar, and the people are suffering much in consequence. Many have died from want, while large numbers have left the territory. Holkar had issued orders for the better supply of grain in the town, and had adopted other measures for the relief of the people. He proposed to advance money to purchase grain, to be retailed at a low price. The migration of bodies of Holkar's subjects caused by want may have a good deal to do with the increase of village raids, reported in the outlying dominions of Scindiah.

THE New FORT GLOSTER MILLS COMPANY is the only company in Bengal which manufactures cotton cloth. After many failures in the past the Fort Gloster Mills fell into the hands of this company, and have been most profitable. Thanks to the cotton crisis, the directors have declared a dividend at the rate of 334 per cent. per annum.

Senious Frauds, it is believed, have been for a long time perpetrated in the Calcutta Stamp Office. Beharee Lall Dutt, an assistant, has been discovered and committed to stand his trial for having changed a stamp certificate, passed by the collector for two stamps of Rs. 1 and 2 respectively, into a certificate of the receipt of Rs. 344, for twenty stamps of 10 Rs. each, and twelve stamps of 12 Rs. each. The alterations were very coarsely made, and it was astonishing how the assistants in the office could have passed such a certificate. The altered certificate was brought for renewal on the plea that it had been spoiled, and the fraud was discovered.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN T. F. O. SCOTT.—We regret to notice the death by drowning of Captain T. F. O. Scott, of the Sylhet Light Infantry Battalion at Cachar. His death promotes Lieutenant G. C. Rowcroft, of the 41st Regiment of Native Infantry, to his captaincy, and a General List Ensign to his lieutenancy. Captain Scott was a very popular officer, and universally liked for his gentle and amiable qualities.

TELEGRAPH MESSAGES.—The Government of India has directed that telegraph messages intended for the Chamber of Commerce shall have precedence of all others in transmission, and press messages over all other messages after them.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?-The Governor-general has been puzzled of late by an application by the Bombay Government for a grant of 20,646 rupees, to be expended in karkoons and peons to assist in working off the arrears of judicial business which have been accumulating of late in that Presidency. His Excellency asks helplessly what possible use karkoons—whoever they may be—on 7 rupees a month and peons on 4 rupees can be in working off judicial arrears; and well he may! Rating the educational status of the inhabitants of the Bombay Presidency at a millennial degree of excellence, they can be nothing but copyists at that price; and unless the arrears to be worked off consist in a number of rough copies of magisterial decisions to be copied clean, we cannot see how they are to aid in the process. No wonder the Governor-general felt a mild doubt "as to the manner in which it is intended that the karkoons should assist the judges in disposing of the cases before them." Our wonder was excited in no small degree at hearing of the Bombay Government's extraordinary demand: but it was increased tenfold on hearing that Lord Elgin had acceded to it. "Judicial arrears," he truly observes, "are a great evil;" so in reliance on the experience and local knowledge of the Sudder judges he has "sanctioned the expenditure of twenty thousand rupees, in the hope that it will be effective in bringing about a reduction in those existing at Bombay." The whole affair is so in comprehensible that we can only repeat our sur The Bombay Government applies for twenty thousand rupees, to be expended in salaries to the peon and karkoons in driblets of four rupees and seven rupees per mensem respectively, to assist in working off judicial cases; and the Government of India, not only without understanding what use they can possibly be, but entertaining a very strong doubt as to their ability to be of any, sanctions the application.- EnglishA ROYAL "ALIAS."—Kings are not governed by the same laws as ordinary men, even after they have ceased to reign. By way of asserting his superiority to the ordinary run of mankind, his sex-Majesty of Oude has been indulging in two signatures of late—in his inflated moments, Sultan Aulum "Ruler of the World," of Garden Reach we presume; in his more rational moments Wajeed Ali Shah. This eccentricity, however, has been productive of some confusion in the public offices of Calcutta, and it has been found necessary to request his Majesty to be governed in this respect by the rules of ordinary mortals.

A Public Library has been established at Lucknow by Messrs, A. D. Moorzoondar and Co.

THE HOOGHLY COLLEGE lost its head master, Mr. T. P. Manuel, on the 1st August. He has been promoted to the head-mastership of the Calcutta Mahomedan College, of which Captain Lees is the principal.

INDIGO CROP.—The Allahabad Gyzette fears the indigo crop in those parts will not be an overabundant one, probably not an average one this year. The rains came on very late, and then too heavily for the young crop of indigo, which has suffered a good deal; the old plant is not a sufferer, but has rather improved; the manufacture will commence very shortly.

MEERUT.—The health of the station of Meerut is unprecedentedly good for this season of the year (August 15), especially among the troops. There have been no new cases of cholera or fever. This is doubtless owing to the admirable arrangement made by the Major-General commanding the district, the Brigadier commanding the station, and the minor officers of the executive upon whom devolves the duty of looking after the sanitary affairs so carefully presided over by the Commander-in-Chief. The labours of the medical men have been unremitting.

PESHAWUR, August 2.—We have been in camp running away from cholera since the 14 July. In Peshawur we had nine deaths out of thirty cases. After ten days without a symptom of it, we had three cases and lost one, and then changed ground. We shall not be very sorry to get back to quarters again; the last eight days have been excessively hot. Cases are diminishing in the city, and there have been a few straggling ones about the district.

MR. D. C. MACKEY.-We understand, says the Hurkaru, "that the facts upon which a criminal prosecution against Mr. D. C. Mackey, of Singhbhoom and the Assam Company notoriety, is based, has been submitted for the opinion of counsel. No delay will take place after this has been obtained. Whilst alluding to this subject we may mention that the Imperial Company, projected under the auspices of Messrs. DeMorny, Mackey and Co., has entirely collapsed. The land applied for by Mr. DeMorny on their behalf whilst he was a paid servant for the Assam Company has lately been handed over by the Crown to the latter, as being in fact the parties entitled to it. It appears questionable, however, if it be of a character suitable to tea cultivation. The application made by Mr. D. C. Mackey for seven thousand acres through the same agency has been allowed to lapse."

The High Courts.—By courtesy it would seem that all the Judges of the High Courts are to be styled Honourable, the Chief Justice alone being henceforth knighted. The Hon. Mr. E. D. Lautour, who has been officiating for a few weeks for the Hon. Mr. Loch, in the Bengal Court, has obtained leave of absence for six months. Sir Charles Jackson, after a tour in North India, will resign his appointment in the Calcutta Court in February, when a barrister Judge must succeed him.

Feroze Shah.—This uncaptured son of the ex-King of Delhi is, the Phoenix has good reason to believe, with Sooltan Aloned Jan at Heerat. His presence in that quarter should sufficiently account for the efforts recently made to prepare the Mahomedans of Upper India for another fight for the restoration of their raj.

LALLA JOTEE PERSHAD, the great Commissariat contractor, has been attacked by paralysis at Benares, and his recovery appears very doubtful.

BANGALORE, August 11 .- Last week has been a gala one here. A grand cricket match was played between the Madras and Bangalore elevens, in which the latter won easily. To make the visit of the Madrasces as pleasant as possible, the officers of the cantonment gave a series of theatricals and sports, in which leaping, running, hurdle races, &c., were the principal features. These afforded much amusement to a large concourse of the beauty and fashion of the station, no small amount of which we can boast. You are probably aware that Mr. Bowring has taken up his appointment as Commissioner; but we hear very little of his doings. Beyond the fact of his having taken up the subject of waste lands with considerable energy, and made a proposal thereon to those interested, which, it would appear, they are not inclined to accept, nothing has transpired as yet of military station; but our Executive Engineer is now bestirring himself, and a drain is in course of formation to carry off the filth and refuse of our very large native bazaar to a considerable distance into the open country. A new central gaol also been sanctioned by Government, capable of containing 4,000 prisoners. The Bishop of Madras has just paid us a visit, and made himself extremely popular by the interest he exhibited, especially in the schools of the regiments stationed here. Sir Hope Grant, too, our new Commander-in-Chief, arrived to inspect the troops; and previous to his arrival our morning sleep was rudely broken in upon for many days by the rattle of musketry, the roar of artillery, the rush of cavalry, the hoarse shouts of officers giving orders, which to our unsophisticated ears appeared to be always the same, but which, to do our military justice, they seemed thoroughly to comprehend, judging from the rapidity and exactness of the evolutions. A memorial fund is in course of being raised for the purpose of raising a statue or erecting a public building to the memory of the late Sir Mark Cubbon. For some time back the mornings have been cloudy, with high winds threatening rain; and to-day, while I am writing, the rain is coming down in torrents. -Times of India.

THE HIGH COURT .- The Madras Times of the 15th August says:—"This day will see the Supreme and Sudder Courts of Madras out, and to-morrow will see the new High Court in. The judges are to be sworn in to-morrow, and this evening's Gazette will, it is expected, contain the promulgation of the Charter constituting the court. The time which has elapsed since the arrival of the printed copies of the Charter in this Presidency has been, as we are informed, vigorously employed in preparing the new rules and remodelling the table of fees. With regard to the latter point the suitors will, we have reason to believe, find cause for rejoicing. The new High Court of Madras will enter upon its labour in a less hurried and more dignified manner than it was permitted the new Court at Calcutta to do. We wish it every success, and hope it will realise the high expectations which have been formed of it in so many quarters."

MAJOR A. R. THORNHILL has been appointed to officiate temporarily as resident at Hyderabad.

BERAR, Aug. 11.-A lusus nature in the shape of a calf with a double face has given rise to the most extravagant conclusions regarding the prospects of the season in this province. A famine is predicted by the hungry Brahmins, and feasts to appease the wrath of the god of rain are easily knocked out of the credulous lower classes; but as yet to no purpose apparently, for the rain seems as far distant as before this bright idea struck the knavish wretches. To make matters the more hard upon the poorer classes, a discount of half an anna is made by the village Wanee on each rupee presented for change, and no measures appear to be taken by the local powers to establish a licensed money-changer in every town or village of note to give proper copper change to the population under the recent resolution of the Supreme Government.

Coolie Imigration .- The Madras Times exposes the evils of the new regulations published in the Pondicherry Moniteur under which the French mean to recruit coolies in British India. For this object all Southern India is divided into four circles. The regulations provide for the confinement of coolies on their arrival at the depots, and for advances to them through the recruiting maistries. The British consular agent is entrapped into being a party to this pernicious system. As the coolies are confined in the depot, and have food and clothes provided them, the advance can only be necessary to obtain an additional hold upon the cooly in case of a desire to recede from his engagement and to reimburse the recruiting maistry out of the pockets of the cooly. A cooly is at liberty to leave the depot to communicate with the British authority "but only if accompanied by a watching peon who shall be responsible for his safe return." These regulathe new Commissioner's doings. Of late years tions made by Governor D'Ubraye demand the Bangalore has been losing its prestige as a healthy immediate attention of the Government of India. came down with great force.

THE RELIEF .- In the coming extensive relief contemplated amongst the native troops of the Madras Presidency, the 9th Regiment will be moved from Jaulnah to Kamptee, where their services may be required in keeping the police of those districts in order. Already has the aid of the 7th Regiment been called for.

HYDERABAD.—The Hyderabad correspondent of the Englishman mentions that a report has spread in the city of the arrival of an order from Mecca to celebrate the Mohurrum a second time, and this fact is connected with something hostile to the English. The report must be false, as the Mecca Mussulmans are Soonnees who look on the rites of the Mohurrum as idolatry. The Nizam and the bulk of the people in the Deccan are also Soonnees, while the Ameers are Shiahs. The minister, it is said, will prevent the observance of a second Mohurrum, but the report has caused much excitement amongst the soldiery, who expect fighting. Major Thornhill, the Assistant Resident, is to act as Resident till an officer is appointed permanently.

Mr. Branson, Junior, has been admitted a member of the Madras bar.

KURRACHEE, August 15 .- We have had a very welcome change in the weather again; the rain has been pouring in torrents since yesterday afternoon, and the fall bids fair to continue for a couple of days, unless we be subject to one of those marvellously sudden fluctuations which are the singular peculiarities in Sind weather. The roads and plains hereabouts may be aptly compared to so many vast sheets of water, the fall being steady and heavy. Considering the serious damages occasioned in Upper Sind by the rain we had about a fortnight since, it is to be feared this fresh instalment, however acceptable in other respects, will not be appreciated by the masses in the country, numbers having been rendered houseless by the copious falls which almost deluged certain districts the other day. Official reports continue to arrive with rather glowing accounts of the number of fields submerged, huts destroyed, bridges and embankments washed away, &c., &c. The tower of Meerpoor, we now learn, has been entirely destroyed by an inundation, and numerous other casualties are recorded and duly chronicled for the special edification of the authorities, and the information of the curious! The Deputy-Collector of Larkhana has furnished a very graphic account regarding the inundation of the Ghar canal on the night of the 9th of last month. From particulars forwarded by Mr. Daly, in an official report, it appears that the Ghar burst through its southern bank, thirty feet in thickness, and the impetuous flow of water which soon found its way into the surrounding localities bespoke the force of the angry torrent. On the morning of the 10th, despite the exertions to impede its progress, nearly the whole of Larkhana was submerged, and a large number of huts and substantial edifices came to grief; happily no lives were lost. The consternation occasioned by this miniature deluge was naturally intense, and the Larkhanaites, from all accounts, laboured under an apprehension that the flood-gates of heaven had been opened upon them with dire vengeance! Temporary expedients have, of course, been used to close the breach. Estimated damages occasioned by the inundation of the Ghat amount to Rs. 2,133 .- Times of India.

WEATHER IN SCINDE .- Rain has fallen very generally throughout Scinde during the last week in July. In the Hydrabad Collectorate the downpour was very severe from the 30th July to the 1st August, and caused considerable damage to houses and other property. The Jagheer of Meer Alli Bux, in Mahomed Khan's Tanda district, is reported to be quite submerged. Meerpore Khas the fort and the buildings inside have suffered a good deal. In the Shikarpore Collectorate rain fell from the 26th to the 29th

-When we were told that a SEDASHEGHUR.lighthouse, a custom-house, and a collector's cutcherry were to be erected before the setting in of the monsoon we knew what would be the result where no labourers were to be procured; nor was any one surprised to hear of the breaking up of Kyga ghaut road, which was constructed rapidly, for show only. We are glad to be able to state, however, that the district engineer has gone most energetically to work to make up for lost time. The acting head assistant engineer has been ordered down to Coondapoor to engage, if possible, 2,500 coolies, and 12,000 more are to be procured from this and other districts; so that 15,000 coolies will be ready to commence work in Sedasheghur and its neighbourhood as soon as the weather will permit, probably about the 5th or 10th of September. Still, however, much requires to be done in the way of procuring and preparing material. Chunam is very scarce and very dear along this part of the coast, and probably a few ship loads of devils' claw (Pteroceros) and bears' paw (Hippopus) shells will require to be brought from the neighbouring islands, where they are gathered and stored for exportation. It is probable that in no long time the expensive necessity of making chunam from shells may be done away with, by the discovery of limestone in the district, where certainly it ought to exist. There will be some difficulty also in procuring the requisite and large supply of bricks needed for the light-house at least, as laterite is too friable, and too easily decomposed for such a structure, although it would answer excellently well for the cutcherry and other buildings, and any quantity of it may be got from Honore. However, there is no doubt the district engineer will triumph over these difficulties in time, and it is only common fairness that he should be allowed time. Labour and material are not to be had in this enlightened district for the mere asking and paying; they must be long tried and patiently waited for. The Kyga ghaut, the Atcheway ghaut, and the Sedashegur works will be proceeded with at the same time. By-thebye, it will be a matter of some difficulty to procure the necessaries of life for the large invading force of fifteen thousand men in this benighted district .- Times of India.

NATIVE DURBAR AT DAPOOREE .- His Excellency the Governor held a durbar for the chief natives and gentlemen on the 20th August, at the Government House at Dapooree. About four hundred were present, including the Punt Pritheeneedhee of Satara (with eight ministers in attendance), the Raja Malajee Sahajee of Akulkote, the Jagheerdar of Juth, the Ameer of Sind, the two Vinchorkurs, the Punt Suchew of Bhore, the Punt of Kurrar, and Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Baronet, with his sons, and many of the nobles and sirdars of the Deccan. Several English offi cers were also present. After all were assembled, His Excellency entered and greeted his visitors as he passed to his seat at the end of the suite of rooms. Flowers, pan sooparee, and uttar were distributed, after which the Governor withdrew. The band played at intervals outside. The procession of the native chiefs to Government House was witnessed by many thousands of spectators. who lined the roads from the city to beyond Kirkee. The state elephants, carriages, and horses, and mounted attendants of the native nobility, made it a very lively spectacle. On the right of the Governor were the Punt Pritineedhee of Sattara, the Punt Suchew, of Bhore, the Nimbalkur, of Phultan, the Jahgeerdar Juth, the Chief of Vinchoor, the Phurniss, of Sattara, the Chaphulkur Swamy, the Poteniss, and other Sirdars of the first, second, and third classes, in the Deccan, and other natives of respectability. On his Excellency's left were the civil and military officers, according to rank, the members of the Legislative Council, the Ameers of Scinde, Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy and his family, &c., &c. The principal nobles were led in by the Hon. Mr. Robert. The prinson and Mr. Chapman, Collector of Sattara. Poona Observer.

ceded the rebellion in 1857. At far as could be done, they have been traced to the Nizam's dominions; and in order to obtain further information, which may strengthen the heads of the local authorities, I hear that Major Kemball, the superintendent of the police here, will leave without delay for the districts. Now more than ever, it occurs to me, it behoves the Government to pause before they insist on the recent order, which denudes Belgaum of the horse battery, being car-With the exception of those who may be personally interested in the advantages which may accrue to them by such removal, I believe that there is no man in Belgaum who does not deprecate the order, or question the soundness of the alleged reason on which it is based. True it is that, owing to the transfer of Mr. Tucker to Dharwar, the political management of the Southern Mahratta Country will be vested in an officer Mr. Havelock, at present holding the agency at Kolapoor] who has the reputation of being an able diplomatist, and perhaps is a match for the intriguing and irritable subjects of her Majesty in these parts.

THE HIGH COURT was inaugurated on the 14th August. Sir Mathew Sausse, Kt., H. Hebbert, Esq., Alex. K. Forbes, Esq., and Richard Couch, Esq., made their declarations of office in the Town-hall, the first as chief justice, and the others as judges of the High Court. The other two judges appointed by the Charter are Sir Joseph Arnould, Kt., and W. E. Frere, Esq. The High Court commenced its business on the 25th.

AHMEDABAD, August 16 .- The weather continues wet, but at times fearfully hot. The collector, Mr. Hope, has proceeded into the Dhundooka districts to settle some village boundary disputes, and the executive engineer, Mr. Barton, has gone to see the road between Gogo and Ah medabad that was lately put into repair. The libel case in which Mr. J. Z. Hewett, inspecting post-master Oodeypoor division, was plaintiff, and Mr. J. J. Fernandez, post-master of Ahmedabad, defendant, was adjusted in the Sudder Ameen's Court by Mr. E. W. Fern, on the 13th, by judgment being recorded against the defendant for the full amount claimed, and costs.

Kotree.-The pendant of the Government Flotilla at Kotree has been at last hauled down. The few remaining vessels now form a civil department, under the orders of the commissioner in Scinde. One of the tugs is still plying between Hyderabad and Kotree, and will continue to do so until the repairs of the steam ferry are completed, when, it is rumoured, they will be sent up country. Lieutenant Giles arrived at Kotree on the 9th August to receive charge of the remains of the Flotilla, and Captain Balfour left the same place by rail on the 10th.

PROBABLE INFANTICIDES .- It is proverbial that a Sindee considers it next to a calamity if his wife present him with a daughter, and we all recollect the stringent measures Sir Charles Napier had to adopt at the time of the conquest to put a stop to the practice of female infanticide in the province. Bearing these circumstances in mind, the suspicion has occurred to us that a great proportion of the deaths in the districts by drowning among children, of which we have to record from fifteen to twenty every week, are no more nor less than cases of infanticide, especially as the great majority of the victims are little girls. It seems strange that infants from twelve months up to two years of age can get drowned in a canal or dund while at play, as the police digests inform us from time to time. We do not mean to assert that the parents wilfully throw the little innocents in themselves, but it is very probable that they purposely leave them near the banks of such places, knowing full well that the poor things, attracted by the sight of water, will creep to the edge and then fall in. We hope we are mistaken in our apprehensions; but there is evidently good ground for suspicion that there is at least criminal neglect, if not foul play, at the bottom of these endless casualties.—Our Paper.

"JENKINS" AT POONA.—The ball for which Lady Mansfield issued her cards of invitation came off on the evening of the 22nd August. more brilliant assembly, we are assured by an enthusiastic correspondent, seldom graced the halls of pleasure; the stately matron and the blooming maiden, the old warrier and the young aspirant after fame, all wore on their features the glow of happiness. The native gentlemen, to whom every mark of respectful courtesy was accorded, appeared to enjoy with an equal relish the pleasures of the evening. The bands of the 25th and 26th regiments, kindly placed at Lady Mansfield's disposal by the respective colonels, continued from half-past nine to early dawn to fling over the scene of gaiety the charms of well selected music. Amongst the company were Sir Bartle and Lady Frere, the Hon. Mr. Frere and Miss Frere, Mr. and Mrs. Inversity, and Mr. and Mrs. Tristram, and several other members of the Legislative Council, as well as of the civil service. The military department was represented by Majorgeneral Hobson, Brigadier Heath, Colonel Thesiger, Colonel Raines, c.B., Colonel Stewart, Colonel Powell, Major Trower, and all the officers of the garrison, staff, or executive. Seldom had such a gathering of female beauty adorned the temple of Terpsichore; the elegance of their dresses, and the dignity and grace of their expression and movement, lent a charm to the scene of unsurpassed loveliness. About one o'clock the supper-rooms were thrown open, when every variety which could tempt the appetites of the joyful throng was displayed, and the constant popping of the Moselle corks told only too well that the hospitality of Sir William and Lady Mansfield was of no meagre description. About four o'clock the festive scene was brought to a conclusion, and all retired to dream on the vanished pleasures of the evening .- Poona Observer.

THE MEKRAN TELEGRAPH PARTY .- According to the Sindian, "the most absurd reports have been in circulation about the Mekran Telegraph party. These rumours, so far as we can learn, emanated from Kotree, and were to the effect that there had been 'a dreadful row at Sonmeanee,' the wires had been cut, and the posts placed hors-de-combat. Indeed, one account went so far as to say that there had been a general melce and that some of the party had been killed. Names were mentioned in a way that caused much anxiety and pain to the friends of the Telegraph party. We have no idea how these rumours ori-ginated, but they appear to have been 'bazar gup' for two or three days. We are happy to say that there is not, so far as we can learn, the slightest foundation for them. The line was completed to Sonmeance on the 27th July, and messages have been constantly received from Mr. Hewett's party. In none of them is there any reference to a fracas of any kind, and a message received on Monday reported all well. Mr. Walton, the superintendent of the line, left on the 5th August for Sonmeanee."

THE VETERINARY ESTABLISHMENT .-- As an experimental measure a Superintendent of the Veterinary Establishment of Bombay is appointed, with the title of "Principal Veterinary Surgeon," with a salary of Rs. 500 a month, Rs. 50 for an office, and travelling allowances. Mr. Hallen is appointed. His duty is frequently to inspect the horses of the artillery, and each regiment of Regular and Silladar Cavalry, for the purpose of inquiring into the general state of the horses, their dieting, shoeing, and the stable management, and specially to examine and report upon all remounts received during the year, and all horses proposed to be cast. He is also to examine all Government stallions, forwarding a report of the condition of each, and whether they are likely to improve the breed of horses in the districts. He will also report on the produce of mares served by Government stallions, and show the annual number of foals. All veterinary surgeons are subordinate to this officer.

THE MONSOON .- The fall of rain registered at Bombay up to the 23rd August is only fifty inches and fifty-seven cents., much below the average. In the districts the fall has been generally scanty, and the crops are stated to be withering.

MASTER J. WRIGHT, JUNIOR.—In a private letter dated Thursday, the 31st July, Edwin Horne Esq., gives the following particulars touching an accident to a shikar party, consisting of himself, his brother, Mr. Henry Horne, the latter's brotherin-law, Master Jones Wright, Jun., and Mr. Desimier, Jun., which resulted in the drowning of Mr. H. Horne and Master Wright :- "We started at six this morning in a boat for a place six miles from this; and not fifteen minutes after our leaving home the steamer Frere came down upon us, crushing the cockleshell we were in under her paddle-wheels, as if mast, beams, and a heavy chupper we had over us were so much straw. Desimier, who happened to be on the platform in the forepart of the boat, sprang on board the steamer at the instant of the collision. Harry, Jonas, and I were under the chupper; Harry was lying down, and I and Jonas were seated near him. Before we had time to rise we were carried under the paddle-wheel and right under the steamer. I picked myself up about a mile and a-half below Sukkur. I made a grasp at Harry as we were going down, but at that instant the chupper came on me with such crushing weight that I cannot tell whether I touched him. Harry and Jonas were never seen; all the rest escaped There is to be a court of inquiry in the matter.' -Our Paper.

DREADFUL SHIPWRECK .- RUTNAGHERRY, August 19.-On the afternoon of the the 16th instant the havildar of Malgoond, near Rutnagherry wrote to the police authorities at that station, that, on the previous night, a large ship had gone to pieces at Wurroda, fourteen miles north of Rutnagherry, and that several bodies had come on shore, among others that of a European woman, and that there was a large number of survivors. At Gunputty Pooley, which is a large temple on the sea shore, 130 survivors of the wreck were congregated together, among them the Arab captain and one Austrian passenger. The remainer were Malay passengers, and the crew, consisting of Malabar men and Arabs. The following facts were elicited :- The ship was the Columbus (700 tons burden, Nacoda Syud Bashumpher, owner Furuk Yesoor, of Jeddah), which sailed from Jeddah for Singapore about the 26th of July; she had a crew of forty men and 230 passengers, including two Austrian gentlemen and their wives, the remainder being principally Malay pilgrims returning from Mecca. The vessel was laden with salt, dates, wool, and glies The She had also twenty-five horses on board, and neither ship nor cargo, we understand, were in-Six days before the wreck the vessel sprang a leak, which on the third day increased so much, that the pumps were useless, and the salt having melted, the ship became water logged, and rolled so dangerously that the master determined to make for the nearest land. He put the ship before the wind, and crowded all sail on her for two days. On the evening of the 15th, the wind blowing hard at the time, with lightning and rain the lead told them they were in eight fathoms then seven, when they shortened sail, and finally six, when they dropped anchor, although they could see no land. The anchor dragged, and soor after the cable parted, when the vessel struck and went to pieces almost immediately. She lay in a shallow bay, where the black rock cropped up through the sand. For more than a quarter of a mile from the shore, along the whole bey, it was one waste of breakers. All on board tried to save themselves by clinging to portions of the wreck, and many succeeded in reaching the land. though wounded and bruised, by the surf hurling them ashore. The Austrian gentleman stated with much emotion that his wife, his brother, and his brother's wife were among the lost; his name is Otho Albin. They were on their way from Brod in Savonia, via Suez and Jedda, to Singapore to join a mercantile house there, probably choosing this route and a pilgrim ship from motives of economy. The whole party were badly off for food, as the villagers were not able to provide for them; the police authorities on the spot, however, soon mado ing the difficulties attending the navigation of the arrangements for their supply. Another party of Indus between Sukkur and Bukkur. The com-

DEATH OF SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEON HORNE AND | about thirty Malays were found at Malgoond, which is half way between Pooley and Wurroda. On coming within a mile of Wurroda some brown objects were seen lying on the sand within the wash of the waves. On going nearer they were found to be the bodies of a Malay, a Chinaman, and a Chinese woman, all perfectly naked, and all with their skulls fractured, and fearful bruises on body and limb. For the next mile it was the same : every few hundred yards men, women, and children all quite naked, frightfully wounded and bruised, lay dead on the sand and among the rocks in every conceivable attitude. Nearer the place where the vessel broke up were dead horses and other animals, and just opposite to where she struck, well up on the beach, was a large pile of broken beams, spars, ribs, and planking, and tightly jammed between them, and under them, the dead bodies of men and horses, sheep, goats, and fowls, Persian cats, Manila dogs, and large rats, all beginning to decompose. Upon the grass at the top of the beach, above this horrible heap, were about twenty bodies that had come on shore the previous day, among them the bodies of Maria and Annette Albin, the Austrian women; and here we notice with pleasure an instance of delicacy and respect to Europeans evinced by the villagers, or by the native police of the place. All the many dead Malay women as well as men were lying quite naked over the beach, but these two white women were reverently covered and laid by themselves. Nor was this done to please Europeans, for no European was expected so soon upon the spot, and the surviving Austrian was three miles off. One of the women, a young creature, except for the cloth thrown over her and a pair of stockings and boots which she wore, was quite naked, and both the poor creatures' bodies were fearfully bruised and cut. Decomposition had begun, and there were no means of conveying their remains to Rutnagherry: so a wide grave was dug, and, their few ornaments being removed, they were laid in it together, and a bit of broken white painted spar placed at the head and another at the foot of the grave. Before the earth was filled in, the missing body of the husband of one of them was washed on shore, and he was laid with them. Like all the rest he was quite naked, the clothes having been frayed off his body by the violence of the surf. His name was Matthias Albin. Large pits were dug close to the beach for the other bodies, which, if the sea had given them all up, must, I fear, number nearly a hundred; there were then sixty-four, of whom twelve were women, on the beach and in the surf. It was with difficulty the vultures could be kept off them. Some packages of was and dates had washed up, but they were much damaged, and there was little of any value among the large quantity of fragments of the ship and broken boxes. All were placed in charge of a sufficient party of police. The survivors were carried to Rutnagherry, as there was not food enough for so many in the small villages where they were. They all arrived at that station, ex cept one or two sick, and were placed in a bunga ow that happened to be vacant, and in two mosques The Austrian, Otho Albin, Mr. Reid has kindly clothed and taken into his own house. police apothecary is attending to the sick. by no means easy to dispose of all these poor people. Almost all wish to go to the Malabar Coast, where they will find vessels for Singapore. If the steamers which are coming down at the end of the month can take them to Cochin, there will be some difficulty about their fares. is no doubt that the magistrate will have to assist them; for, however willing the European and native community of Rutnagherry may be to afford assistance, the former are few, and the latter far from rich. Some natives fed the unfortunate people last night and this morning, and the magistrate will, it is believed, call a meeting to-morrow to see what farther can be done. Times of India.

THE NAVIGATION OF THE INDUS .- Government has sanctioned a considerable outlay for diminish-missioner in Sind left Kurrachee on the 19th August for Sukkur, accompanied by H. N. B. Erskine, Esq., Assistant Commissioner, Colonel Tremenhere, Chief Engineer, Lieutenant Bonus, Deputy Consulting Engineer Sind Railway, W. A. Fenner, Esq., Forest Ranger, and other gentlemen, the object of their visit being to test the velocity of the current at the Buckree, and the inspection of several important irrigational canals in that part of the province.

TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.--Mr. Mann. Superintendent of Telegraph in Sind, is compelled by ill health to proceed to Bombay on medical certificate for a short time; he leaves by the next steamer. The office of the superintendent will be removed to Kotree, and be placed under the charge of Mr. Todhunter, the senior inspector in DESPERATE AFFRAY.—On Friday, August 15th, one of the many bad characters prowling about Kurrachee induced a young sepoy of the 1st Beloches to join him in effecting the theft of a camel. They seized the animal and rode off, but were soon pursued and overtaken, when a desperate conflict followed, in which the two men wounded a peon as well as a subadar, a jemadar, and a sepoy of police, before they could be made prisoners of. We understand that the Belooch, who is a young man of only one year's service, has borne a good character since his enlistment, and never had his name entered in the "Defaulter's Book." companion was turned out of the corps some months ago. Major Marston has promoted the peon, who received a bad cut on the head, to the rank of naique.

A MUNIFICENT OFFER. -- Mr. Munguldass Nathoobhoy, an opulent local banker, has made an offer to Government to fund 20,000 rupees for the purpose of establishing a travelling fellowship in connection with the University of Bombay, to be held for three years.

MEERPORE WASHED AWAY .- Intelligence has been received from Major Green, Political Superintendent, under date the 9th August, of the destruction of Meerpore, in the Sind Frontier dis-The disaster has been caused "by the water of the inundation percolating through the ground," as the bund erected round the town is intact. The Government records and treasure have been transferred to Mobaruckpore.

EUPHRATES NAVIGATION .- The Phanix understands that a number of steamers for the navigation of the Euphrates and its confluents are expected at Bagdad. They are being sent out by the English firm of Lynch and Co. The Turkish authorities, especially Nimuk Pacha, are said to look upon the enterprise with an unfavourable eye.

DEATH OF MR. T. A. COMPTON, By. C. S .- The following particulars of the accidental death, by drowning, of Mr. Thomas Abingdon Compton, Acting Judge of Poona, have been received from an authentic source. Mr. Compton, who was an excel ent swimmer, appears to have gone out early to bathe in the river. After a time, as he did not return, a search was instituted, and his shirt and two towels were found where he had placed them, in an orange tree close to the bank of the river in the compound of his house. An alarm was then raised, and later in the day his body was found lying close under the bank, clothed in a pair of bathing drawers. He appears to have been seized with cramp, and to have sunk before he could reach the shore.

MR. JOHN WOOD .- Our Paper is informed that John Wood, Esq., Agent and Superintendent of the Indus Steam Flotilla, has been appointed to superintend the affairs of the "Telegraph to India Company" at the port of Bombay. It further learns that the project of extending the Red Sea telegraphic cable to Kurrachee has been abandoned, and that it is intended to connect the line with that of the Mekran coast enterprise at Gwadel.

Pending a reference to Government, officers commanding the new regiments of the line will assemble committees of paymastership, in accordance with para. 33, pages 12 and 13 of the explanatory directions appended to War-office regulations, dated July 1, 1848, forwarding their orders for the C. in C.'s confirmation.

Regimental Depots.

Officers commanding regiments will forward to the Adjutant general H.M.'s Forces, the names of captains, lieutenants, cornets, and ensigns in corps in which the establishment of these latter ranks have been completed, whom it is proposed to appoint to their depots in England is as follows:—

The establishment of depots is as follows: Cavalry. Infantry 1 captain. 2 captains. 1 lieutenant. 2 lieutenants. 2 ensigns. 1 cornet.

The C. in C. in India has the satisfaction to publish to H.M.'s Forces in India a G.O. from H.R.H. the General C. in C. on the completion of the transfer of the European troops of H.M.'s Indian to H.M.'s British service.

It is a source of much gratification to H.E. that this important measure is accompanied by a very liberal promotion of the officers who volunteered for their representative general service regiments, and for general service.

The transfer of the late Bengal artillery, and the consequent promotions, have already appeared in general orders. In the new regiments of cavalry and infantry no less than three majors have been promoted to be lieut. cola.; fifteen captains to be majors; sixty-two lieutenants to be captains; fifteen ensigns to be lieutenants.

The rise in the regimental steps of the different ranks, consequent on the promotions and changes, has been in some regiments very considerable.

Sir Hugh Rose, foreseeing that there would be vacancies in the several grades of the new regiments, had the honour to submit to his Royal Highness the General Comman ling in Chief that it would be a great boon were the Queen most graciously pleased to grant these promotions to officers of H.M.'s Indian service who had volunteered for their representative regiments or for general service.

H.R.H. was pleased to accede most readily to this request, and authorized H.E. to make these promo-

The C. in C. in India congratulates, sincerely, these regiments on their union with the British army, and their entry on a career which will open to them a wider sphere for giving proofs of their devotion to their duty, and to the cause of their Queen and country. He feels assured that, whenever the opportunity offers, they will prove themselves worthy, in other fields, of the illustrious name which the British army has ever won for itself in India.
"General Order.

"The General C. in C. has received H.M.'s commands to make known to the British army serving in India, that the arrangements for consolidating the European forces of the Crown in that country have now been completed.

"H.R.H. hails with satisfaction an event which he trusts may be conducive to the best interest of the empire, whilst it will be of advantage to the troops whom it may concern.

"He feels persuaded that the glorious deeds of arms for which the line and local troops have been ever conspicuous will not be forgotten by them, now that they are about to form one united army; and that the only feeling of rivalry which will hence-forth exist between the various corps, will be a high spirit of emulation as regards discipline and good conduct during peace, and of gallant bearing and devotion, should their services be hereafter called for in the field.

In the name of the army, the C. in C. most heartily and cordially welcome to the ranks of the general service of the Crown, the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers of the local services of the three presidencies of India.

(Signed) "George, gen. C. in C."

Royal Artillery.-Circular Memorandum.

Addressed to the general officers commanding troops, and to officers commanding Royal Artillery at home and abroad.

General Number 203.

Horse Guards, May 10, 1862.-1. H.R.H. the General C. in C. has much pleasure in finding that the report of the inspector general of artlliery, as to the general efficiency of the regiment, is confirmed by the annual returns received from the several brigades. A large proportion of the regiment has, during the past year, undergone the prescribed course of captilling and where contain betteries have not fully redrilling, and where certain batteries have not fully completed the course, satisfactory reasons for their not having been able to do so have been given. The necessity of detaching small parties of artillery in isolated forts at some stations, and the demand for a large proportion of the artillery for ordinary garrison duties at others are two of the obstacles which have prevented the course of drills being in some instances completed.

There is a difficulty in obviating the former, but as regards the latter, H.R.H. wishes to impress on general officers in command, that in view of the great advances daily making in the science of artillery, the thorough instruction and frequent ex-ercise of the artilleryman in his special duties, is more than ever indispensable to his efficiency as a

With this view, a carefully considered course of

With this view, a carefully considered course of annual drill has been laid down, on the lowest scale considered compatible with efficiency, for the guidance of commanding officers of artillery.

2. The Right Hon. the Secretary of State for War, in concurrence with H.R.H., has authorised the issue of certain stores, models, books, &c., to brigades; the receipts of these will give the commanding officers greater facilities for aflording more advanced instruction to their men.

Great exertion is called for on the part of both officers and men by the general distribution of rifled cannon, which has taken place during the past year, so that every artilleryman may make himself tho-roughly acquainted with the care and management of these powerful guns, and the preparation and use of the ammunition and stores connected with them, and that on all occasions they may be used with the greatest advantage.

The artilleryman must henceforth bear in mind The artificryman must nencerorth tear in mind that he will have to contend with artiflery of far greater precision than in any previous war, and that the greatest accuracy and quickest application of his own means will be necessary to maintain superiority and insure success.

These means have been provided; his own exer-

These means have been provided; his own exertions must turn them to the greatest advantage.

3. Officers commanding brigades will be called upon, from time to time, to detail officers and noncommissioned officers to undergo the long course of instruction at the school of gunnery, and they will select such only as, in their opinion, are most likely to be able, after being themselves instructed, to impart the knowledge they have acquired to others.

In the event of officers or non-commissioned officers of the long course being found after a reserve.

In the event of officers or non-commissioned officers of the long course being found, after a reasonable time, to have made inadequate progress, or showed decided inaptitude for instruction, or want of energy and interest in the pursuit of information, they will be recommended to rejoin their brigades.

4. By the reports of practice received from the several brigades, increased anxiety to expend to the greatest advantage the ammunition granted, appears in most instances to have manifested itself.

in most instances to have manifested itself

in most instances to have manifested itself.

It behoves every officer, non-commissioned officer, and gunner to make himself acquainted with all the stores and ammunition with which he has to deal; this remark is called for, in consequence of an instance having occurred in which the bursting charges of the new pattern diaphragm shrapnel shell (60 drams) were issued and used with the diaphragm shells of the old pattern (the proper bursting charge of which is 80 drams); the shells, consequently, did not burst. not burst.

The store department is responsible that the stores and ammunition in their charge are in good and serviceable condition, but commanding officers of artillery are answerable that the stores and amnunition which they receive are on all occasions those which they require, and which are proper to

5. Whilst impressing upon commanding officers 5. Whilst impressing upon commanding omeers the necessity of every officer, non-commissioned officer, and gunner being fully and carefully instructed in their special duties, his Royal Highness desires also to draw attention to the setting up and marching drill of the men, which, he trusts, will not be overlooked.—By command of

2. Officers belonging to departments for which a particular uniform is laid down in the Queen's Regu-lations of 1861 are required to conform to the dress prescribed therein, with the exception of the alterations noted in the circular memorandum shove

8. H.E. takes this opportunity to remark on the diversity of style of head-dress adopted by officers of the staff since the introduction of the Ellwood helmet. To assist as far as possible in establishing uniformity in this article of dress, a sealed pattern of helmet, on which a white pugree is to be worn, has been lodged in the office of the adjutant general at Poona, as well as at the shops of Messrs. Watson and Co., military outfitters, Bombay, Poona, and Kurrachee, from which pattern no deviation will be permitted.

CAPTAIN ARTHUR CONOLLY.

No one who has read Mr. Kaye's standard history of the Afghan war-and who is there that is not familiar with that admirable work? -will easily forget the touching narrative of the imprisonment of Captain Conolly and Colonel Stoddart, by order of the Khan of Bokhara. The latter officer, it will be remembered, was despatched from Teheran by Mr., now Sir John McNeill, in the hope of inducing that barbarous chief to release his Russian captives, and conclude a friendly treaty with the British Government. The mission failed in every respect, partly through the haughtiness of the envey, but principally in consequence of the disasters sustained by our arms in Afghanistan. Colonel Stoddart was thereupon subjected to the most atrocious outrages, and for a time confined in a well swarming with noisome reptiles, reserved for common malefactors and for criminals of the deepest dye. His detention had endured for three years, when news arrived of the outbreak at Cabul, and from that moment his fate was sealed, though it was not until the 17th of June, 1842, that he was put to death by decapitation. He did not, however, suffer alone. One of the most chivalrous and noble-minded officers of the Indian army, Captain Arthur Conolly, a man of rare gifts and accomplishments, and fired with an ardent love of all that is good and great, had been sent by Sir William Macnaghten to Kokund, by way of Khiva, with instructions to diffuse through Central Asia "a correct impression of British policy and strength, as it bears upon Asia and on Europe, with reference especially to the late interference in Afghanistan." He was further directed to establish amicable relations with the "chief Oosbeg powers," and endeavour to prevail upon those turbulent tribes to form a league for their mutual defence against all enemies, and notably against Russian aggression—at that time the bugbear of Anglo-Indian diplomacy. From Kokund Captain Conolly proceeded to Bokhara, in obedience to orders from Cabul, though Lord Ellenborough afterwards ungenerously, and even in abject terms, repudiated his mission, and affected to regard him as an ordinary traveller, emperilled by an unseasonable love of adventure. This brave and amiable officer shared Colonel Stoddart's captivity, and survived him only a few minutes-but long enough to reject with scorn the offer of his life on condition of embracing Islam. Of his sad fate there has long been no reasonable doubt, unless, perchance, affection may at times have whisfatal token had not been received. This token | ral of the inspecting officers, and complains of | have in all ages and countries been too prone was "the little Prayerbook" alluded to in his letter to his brother John, of the 28th March, 1842, and which he carefully concealed about his person. With this he had resolved never to part except with his latest breath, and his friends had been warned not to accredit any rumours of his death, unless corroborated by the presence of the book he valued so dearly. Even that last shred of hope, if any still remained, has now been reft from his sorrowing friends. The token has found its way through Central Asia and across the Russian Empire to the hands of a near relative of the ill-fated Stoddart, by whom it is justly prized as the most touching and appropriate memorial of a good and gallant Christian gentleman. For fifteen years it had remained in the possession of persons entirely unconscious of the interest attached to the relic, but at last, by a fortunate accident, it has reached those who, of all men, are most competent to appreciate its associations. With what a melancholy satisfaction must they have greeted its arrival.

ENGLISH, PURE AND UNDEFILED.

THE Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette bids fair to become ere long a literary curiosity. We had occasion the other day to notice an elaborate narrative of the pains taken to alight upon a certain rich vein of Galena in the Tenasserim provinces, and of the ultimate discovery that the mineral so earnestly sought after was utterly worthless. Since then another Supplement has been issued containing the report of Commander Jewett, of the Bengal steamer Ganges, on the navigation of the Kosseara river. It appears that Brigadier Showers had applied for some information on the subject, addressing his inquiries to Captain Jewett at Phenchoogunge, "but which came to hand in Calcutta, and thereby causing this delay in answering it." In reply the worthy seaman observes:—" I gathered as much information as I could regarding Sylhet being as closely approached as practicable for the convenience of the troops, and on inquiry found that Phenchoogunge, a village on the Kosseara River, was the nearest place commatable (sic) that would admit of steam navigation; and all that I could surmise from the different reports having a satisfactory appearance I resolved on venturing it." Our readers will, doubtless, rejoice to learn that the venture proved successful, and that the river was discovered to be perfectly safe and navigable up to that point. There is not even any necessity for the establishment of a coal depot at Phenchoogunge, "as vessels could always carry their own fuel from Dacca to thence and back." Surely there could be no good reason for exposing the unfortunate skipper's bad English in a sort of moral pillory, at the expense of the State. The fact that the Kosseara River was practicable for steamboats up to a certain height could have been stated in three lines, instead of being spread over a whole page of ungrammatical verbiage. Possibly, however, the editor of the Official Gazette is too great a man to speak, or write, the vernacular tongue of his own country. In this respect, at least, he resembles his Excellency Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B., Commander-in-Chief of H.M.'s Forces in India. Sir Hugh pered a hope that he was still alive, for the is disappointed with the returns made by seve-

the meagreness of the confidential information which should be appended under the head "General Observations." To this column his Excellency refers for the names of those officers "who evince a marked knowledge of their professional duties and zeal in performing these, as well as of those who have not given proof of the same good disposition." Is not that a perspicuous and graceful sentence, worthy of one who has distinguished himself as a clever diplomatist as well as an able general and brave soldier? Nor is the last paragraph of this General Order particularly correct; but on further consideration we are disposed to think that Sir Hugh Rose is only guilty of complicity in affixing his signature to a specimen of composition that would have disgraced a schoolboy, and that the real culprit is Lieut. Col. E. B. Johnson, Adjutant-general. "I am to add," says Colonel Johnson, in truly official phraseology, that "full information is to be given of all officers who evince aptitude, zeal, intelligence, and knowledge of his duties." A knowledge of the simplest rules of grammar may not be a branch of military duty, but in this country it is held to be indispensable to every man who wishes to be treated as a gentleman. The plea of carelessness is as bad as that of ignorance, especially in a document that is intended as a reprimand to regimental officers for carelessness on their part. Nor is this the first time we have been startled by the slovenly diction that passes for English at head-quarters. Could not the editor of the Indian Punch, who resides, we believe, at Simla, be prevailed upon to correct the Commander-in-Chici's Circulars before they are issued from the Adjutant general's office? Or, what might be still easier, could he not be induced to accept Sir Hugh Rose and Colonel Johnson as contributors, and insert their joint productions as the pièce de résistance in each number? How is it that the schoolmaster who has been so long a time abroad has not yet reached India?

THE ARMY.

No argument was more warmly urged by the advocates for the amalgamation of the Company's European troops with the Royal Army than that the moral tone of both officers and men is liable to be deteriorated by serving without hope of change in the enervating climate of India. Discipline, it was urged, is apt to become lax where troops are stationed in the midst of a conquered and inferior race, and where the humblest private looks upon himself as a superior being to the native aristocracy, and almost of a different clay to the humbler ranks of the population among whom he is chiefly thrown. That there is much truth in this statement cannot be denied, but unfortunately for its propounders it is the newly arrived men and regiments who assume these lordly airs. Older residents in the country come to take an interest in the people, and err rather on the ground of too much kindliness and sympathy. At the same time it is only too evident that discipline does materially suffer, partly owing to the heat of the climate, but far more so to the absence of an outside public as the censor morum and supreme Court of Appeal in all social questions. They who live by the sword to establish their own standard of honour and morality, something on the principle of a sliding-scale regulated by the peculiar conditions of each case. The highest offence of which any officer can be guilty is to contravene the private code of military honour, and next to that to violate the rules and regulations of the profession. The third class of misconduct refers to the relations of military men with civilians, in which the former claim for themselves a far greater licence than they are disposed to accord to those out of uniform. In their every-day professional life, and in their mutual intercourse as brother officers, they affect a tone of chivalrous purity and uprightness which the civil community can only admire without presuming to imitate. Possibly a cynic might object that, just as a nice man has been defined as a man of nasty ideas, so this ostentatious worship of honour indicates a consciousness of moral weakness and instability. Several cases, indeed, have occurred of late to shake the belief of the public in the vitality of military rectitude. We have seen officers of hitherto unimpeached veracity making assertions on oath which are directly afterwards contradicted also on oath by other officers whose veracity is equally unquestioned. The most startling and comprehensive instance was given in the court-martial on Captain Robertson; but scarcely inferior in any respect is the scandal arising out of the proceedings at the trial of Captain Smales, of the Inniskilling Dragoons. The swearing and counter-swearing was most precise and positive, and yet related only to facts. On one side or the other perjury must decidedly have been committed, and with perfect deliberateness. Regiments appear now-a-days to break up into cliques, and then truth is confined within very narrow limits. So long as a man is true to his clique he has done all that military honour requires of him. He is allowed to look at every question through his own coloured spectacles, and according as they are red, blue, or green, so do all objects appear to him, and so does he describe them as actually existing. But what is the meaning, what will be the end of all this? There is something radically wrong throughout the whole system. While officers are quarrelling among themselves, the non-commissioned officers oppress and harass the men, and the latter avenge themselves by murder. The Russian Government has been defined as an autocracy tempered by assassination, a definition which will soon be applicable to the lower grades of the military hierarchy. But unless a higher tone be intro duced into the home service, it is not easy to perceive how the Indian service is to be improved by the greater frequency of reliefs. Courts-martial have certainly occurred much too often under Sir Hugh Rose's administration, but the causes are not altogether of a local origin. Is it not possible that the practice of exchanging from one corps to another is a good deal to blame for all this? If so, the old Company's system was, after all, the

MR. S. LAING AT MANCHESTER.

On Thursday, the 18th, a special meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce was held in the Mayor's parlour of the Town-hall, Manchester, Mr. Laing, late Financial Minister for India, being present by invitation to receive an address of congratulation on the success which had attended his policy.

Mr. Goadsby, the Mayor, presided, and among an almost unprecedentedly large attendance of members of the Chamber were Mr. H. Ashworth (the President), Sir Elkanah Armitage, Mr. Cassels, Mr. Maclaren, Mr. John Pender, Mr. Bazley, M.P., Mr. Atherton, Mr. Worthington, Mr. Reid, Mr. John Slagg, and Mr. Hugh Mason.

The Mayor having opened the proceedings, The following address was read by the Secre

"To Samuel Laing, Esq., &c., late Financial Member of Her Majesty's Indian Council.

"Sir,—When in the month of September last you were about to resume your arduous duties in conducting the financial affairs of India, and courteously granted an interview to the members of this chamber, they listened with much gratification to the comprehensive and statesmanlike views which you enunciated on that occasion.

"The soundness of those views has been proved by the large measure of success with which your policy has been attended; and, although you have been obliged to retire from the scene of your labours before your plans had attained their full development, you have reason to feel proud that you have placed the finances of India on a footing which inspires just confidence in the future.

"In the address which this Chamber had the honour of presenting to you much importance was attached to the necessity of largely curtailing military expenditure, and, at the same time, of exercising a wise liberality in urging forward the execution of reproductive works. The impolicy of restricting the trade of India by the imposition of excessive duties was at the same time fully pointed out.

"The members of this Chamber heard with satisfaction that you entirely concurred in those opinions, and they rejoice that you have since been enabled to reduce those duties, which, in your reply, you characterised as being defensible only as a temporary expedient for the purposes of revenue.

"The members of this Chamber feel bound gratefully to acknowledge how consistently you have adhered to those enlightened principles of political economy, and they would express their hope that your health may be speedily re-established by your return to England, and that, for many years to come, whether at home or abroad, full scope and opportunity may still be afforded for the application of your experience and the exercise of your talents in the administration of the affairs of Her Majesty's eastern empire.

- "HENRY ASHWORTH, President.
- "MURRAY GLADSTONE, Vice-President, "HUGH FLEMING, Secretary."

MISCELLANEOUS

COTTON FROM COCHIN CHINA .- A communication from Cochin China says that the cotton plant grows spontaneously in that country, and that consequently France may find there a sufficient quantity of the precious commodity to render her independent of any foreign supply. The cotton grown in Cochin China belongs to the species known in commerce as short silk. Notwithstanding the imperfect manner in which it is cultivated and prepared, it already rivals the produce of New Orleans. It is soft and silky, of a white colour, and its thread is long. After a two years' war, Lower Cochin China alone exported 2,000,000 lbs. weight. The inhabitants of the country have hitherto attached no importance to the cultivation of cotton. The natives content themselves with spinning with a wheel as much as they require for their own use. It appears further that the growth of cotton is not confined tire country is suited to its production.

PLYMOUTH, Sept. 17.—The auxiliary steamer Jason, 2,665 tons, J. T. Hurst, commander, belonging to the East India and London Shipping Company, passed and landed her pilotat 5 A.M. this morning, having made the run down Channel in twentynine hours. She had a full general cargo, and about ninety passengers. She also carried a supplemental mail to the Cape of Good Hope. From the well-known qualities of the vessel it is anticipated she will make a speedy and prosperous voyage to her destination.

SALT TRADE WITH CHINA. -We subjoin the contents of a letter on this important topic, which holds out the expectation that English manufactured salt may still become an article of import, and available to the teeming population of that empire. We have so frequently endeavoured to impress upon our Government the necessity of making arrangements with the Chinese authorities, in order to give salt a fair trial in their markets, that we can adduce no further arguments in support of our views beyond what are corroborated in the letter referred to, and to the fact that the import of salt into China would evidently be an unmixed good, interfering with no vested interests there, giving additional markets to our salt manufacturers, and affording freight to our shipowners, who stand so much in need of it to that quarter of the world. With the successful experiment of Calcutta before our Government, and the well-known energy of the Salt Chamber, we cannot doubt that this new branch of trade will soon be open to British enterprise, and tend to multiply our commercial relations with the Celestial Empire: - "Shanghai, July 8, 1862.- I arrived here only a few days ago, and immediately called at the Custom-house and inquired for Mr Lay, but was informed by Mr. Fitzroy, the acting inspector, that that gentleman is still in England, and that Mr. Hark, his representative, is hourly expected from Hankow, and, after staying here a few days, it is his intention to proceed to Pekin direct, when he is again to bring before the Chinese authorities the question of admitting British salt into their country , and endeavour, if possible. to cause them to agree to wake Shanghai the depôt for receiving it if only as a trial; he is to take with him the samples provided for me, and allow them to judge of the great superiority of our salt over that of their own manufacture. I am to have an interview with Mr. Hark immediately upon his arrival, and to explain to him such matters connected with our trade that he may think will be useful in his negotiations. The native salt appears to be a very precious article of commerce; it is coarse, dirty, and very inferior in appearance (in a few days I hope to procure a quantity and send you a sample), and sold here at 1 tael, about 6s. 2d. per picul of 133½ lbs., and up the country it is considerably dearer. The entire salt trade of the empire appears to be under the control of the Imperial Government, which maintain a large body of excisemen and officers in this service. The manufacture is conducted on the sea coast and on the banks of rivers near the sea. The ground is levelled, and at high tide the sea-water flows over it, and when covered labourers are set to work to stop the dam. After this water has been exposed to the sun for some time it evaporates, and leaves upon the ground a crust of salt. This is scraped together and packed in heaps or stacks, the property of Government, by whom it is farmed out to merchants, who, of course, extort as high a price as possible from the consumers. The ratio of duty charged, or the total amount collected, I have not yet been enabled to ascertain. It is a general opinion that the admission of British salt into China would be one of the greatest boons that could be bestowed upon its teeming population; and to procure such a blessing for so vast a portion of the human race is worthy of the greatest efforts of philanthropists, &c. I would strongly urge that no exertion be spared to impress upon our Government the necessity of immediately again requesting the Chinese authorities (now while the fact of our troops having rendered such well timed assistance in driving back the rebels from this and other cities is still fresh upon their memory) that this very valuable article of commerce be admitted nto the treaty. After my interview with Mr. Hark I will again address you, also upon his rereturn from Pekin; meantime, if you have any suggestion for my further guidance, I would be greatly obliged if you will address to me, &c."-Laversool Albion.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the posttion and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets - Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and variabled £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, evil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmali is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA: compiled

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE only news of general interest received by the Calcutta Mail of the 22nd August relates to the organisation of the Staff of the Royal Artillery in India. The new rules are briefly these. The present appointment of Presidency Commandant of Artillery is to be abolished; and for the Presidency Commandants there are to be instituted four Inspectors of Artillery-two for Bengal, and one for each of the other Presidencies. These inspectors, who must be regimental colonels belonging to brigades serving in India, will be nominated by the respective governments at the recommendation of their respective commanders-inchief. The necessary qualifications, rates of pay, &c., are fully given in the despatch; and the new organisation will come into effect on the 1st of November next. For the future, too, the artillerymen sent out to India will be trained to the use of Armstrong guns-a measure which will do away with the artillery depots of instruction now existing at the three Presidencies.

Lord Elgin, we regret to learn, had been compelled to proceed to Bhaugulpore for the recovery of his health, which had suffered from the steaming climate of Calcutta during the rains. His Excellency proposes to leave the Presidency on a tour through the North-West Provinces some time in December, so as to be at Agra in the first week in January. His lordship will there be joined by Sir Hugh Rose on his return from a tour of inspection through Central India, and both magnates will probably pass the ensuing hot season at

The Calcutta community have subscribed £7,200 for the relief of the Lancashire operatives; the natives, with a few exceptions, standing carefully aloof.

The Government have recently entered into a new contract with the Calcutta and Burmah Steam Navigation Company for the conveyance of the mails to Akyab, Chittagong. Kyouk Phyoo, Rangoon, Moulmein, Port Blair, Malacca, Penang, and Singapore. The new service will be divided into three lines, to run as follows :-

Line 1.—Calcutta to Rangoon direct once a month (leaving twenty-four hours after the receipt of the Home Mails via Bombay, usually arriving about the India and the Delhi Gazette, reflecting on the 5th of each month) thence to Kaligouk, Tavoy Mergui, Penang, Malacca, and Singapore.

Line 2.—By a branch steamer once a month from Rangoon to Moulmein and Port Blair in connection with Line No. 1, and leaving Rangoon within twelve hours of the arrival of the steamer from Calcutta, nours of the arrival of the steamer from Calcutta, returning from Port Blair to Moulmein, and from thence to Rangoon direct.

Line 8.—Calcutta to Chittagong, Akyab, Rangoon, and Moulmein, on the 1st and 16th of each month, and modifier, on the 1st and to do seen month, calling en route on the return voyage (as required) at Kyouk Phyoo and Sandoway. (It will be optional with the company hereafter to connect Chittagong with all the other ports by running a small steamer thither from Akyab instead of by the larger steamer calling there on going and returning as now procalling there on going and returning as now proposed.

Line No. 3, between Calcutta and Moulmein, calling at Chittagong, Akyab, &c., and leaving Calcutta on the 1st and 16th of each month, is intended to supersede the present fortnightly mail. The date fixed for the commencement of the respective lines is the 1st September; but in the case of the service between Calcutta and Singapore, the Viceroy has sanctioned the running of a six-weekly mail instead of a monthly one, in order to give the company time to provide suitable vessels. The duration of the runs to and from, and of detention at the various ports, are arranged so as to ensure quick despatch and the convenience of all concerned; and, should it be found needful, the commissioner or chief civil officer, or the company's agent, will have power to detain the steamers for periods ranging from nine to forty hours in all, according to the importance of the port. At Singapore, however, the steamer will remain four days.

In our issue of the 13th inst. we gave a brief account of a shocking murder committed by a relative of the Rajah of Travancore, and stated that the crime originated in jealousy. It now appears that a very different and much less excusable motive is assigned, "the noble lady whose name was mixed up in the tragedy being of unblemished reputation. Not a breath of suspicion ever tainted it, nor was she in any manner mentioned at the trial of her husband and his accomplices as the cause of his enmity toward his victim, whose alleged offence was that of robbery."

According to the Indian papers Mr. Arbuthnot is about to proceed to Calcutta as Mr. Laing's successor, but we have good reason to believe that there is not the slightest foundation for the rumour. It is very unlikely, indeed, that the Home Government will send out another financial member of the Viceroy's Council from this country—certainly not for the present.

In a recent number of this journal we in-mismanagement alleged to prevail on board the East India and London Shipping Company's steamers. These extracts have given dire offence to the chairman and directors of that company, who call upon us for "the most emphatic contradiction" of the "libellous and maliciously false" statements put forth by those papers and copied into our own columns. To do this is beyond our competence. We did not, and do not vouch for the justness of the strictures passed upon the company's officers; and in our present number we have taken a paragraph from the Madras Athenæum, which declares the complaints that have been so frequently made to be greatly exaggerated. We also gladly publish in a conspicuous place a long exculpatory letter from the chairman, but further than this we cannot go. How can we possibly assert that to be false, of which we know nothing, except that it is stated as truth by two journals of undoubted respectability? Statement for statement, some persons may think the charge quite as veracious as the defence. It is a question the public alone can decide. It is very certain that numerous complaints have been made by passengers in these steamers, and it is likewise true that rapid passages have been made, and that particular captains have been occasionally complimented on the completion of the voyage. Precisely similar complaints have more than once been alleged against the Peninsular and Oriental Company, but we never heard of their threatening war to the knife against the journals that reproduced such evil reports. Perhaps they wisely remembered the French proverb Qui s'excuse, s'accuse, and left the vindication of their character to Time and further experience. In this respect, at least, the East India and London Shipping Company will do well to follow their example, only taking care to surpass their previous efforts to give general satisfaction.

Tippoo's Guns.—The Bangalore Herald states that the great guns which have been lying in the cold Fort in Seringapatam from the days of Tippoo, are now being exploded, by order from the Madras Government. Notwithstanding all the caution exercised in this destructive work, three men were severely wounded. Sir Hope Grant, now on a tour of inspection, has visited the famous palace of Tippoo, in Seringapatam, called Dereadowlut, which a few years back was put into thorough repair by Lord Dalhousie.

I forwarded to Calcutta by the return of the Singapore steamer. This arrangement thus gives three mails a month to Rangoon and Moulmein in place of two as at present, and the same opportunity to passengers. During the time the Port Blair steamer is disengaged, between the departure of the Singapore steamer from Rangoon for Calcutta and her re-arrival at Rangoon, she will make trips between Rangoon and Moulmein, thus giving additional facilities for trade and communication between these two ports.

OUR COASTING TRADE.

At first sight it would seem that no country presents so few facilities for an active coasting trade as India. From the mouths of the Sal ween and the Hooghly round to the Indus there is no coast so dangerous or difficult of approach. Shoals intricate and ever shifting at the mouths of rivers, and a surf wild and ever-breaking else where, prohibit the lordly ship and the useful steamer from coming within miles of the wharf where they might in peace embark their passengers and goods. Even native boats, constructed sometimes like those of the Arabian Nights without a nail, their planks literally sewed together that they may neither start nor break in the surf, crawl but timidly along, as rarely venturing out to sea as the triremes of the ancients. India would seem to be fitted for a great inland river traffic, for steamers which bring down the produce of the interior to the ships which await it at the mouth of rivers whose source is in the snows of the Himalayas, but not for coasting. The truth is, there is not a port on the whole coast of India equal to a fishing harbour on the stormy coast of Scotland, unless it be an island like Singapore and Bombay. Yet the determined energy of a few Glasgow "bodies" of one Scotch mercantile firm in Calcutta has developed a most important and profitable coasting trade in the Bay of Bengal. For months they ran steamers at a loss to Rangoon and Moulmein on the one side, and to Madras calling at intermediate ports on the other, till they literally created a trade; and the Burmah Steam Navigation Company pays handsome dividends to its shareholders. Their success has induced them to extend their operations and their fleet. In addition to the six steamers they already possess, and the two they have chartered, they are now building on the Clyde other four of comparatively large dimensions. These will enable them in the course of the next six months to meet the convenience of the public by more frequent intercourse with British Burmah, and by lines to Chittagong, the Andaman Islands, Curlew Island and the Straits Settlements on one side, and to all the Coromandel, Malabar, Sind, and Persian Gulf ports on the other.

On the 1st day of September there will be a line from Calcutta to Moulmein and back, touching at Chittagong, Akyab, and Rangoon, and at the same ports returning, and also calling when occasion requires at avook Phyoo, and Sande-The steamer will leave Calcutta on the 1st wav. and 16th of each month, in place of the 2nd and 17th of the month, as formerly, in order to keep the mails from England a shorter time in Calcutta, and the better to guarantee the arrrival of the mails from these ports in time for the outward English steamer. The second line will be from Calcutta to Singapore, the steamer leaving Calcutta about the 10th of each month on the arrival of the mail. The route will be to Rangoon direct, thence to Curlew Island, Tavoy, Mergui, Penang, and Malacca, and the same ports returning. The line will commence on 10th September, but up to February the communication will be only once in six weeks, and thereafter once a month. The third line will be from Calcutta to Port Blair once a month. This is a branch of the line to Singapore, mails and passengers going by the Singapore steamer. On arrival at Rangoon a steamer will be in waiting and start, after allowing passengers twenty-four hours there, for Port Blair vià Moulmein, returning again to Rangoon via Moulmein in time to have mails and passengers from Port Blair and Moulmein forwarded to Calcutta by the return of the Singapore steamer. This arrangement thus gives three mails a month to Rangoon and Moulmein in place of two as at present, and the same op-Port Blair steamer is disengaged, between the departure of the Singapore steamer from Rangoon for Calcutta and her re-arrival at Rangoon, she will make trips between Rangoon and Moulmein, thus giving additional facilities for trade and communication between these two ports.

fifth line is twice a month between Bombay and Kurrachee, carrying the coasting mails to Sind. leaving Bombay on the arrival of the English mail there on the 10th and 27th of each month. This line has been running for seven months. The sixth line will be to the Persian Gulf from Kurrachee once in six weeks, calling at the ports of Guader, Muscat, Bunder Abbas, Bushire and Bussorah, or at any intermediate port required by Government, and will commence running in February next. Finally, the line on the Coromandel coast, at present running as far as Negapatam, is before Government for an extension to Bombay, thus arching the peninsula; calling at Bimlipatam, Vizagapatam, Coconada, Masulipatam, Madras, Pondicherry, Negapatam, Colombo or Tuticorin, or perhaps both, Cochin, Beypore, Calicut, Telicherry, Cannanore, Mangalore or any other ports of note. It is proposed to run once a month, but nothing is fixed as yet regarding this line.

With all these lines in full operation next cold weather weary officials, merchants and invalids need not be at a loss for the means of enjoying a holiday. They may survey mankind from Singapore to Bussorah. Of these steamers Government, too, will be able to make use for the transport of stores, and officials to visit places hitherto practically as distant as those on the Red Sea. The company do well to be cautious at first, but except that part of the scheme not yet sanctioned from Negapatam to Beypore, a paying trade already exists. They must beware of high fares. Already those on the Rangoon line are too high; £12 for three days' sail is too much, and the rates for cargo to Singapore seem too excessive to attract any of the traffic of the China steamers which ply at present. If the fares are not pro-hibitory no trip would be so attractive as one to Madras, the tourist spending on the hills the time occupied by the steamer in rounding Cape Comorin, meeting her at Beypore, and going on to Bombay, Kurrachee, and the Gulf. What with railways and steamers, a real holiday will be possible in India next year .- Friend of India

THE GIBRALTAR OF INDIA.

Time was when every soldier and statesman in India entertained the conviction that if the sepoy army was content all was well with the empire. Now for the native army we must substitute the Punjab. If there is peace in Delhi, quiet in Umritsur, silence along the Frontier, India is safe. What Gibraltar is to England in securing the unbroken stillness of the Mediterranean and Europe, that is the Puniab to British India, Central Asia, and even Russia. What the most philosophic of statesmen and powerful of orators said of the Rock is true of the Land of the Five Rivers-it is "a post of war, a post of power, and a post of commerce; a post which makes us valuable to our friends and dreadful to our enemies." The history of India since Israel went out of Egypt is simply a record of successive waves of nomadic humanity dashing south through Asia, and rolling into the peninsula till they broke upon the Vindhyas for want of a military barrier at the Sulimans. The history of British India is that of a wave rolling up from the sea in the opposite direction, and never ceasing till it was stemmed by the humiliating disasters of Cabul, till it raised a bulwark from Simla and Peshawur to the sea. Each horde of invaders as they crowded in from the north left a door open behind them. England has marched up from the south, and has for ever shut the door-Far more than Cronstadt is to St. Petersburg, Comorn to Vienna, Ehrenbreitstein to the Middle Rhine, is the Punjab to India. These fortresses guard cities; Gibralter and the Punjab frontier posts give strength to empires. In 1857 the Punjab saved India. Since it became a British province it has given peace to Central Asia.

When applied to the Punjab, therefore, the Financial Resolution of 1861, which assumed that goon if the receipts within the limits of each great division of the empire cover all the expenditure within the same limits, and leave a sufficient surplus to meet a fair proportion of the imperial The charges in India and at home, such division or province is a profitable possession, or vice versá," must be modified, and indeed is so by its author, Sir Bartle Frere. That Resolution recognised an important principle for which we had long contended—that each province should be occasionally looked at in itself, to see whether or not, in a mercantile sense, it was a paying concern, and that all should be compared with each other, so that the detailed charges for their administration might be reduced to the lowest minimum, while a generous emulation might be established in raising the revenue of each to the highest possible point. It was never intended to carry out this principle to its legitimate conclusion, which would have involved the ruin of the Empire, but only to supply an argument for greater economy. And in this respect the Financial Resolution has been most successful, the chief rulers of provinces and presidencies having learned that it is as important for them to keep down expenditure as for Collectors to raise revenue. Especially was there room for economy in the Punjab. It had deservedly been the pet province of Lord Dalhousie, and while its somewhat scanty officials surpassed those of all India in hard work, high conscientiousness and great success, they spent money like water. A record of what the Public Works Department alone has spent in the Punjab, such as Sir Robert Napier could write, would open the eyes of the public. That one Labore and Peshawur Road we hesitate not to pronounce a shameful instance of scientific carelessness and pecuniary waste. Yet, generally speaking, the Punjab was a new province and needed a large share of the surplus of other provinces in the early years of its history. But as other children were born to the empire, as Oude came and with it a new father in the shape of Lord Canning, as above all the mutiny exhausted our treasury and nearly our credit, as the Central Provinces and Bengal cried out against the grievous neglect and misgovernment to which they had so long been subject, it was evident that the Punjab must cease to be the prodigal or the petted son of the family, and work for his living. He got a stepfather in the shape of Lord Canning, and a jealous cousin in the person of Sir Bartle Frere, late Commissioner of Sind.

The Punjab grumbled a little at the evil days on which it had fallen, but did not grumble long. With that pluck and manly sense which ever distinguished it above its brethren, it accepted the altered state of things, cut down its public works and their establishments, reformed its police, and above all reduced its army. That desperate economiser, Colonel Balfour, secretly and justly urged on from behind by Sir Bartle Frere, said to the Punjab, "you must reduce your military Sir R. Montgomery showed a little bill of sixteen and a third lakhs of rupees which might be saved. Colonel Balfour was obstinate in the belief that the saving should be eighteen lakhs. Sir Robert consented. And now after waiting cautiously to see that no evil consequences followed, he proposes to raise the total saving to fifty-two lakhs, as much as Sic Charles Wood presented to the Mysore family. The case stands thus: there were in the Punjab:-

	Before the Mutiny.		Pres Stree		Difference.
	Men.	Guns.	Men.	Guns.	Men.	Guns.	1
Europeans	12,450	72	16,383	95	3,933	23	more.
Natives	58,870	72	23,477	22	35,393	50	less.
	71,320	144	3 9, 860	117	31,460		togthr. less.

It is the present strength as above given that Sir R. Montgomery would still further reduce. With the Punjab we saved India in 1857 when the natives had half the guns, and were in the proportion of nearly five to one English soldier. Now, the 39,860 are divided between the frontier army, under the civil authorities, where there are only 11 natives nearly to 1 European, and the Comnder-in-Chief, where there is only 0.8 native to 1 European, while the sepoys hold only 22 out of such a reduction, for Sir R. Montgomery still further to reduce for the purpose of helping the next financier's budget?

We think it is. For be it remembered that before the mutiny the N.W. Provinces, Oudh and Bengal were denuded of troops; but now the European army in them is strong everywhere, so that the Punjab can fall back with confidence for supports. In the three there are 20,000 more English soldiers now than in 1857, and of these 2,536 are artillerymen, with 101 guns. The same is true of Bombay and Scinde, the second supports of the Punjab. In two months, without affecting the rest of India, an English army of 16,000 Europeans and 80 guns, with as many natives, could be marched into the Punjab. Moreover, since 1857 we have an organised police under European officers. The Punjab has never been so contented, owing to the mutiny and China campaigns and our native policy. So fast are trade and agriculture increasing that labour cannot be obtained for public works. In a few months the railway will be open to Delhi, will be open to Delhi, in a year from Umritsur to Mooltan. Roads and canals are similarly forward, steamers ascend the Indus to Kalabagh and the Sutlej to Ferozepore, and all our communications are improved. So different will be the Puniab of 1863 from that of 1857 that we see no difficulty in at once directing the following changes and reductions in the European force. The Frontier army, Peshawur and its supports, Mooltan and Rawulpindee, Lahore, Jullundur, and Umballa must be held as at present in strength. But our relations with Cashmere are so friendly that there is no need for a brigade at Sealkote. Jhelum should be strengthened, and the fort of Govindgurh, which commands Umritsur and the Sikh Temple, should be garrisoned only with Europeans. Ferozepore is so politically unimportant that it is to be regretted an arsenal was ever built there. Still, being built only Europeans should garrison it. Like Umritsur, the place is a mere outpost of Lahore. European corps are stationed at Subathoo, Kussowlee, and Dugshai only for sanitary purposes. There should be no native troops in Delhi, except for sun duties. With them the low fanatical population of the city are ever intriguing, and there all the sinister rumours from Mecca and Central Asia gather while the destruction of the infidel and the triumph of Islam are eagerly discussed. The palace and the old magazine at least should be held only by Europeans, the glacis should be shovelled into the ditch, the flanking defences levelled, and the city of Delhi cease to be a fortress. As important as all these changes is it to maintain moveable columns at Peshawur, Rawul Pindee, Lahore, Mooltan, Jullundur, and Umballa, to consist of about 1,500 men of all arms at Peshawur, and 1,000 men of all arms at the other stations. These changes, while actually adding to our military strength, will lessen the military expenditure in the Punjab by fifty two lakhs of rupees, besides two lakhs for the barracks now about to be built by the Public Works Department.

It will be observed that the great bulwark of India, the frontier army, remains untouched at a cost of £1,101,900. The purely Punjab force, required for its own defence, would stand, after these reductions, at £762,600. The total cost for both would be £1,864,500, instead of £2,381,000 as at present. Acting on the fair modification allowed by Sir Bartle Frere in his minute in which he says " Except what may be needed to overawe the lawless tribes beyond our western frontier and to command the passes leading into Affghanistan, there is no present occasion for any military force in the Punjab beyond what is needed for purely local purposes," the frontier army must be The finanlooked on as an Imperial charge. cial position of the Punjab will then stand thus. From its normal revenue of three millions sterling, we must deduct £1,610,000 for civil and £762,600 for local military expenditure, which would leave £627,400 as a surplus, or only some £200,000 less than its fair share of contribution to Imperial charges. If, on the other hand, the total Military and Imamount of the local revenues, the deficit would be little more than half this sum.

But, after all, the question is not one of systems of account. Whatever it cost, the Punjab frontier and local force must be strong, for the peace of Asia and the honour of England are in its keeping. We say to the Punjab, " be economical by all means, but, above all, be strong," afford to be weak in any other part of India rather than on the only frontier through which India has been invaded, and in the only province which not only dreams of, but has a capacity for, an independent political career .- Friend of India.

DUELLING-ITS PROS AND CONS.

It is high time something authoritative and definite were settled as to what gentlemen in the army ought to do when they are subject to insult. Like the man who won the elephant at a raffle, and did not know what to do with it, since no one would either buy it or accept it as a present, and the police told him to "move on" with it, and if, he poisoned it, he was not possessed of a yard of earth to bury it in, so the officer who is suffering under insult has no possible course open for him to pursue. According to his profession, he is supposed to be "jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel," but woe be to him should he follow his impulses too blindly! The civilian has three courses open to him (as Sir Robert Peel was so fond of saying), none of which would ruin him for life, though any one of them might involve him in the lighter consequence of temporary trouble. He may either call his man out, or knock him down; or, these failing, the more philosophic, but less honourable, alternative remains, grin and bear it." There is the greatest amount of physical danger in choosing the first of the three courses. But even then, the chances are strongly in favour of no sanguinary result following. Because, in the first place, it is most probable that some "dainned, goodnatured friend" will turn up in the nick of time, like a Deus ex machina, and denounce his murderous intentions to the police, and then he will be bound over to keep the peace; but the glorious attribute of being "a fire-eater" will attach to him for the remainder of his days. Should the matter be kept quiet, he has another chance, that his adversary will explain or apologise; or another that their common friends will patch the difference up, and bring it to an amicable issue, or, last of all, even should the foemen meet on the deadly field, there are such things as bad shots, shaky nerves, and, in fine, the chapter of accidents to avert a fatal or even a sanguinary result. But at the worst all wounds are not by any means deadly, and it is astonishing how the human frame may be riddled without the vital spark being puffed out; so that in selecting the ordeal by wager of battle, the citizen warrior has about a hundred chances to one in favour of his reaping nothing but laurels by so doing. But should be adopt the alternative of knocking his man down or horse-whipping him, he will come to no greater grief than that implied in the reception of an honourable black eye or a glorious bruised nose, or the infliction of a slight fine. The third plan of eating his leek quietly will expose him to some sneers and the chances of having an ugly epithet or so attached to his name; but the manner he comported himself in his difficulties proves that his sensibility is not very acute; and, therefore, the probability is he will care very little what they call him, provided he come off with a whole skin and no bones broken. From all this it appears pretty plain that a civilian cannot get far wrong whatever he does in a quarrel

But how different is the fate of an officer in the same circumstances! It seems as if he must lose his commission whatever he does; and to lose his commission is to become a pariah. If he call his adversary out, or even send a message to demand an explanation, he is cashiered. If he adopt the baculine argument, such an act, as being unworthy an officer and a contleman, subjects him to be cashiered. If he put up with the affront, he has again disgreed bimself, and he must be cashiered. The regulations certainly define one 117 gams on the frontier. Is it safe, then, after perial expenditure is charged in proportion to the thing that he may do -- he may refer the matter to his commanding officer; but the latter is in as great a maze as himself, as there is nothing satisfactory that his position will allow him to Up to the moment of going to the advise. commanding officer there is light enough, and the way is sufficiently clear; but beyond that point all is gloom and Cimmerian darkness for both. Neither knows what to do; it is the blind leading the blind. The reference to the commanding officer would be perfectly in. telligible, and sufficient for all practical purposes if he had a code to guide his decision; but it becomes a makeshift and a sham when we know that the commanding officer himself has no power or means of putting the business to rights; all he can do is this, if the offender be a civilian, he can recommend an action at law; if he be an officer he can bring him directly or indirectly to a court-martial. This last process reduces the complainant to the level of a tell-tale

Either duelling ought to be allowed, or there ought to be a Court of Honour beyond sopeal, and with absolute power to make either party submit to its decision. When we mention duelling as one of the alternatives, we are not advocating its revival. But we do think it would be much better to permit it at once and openly, rather than persevere in the present system of uncertainty and danger. We say danger, because it is almost impossible for a man to move in any direction without involving himself in ruin. Whatever may have been the demerits of duelling, it produced one very good consequence; while it existed as the ultima ratio, it made people very cautious as to what they said and did. And in cases where this proper caution in word and act disappears, and where a retrograde step is taken towards barbarism, people will necessarily begin to turn their thoughts towards the old and efficient mode of repression. "I am aware, sir," said The O'Donohue, in the House of Commons, in his late encounter with Sir Robert Peel, " I am aware that the ancient mode of arbitrament has fallen into disuse; but I am also aware that that coarse ness of manners which made it almost necessary has likewise disappeared." Exactly; coarseness of manners makes some final system of arbitrament necessary, and what we want is a definite and clear code of rules to guide officers in all questions touching their honour. course, the true gentleman would rather forfeit a thousand commissions than suffer his fair name to be tarnished. But, considering what awful consequences the loss of a commission involves, considering the many and unforeseen ways in which an officer's richest possession, his honour, may be assailed, and considering the enormous amount of uncertainty that now surrounds everything connected with this sort of difficulty in the army, we are strongly of opinion that a clear, stringent, and comprehensive system of rules should be framed for the guidance of officers in all such questions as are presumed to necessitate a duel, so that he may know precisely how he may move without tarnishing his reputation on the one side, or risking the whole of his worldly prospects on the other .- Mofussilite.

MISCLLLANEOUS

FRUITS OF EUROPEAN CIVILISATION.—The Paridarshak translated by the Reformer notes the death of several distinguished natives from liver complaint. It complains with some bitterness that this is a new complaint produced by drinking, and that the English introduced drunkenness into the country, the evils of which cannot be adequately described. Meanwhile Sir J. P. Grant, in the last Abharee Report, again pronounces the increase of excise revenue "very satisfactory."

Major A. Liour, of the Royal, late Bengal Artillery, has been appointed to the command of the battery of Armstrong guns now on its way from the Presidency Arsenal to Meerut. This officer qualified himself for this command at Shoeburyness when at home on sick leave; and is the first of the late company's artillery officers who has taken charge of a battery of the new veapon.

HOOGHLY, August 15 .- Our Dacoity Commissioner has just succeeded in capturing a band of Furreedpore robbers, in an exceedingly clever manner. They appear to have been in the habit of migrating between Chandernagore and Calcutta, and have committed several daring dacoities. Only two of them were apprehended by the Calcutta police, and the rest, consisting of sixteen or seventeen men, have been caught by Mr. Reily. One of their exploits was the robbery of a boat, of money, and several silver articles in the vicinity of Hooghly. This led to their detection. As soon as Mr. Reily heard of it, he got a number of his peons on board a boat and rowed towards Chinsurab. Before he had gone far, he spied a suspicious looking boat going along at a great pace, and immediately gave chase. He gained upon it slowly, as the dacoits, as it turned out that they were, kept carefully out of his way, They were at last caught, however, arrested, ironed and brought to the commissioner's office. Finding the proof so clear against them they made a clear breast of it, so there will not be much difficulty in getting a conviction. There is another gang now at Culnah, and if the commissioner can succeed in catching them dacoity will be checked, for they have almost all been captured. Jungle fever has again broken out, and several villages in this neighbourhood have been afflicted by the epidemic. A rather extavagant case of criminal assault has lately been sent by the magistrate to the judge for trial, in which the male defendant is thirty years of age, while the female complainant is only six. The assault no doubt was a dastardly one, but considering the difference in the ages of the parties it is difficult to conceive what chance there can be of proving what is required under Section 375 of the Penal Code.—Englishman.

LIEUTENANT JACKSON, of the Engineers, is not, ve (Englishman) understand, coming down to the Presidency, to be tried by the High Court, for the murder of his servant by flogging; but has, according to letters from the North-West, been sent to Mooltan, where he will be placed upon his trial before a general court martial. The circumstances of the case, as detailed in a communication now before us, have such an air of amazing ferocity and cruelty, as would certainly lead to the inference that the chief actor in them must have been of unsound mind. Even supposing that the court-martial should be compelled, by the evidence before it, to accept this view of Lieutenant Jackson's mental condition at the time of the tragical occurrence, the result, as decreed by the law of England, is, we believe, the forfeiture of personal liberty for life; should the court not accept this view of the case, we need not say what the sentence must be. The servants of the prisoner, who aided, abetted, and acted in the inhuman punishment of the unfortunate victim, have, we hear, also been sent to Mooltan, where they, too, will be put upon their trial for wilful The whole case is one of the most extraordinary we have ever heard of.

RAJAH DINKUR RAO ON GOVERNMENT .- The Hills notices a memorandum of observations on the administration of India drawn up by the Hon. Rajah Dinkur Rao for private circulation. Under fifty heads the writer discusses the problem of how the British should govern so as to be popular with their subjects. The writer approves of no measure not in accordance with caste prejudices, or that does not preserve established customs and existing rights. He tells us the people have now "forgotten the goodness of the Government, and have begun to prefer the tyranny of the native princes," and would keep all rights in land as well as the practice of selling "hucks or rights" by judicial process for personal debts, all hereditary rights in certain offices, such as exist in large villages, where water carriers, watchmen, barbers, washermen, have all remained in particular families from time immemorial as "entailed property, of which the life interest only can be alienated!" All this would be disappointing if we did not believe that the British Government has a higher duty in India than to make itself popular with Asiatics degraded by centuries of

H. M.'s 19th Hussars. - In forming her Majesty's 19th Hussars, nominating the general service officers to the regiment, and casting off the local service officers to follow their fortunes in India, several discrepancies and deficiencies in the pay accounts of the regiment, as it existed so far back as the year 1858, have been brought to light, and as these errors, or whatever they are, fall heavily upon some of the officers, we hope that the authorities will cause inquiry to be made, and justice done. At the time that the deficiencies in question occurred, the present 19th Hussars was the 1st Regiment Bengal European Cavalry; and some idea may be formed of the manner in which the pay and pecuniary matters of the corps were carried on, when we mention the fact that sums such as a Captain's monthly pay are to the present day unaccounted for, the entire deficiency, as we (Englishman) are informed, amounting to several thousands of rupees. It is the duty of the Government to see that, in forming the new regiments, the officers of the old corps, who have elected for local service and are taking their departure, are settled with, and paid up to the last moment; and in this case the authorities ought to institute a strict investigation as to what has become of the money which is admitted to have been drawn from the State, but appears never to have been paid to its rightful owners.

"THE TRAIL OF THE SERPENT."-A COTTESPONdent of the Englishman gives the following instance of devoted loyalty — among snakes. "There are," he says, "strictly speaking, two kinds of snakes with two heads in India. raj-samp is one, his tail being blunt and marked exactly like his true head, and nothing more; this snake grows to the length of six feet, and is beautifully marked with alternate bands of black and yellow. The other is smaller, hardly above three feet, and of a dirty yellow dull colour; its tail is likewise marked with a complete head, the nostrils, mouth, eyes, and all plainly seen, but useless. I will tell a story told me by a native snake-charmer, which, I am sure, will puzzle you, though you may not believe it. It is this: he was once out looking for snakes when he came upon a magnificent rai-samp. He immediately thought of bagging it, but was deterred by seeing a dhora samp come out of a neighbouring tank with a frog in its mouth, and making for the other snake, who, however, refused the frog, nor would it be induced to accept of it with all the caresses the dhora could lavish. The dhora went into the tank again, and came up this time with a fish; this the raj-samp refused also, shaking its head from side to side when offered. The poor dhora, in despair, went round and round his king, and seemed to be in agonies. As a last resource, he put the point of his own tail near the raj-samp's mouth, which he seized with avidity, while the dhora lay still, and suffered itself to be gradually swallowed up entirely.

MEERUT .- Letters from Meerut, dated the 13th August, mention that the cholera was still prevalent amongst the troops at that station, though we are glad to hear the European regiments were free from the disease. It had, however, broken out amongst the native corps, the 19th Punjab infantry having had, up to date, some five or six cases, after having hitherto been healthy whilst the Europeans were suffering. The artillery and H.M.'s 104th regiment were still out in camp, marching every third or fourth day, and are to remain out for a month, whether the disease re-appears amongst them or not. The latter corps had had no cases of cholera for a week; and, altogether, the new plan of avoiding the cholera is considered, in the case of the Meerut force, as a success. Major Hamilton, pension paymaster of the Meerut circle, was about to leave for England on sick certificate; no successor had been nominated. All the European troops at Meerut, and we suppose elsewhere, when practicable, are to be instructed in the Artillery drill; and an Armstrong battery was expected immediately at Meerut, to commence exercise with. Preparations are already being made at Meerut, and the other large military stations up-country, for a busy cold season of exercise, parade, instruction, &c .- Englishman.

Calcutta journal, "The system of paying the Euro- the suburbs was looked on with disfavour at first pean troops by the different circle or divisional paymasters, instead of, as was the case up till last the court, the native mooktears, and by some of year, having all the Queen's troops paid by the the subordinate magisterial officers. Now it is Presidency paymaster, has been found to work so most popular with the people. Mr. Wauchope very badly all over the Bengal Presidency, that it would like to extend his police to the large towns, is in contemplation to revert to the previous plan, and again make Calcutta the centre and headquarters of the European branch of military payments. We cannot understand why the former system of centralisation should again be reverted to, after having been, in our opinion, rationally and wisely abandoned. We are informed that the circle paymasters do not understand, and the Mofussil police. We (Friend of India) shall we suppose that we may add, will not learn, the intricacies and mysteries of paying Queen's troops. In this case, the only course is to remove them from their appointments, and replace them either with men who do understrnd such payments, or who, if they are not quite perfect in it on joining their offices, will take the trouble to learn. Great delays and disappointments are caused by the blunders and ignorance of up-country paymasters in the case of European officers and soldiers coming down to the Presidency en route to England; and if the circle paymasters will not learn their duty so as to avoid such inconvenience to the public service, they ought to be replaced by officers who will."

LORD ELGIN'S MOVEMENTS .- As at present arranged, and unless something unforeseen should occur to alter his lordship's intentions, the Viceroy will not leave the Presidency on his northwestern tour till the middle of the cold weather. His lordship's camp is ordered to be pitched at Agra on the 4th of January, where he will join it, in all probability, accompanied by the Countess of Elgin; and the vice-regal party will pass the next hot season at Simlah.

CAVALRY REDUCTION.—After considerable reference and correspondence, it has been finally decided that, as a measure of military financial economy, the cavalry portion of the Deolie and Erinpoorah Irregular Forces is to be reduced, and disbandment and transfers are to be at once commenced. The Supreme Government having declined to re-consider and alter the instructions already issued for this cavalry reduction, the Commander-in-Chief has intimated that, should the measure be held to have too much diminished the Native Cavalry Force in Rajpootanah, a regi ment can be transferred to those territories from Oude, without weakening the cavalry force in that province below the required point of efficiency and safety.

SIR HUGH ROSE .- It is probable that his Ex cellency the Commander-in-chief will commence his cold weather tour by traversing and inspecting Central India, and the scenes of his war progress and achievements in 1858, making this portion of inspection terminate in such time as will enable him to meet the Governor-general at Agra in January. Central India is, perhaps, that portion of the empire which most requires the examination of Sir Hugh Kose, as we (Englishman) do not remember to have heard of its ever having been traversed and inspected by any one of the Commanders in-chief who have held power in India since British troops first occupied the Central Indian territory.

BURGLARY IN CALCUTTA. - Mr. Wauchope, Commissioner of Police in Calcutta, reports in the Gazette Supplement on his success in putting down crime in the suburbs of Calcutta and How rah, which were last year put under his jurisdiction. He states without hesitation that, "in those districts where the Dacoity Commissioner has worked with the greatest vigour, burglary has increased in nearly the same proportion as dacoity has decreased. Dacoits have become burglars, and taken to a trade which is much less danger-ous and quite as profitable." This is probably This is probably correct, as he was himself Dacoity Commissioner. He shows the utter helplessness of the present police of Bengal to put down burglary, the best darogah in the whole province confessing that he could not make out where the burglars came from, and where they went; that, in fact, they seemed to rise out of and sink into the ground. The ex- them who does not think their presence an evil."

CIRCLE PAYMASTERS.—According to the leading : tension of the trained police under Europeans to by the people, and was opposed by the officers of such as Serampore and Hooghly, and even up both sides of the river for twenty or thirty miles. Calcutta is the head quarters of nearly all the serious crime committed within that radius. There are hundreds of professional thieves, the swell mob of Calcutta, who go regular tours in the interior, and these men are quite unknown to welcome decent police in Serampore, where a burglary or theft is never discovered. We have two English constables, one of whom is energetic and the other spends his time in a sort of meditative "mooning."

> A STRANGE NOTION .- The Poornochundrodou a Bengali paper, thinks that Lord Elgin suspended the Waste Lands resolution because the greater part of the lands are in use for burning the dead bodies of men on them, or as places of reception for the carcases of domestic cattle. " If lands actually appropriated for such important purposes are transferred by sale to strangers, it will cause great inconvenience and discomfort to the adjacent villagers, and open a field for endless dispute."

> WIDOW MARRIAGE .- The Hindoo Patriot records another widow marriage in Jehanabad, a sub-division of Hooghly, and notices the fact that this is the native place of the two reformers, Rammehon Roy and Punder Issur Chunder Bydiasagor. It is remarkable, too, that there is more crime here, especially dacoities and burglaries, than in any similar district of India out of Oude. We do not even suggest that there is any connec tion between the two facts, for a prophet has no honour in his own country.

ASSAM TEA COMPANY .- The local shareholders of the Assam Tea Company, at their last halfyearly meeting were informed of the resignation of Messrs. D. C. Mackey, T. E. Carter and De Morney, in consequence of the recent disclosures. All the papers are open to the inspection of the shareholders. During the cold season a thousand more acres are to be cleared and planted with tea. Mr. Judge, on a salary of Rs. 1,500 a-month, is to proceed to Cashar and Assam to report on the state of the factories.

BENARES DEBATING SOCIETY .- A debating society has been established at Benares under the presidency of the Rajah Deo Narain Singh. The Rajah is its patron, and was present at one of its meetings. The subject of discussion was, " What Sciences are receiving Improvement in these A vote of thanks being tendered to the Days ?" Rajah, that gentleman acknowledged the compliment, and hoped that the members of the society would acquire knowledge, the light of which would dispel the darkness of their minds. Benares has certainly shown much activity, both political and literary, of late, and the fact is to be ascribed, we believe, to the presence of many educated Bengalees.

Mission to Lassa.-The Hon. Mr. Bruce, our minister at Pekin, has at last awoke to the importance of a mission from India to Lassa. In a letter to the President of the Bengal Asiatic Society, dated 4th May, he says that he will speak to Prince Kung on the subject, but he anticipates that the Chinese will decline giving passports to Thibet, on the ground that they do not interfere in the internal administration of the country. He says the Chinese are "much alarmed at the idea of foreign nations having intercourse with these semi-barbarous races, who lie as a barrier between China and the European Powers. Of these, I have seen some striking proofs lately with reference to the Mongolian Tribes." He adds, "The most enlightened Chinese have not got beyond the notion that it is a less evil to tolerate the presence of foreigners where they have a right to be, than to risk a war for the purpose of keeping them out. But I doubt whether there is one amongst SEED IN BURMAH.

Buddhism claims at once the largest number of votaries on earth, and yields the smallest number of Christian converts. In the latter respect it is worse than Hindooism. There is a reason why the converts from Mahomedanism should be few, for that creed professes to be monotheistic while it incorporates many of the historical elements, at least, of Judaism and Christianity. That Hindooism, and especially Buddhism, should offer so much opposition to the assaults of missionaries, Jearned and unlearned, may well lead us to reflect on the utter helplessness of man, unaided by special interposition from above, to propagate truth so humbling to human pride, so restraining to human passion, and so condemnatory of human sin, as that which Christ taught. Of the two, however, Buddhism is calculated to be much more attractive than Hindooism. The priestly bondage of the former is less; it interferes less with the ordinary structure of society and the free flow of social intercourse, for it does not recognise caste; and it allows the conscience to sleep a deeper sleep, for it does not perpetually obtrude sin upon it as a reason for penances, ablutions, tedious rites. and painful gifts to greedy priests. If a man wants to get through the world without thinking of right or wrong, if he wishes to ignore all the higher elements of his nature while he gratifies the lower, and all the hopes of humanity, then Buddhism suits him as admirably as Popery does the lazy, rollicking, credulous Celt. We do not wonder at the preponderance of Buddhism, for it is nihilism, nor at the little success of missions, for conscience is almost dead, and there is no active principle to appeal to. As for an appeal to reason, the Buddhist who wishes to attain the highest state of Nirwan is ever meditating, or thinks he is. He has anticipated by many centuries the rationalism of England, France, and Germany.

In the East, as rulers, we have come into close contact with the Buddhists of Burmah. Disappointed with them the American missionaries who have succeeded Judson turn to the aboriginal Karens, just as the wearied English and German missionary finds a new excitement because a new hope in the indigenous Coles and Son thals. With Buddhism as with Brahminism it seems to human intelligence that no national movement towards the truth will be made except by a native apostle. If Nanuk, shocked at the Islamism and Hindooism around him established the Sikh system, surely we may expect a Hindoo. baptised with a higher spirit, to lay the foundation and spread the teachings of an Indian Christianity. And if Gautama, or some living man whom his story represents, began a protest against idolatry and priestcraft ten centuries ago which has spread till it has embraced the largest num ber of votaries on earth, surely we may look hopefully for another to rise now, or soon, in Burmah or Siam, in China or Japan, to teach and propagate with more success a better faith.

There is a little hope in this respect for Burmah. Some seven years ago the l'rince of Ava. the king's brother, formed the resolution of sending the sons of some of the leading nobles of the Court to Calcutta for their education. His object was, that they should receive such instruction, especially in mathematics and the practical sciences, as would fit them to " develope the resources" of Burmah, and to superintend that monopoly of the whole commerce of the country which the king keeps in his hand. The Doveton College, a Christian institution, was selected chiefly, we believe, on the recommendaold to learn a new language, and he was returned to Ava. He had been colonel of a regiment in the last war against us. Of the other two, the elder was the national poet of Burmah, his verses being sung everywhere, and the younger had obtained no little reputation for those exquisitely shrill tones of voice which Asiatics value so much for their melody. Soon another, who had been for some time at a Roman Catholic school, joined them, and the three, their ages varying from sixteen to twenty-two, made rapid progress, and in all respects behaved 88 gentlemen. On the completion of English their education, two returned to Ava, and one went to France. Meanwhile the Prince of Ava seems to have been so satisfied with the experiment that other three were sent who were somewhat younger. They joined the classes at the end of 1857. Some fifteen months after a rule was passed that all who attended for secular instruction should, as in missionary schools, be present at the opening prayer and in the Bible class. Essentially a Christian institu-tion, it was found that the Hindons, Mahomedans, and Buddhists who annually joined the classes in increasing numbers had a had effect on the tone of the school, and hence the new rule was passed. The second set of three Barmese youths were thus led to attend the Bible class every morning. Though boarders, they were not required to join in the family devotions, nor to attend any church, and so far as could be observed they performed no kind of worship at all. The effect of the new rule was soon seen in their case. As Buddhists they had no objection to read the Bible, and at first they showed as much cagerness to be foremost in its study as in mathematics or ordinary history. The eldest, Oung Zoo, was now nineteen years of age, the second, Moung Mien, was sixteen, and the third, Pow Thou, was fifteen. Two were thus of age. Soon Oung Zoo began to apply to his teacher for the explanation of difficulties, and one day he made the novel request to be allowed to attend all the Calcutta churches in succession. He was permitted, and with his two companions he finally resolved to be regular in his attendance at the Rev. Mr. Leslie's the same who first induced Havelock to preach to his soldiers at Dinapore. Finally Oung Zoo applied to be baptised, and the night before he and his friends returned to Ava they followed his example. There was no attempt at proselytism on the part of the college authorities. When questioned on the subject Oung Zoo declared he had been led to this step by "the general influence of the school." "He is of age, ask him," was a saying in a similar case. Only one of the three was under age. All were warned, but the leaven had been working for twelve months. The Principal of the college was, in the absence of any other, the guardian of the youth and satisfied himself of both his intelligence and sincerity. It says little for the committee of management that, with the exception of the chairman who was present at the baptism, they would have put obstacles in the

The three young men have returned to Mandalay. They know that instant execution may await them, or, if not, utter loss of position and imprisonment. If faithful this seed must germinate. From less striking incidents than this, by far more insignificant means, the savage Scandinavians, Teutons, and Goths of Northern Europe were won to the truth. We trust a regard for the opinion of our Government will restrain every act of injustice or cruelty in Mandalay. Col. Phayre may do much good by a word, if it is not too late, when next he visits the king .- Friend of India.

SANITY AND INSANITY .- The Madras correspondent of the Times of India describes a scene in the Supreme Court. A Mussulman, dressed most fantastically, appeared in court, and told the judges as they were about to rise, that he had risen up in arms against the British Gotion of the Armenian agents of the king. Three vernment, whose dominion in this country Times of India describes the beauties of lads were sent, and immediately invested in Eng. was soon about to become a matter of the past; of Gairsoppa in North Canara, which combine lish clothes. The eldest was a man much too | that he had 15,000 men under arms outside of Madras, who were ready at any moment to march down and to take possession of Madras, and put a period to the English rule there; but as he was a man of peace, he preferred applying to the civil power. If it would put him in possession of Fort St. George, it would save him trouble, and prevent a recourse to arms. The Chief Justice playfully told him he could not grant the application, but hoped he would be successful otherwise. A sane Mussulman seems, from a controversy in the Madras Times, to have acted quite as madly. Sum-saum-ood-dowlah has an inam at Vellore, and is allowed to pass from it in procession to a mosque there. Lately the pageant has assumed almost royal proportions, and as the man calls himself the private secretary of Azim Jah, whom Mussulmans believe to be Nawab of the narnatic, the display was forbidden for the future by Government. Sum-saum, however, approached the governor privately, and was this year allowed to proceed in coaches, instead of which the spectacle exceeded all previous displays. The Madras Government cannot be so apathetic as to wink at this insult.

BANK OF MADRAS. - At the recent annual meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Madras, Mr. Campbell, the president, congratulated them on the shares having risen from a premium of 16 to 58 per cent., and the dividend from 5 to 9½ per cent. He stated that the branch at Cochin had been successful, and that as soon as Sir C. Wood ceased to quarrel with Mr. Laing. branches would be opened at Calicut or Beypore. Cuddapah, and Coconada. Mr. Campbell complained that, although the native states of Travancore and Cochin have adopted the new currency, our own officials did their best to throw discredit on it till they received a special order to accept the notes in payment of taxes. There was only one representative of the shareholders present, so apathetic is Madras in these days, and Mr. Campbell had to move that his own statement was satisfactory.

STATUE TO SIR JAMSETJEE JEJEEBHOY .- A bronze statue of the first Indian baronet, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, executed at the expense of his family, is about to be erected opposite the Government Medical College, Bombay. A marble statue of Sir Jamsetjee was erected, by public subscription, in the Town-hall.

FALLS OF GAIRSOFPA.—A correspondent of the

with the might of Niagara the majestic height and slender grace of the Staubach Falls of Switzerland. They are distinctly audible for more than a mile off, and on entering the open hall of the Canara bungalow may be seen to a depth of about 200 feet, the heads of the four falls, ranged side by side. The one next the Canara side of the river, which separates North Canara from Mysore, is called the Rajah or Great Fall, falling perpendicularly upwards of 130 feet. The Roarer comes next, and then the Rocket, and then La Dame Blanche, so called from the whiteness of its spray lighting gently and almost noiselessly, as though composed of silky flakes, in the rocky basin below.

EARLY MARRIAGES.—The Rast Goftar notices. among the signs of progress in Hindoo society, a speech made by the Hon. J. Sunkerset in the Bombay Council, in which he confessed his aversion to early marriages, having made it a rule in his own family not to celebrate them. Yet the hon, member has inconsistently introduced a Bill enabling "a female minor to get married some time before she arrives at the age of maturity, for according to Oriental ideas and customs girls cannot be allowed to remain unmarried till they attain the age of eighteen." The Rast Goftar urges the speaker to induce the Maratha Sirdars, who will meet Sir B. Frere in a grand durbar next cold season, to meet in a "Sabba" to discuss this and other social evils. "The Hindu religion is, we believe, quite a different thing from the present Hindu ceremonies. The latter have undergone immense changes, so that he need not have any scruples on that score."

CHINA.

Hong Kong, August 10 .- The interim has been devoid of all occurrences having any bear ing upon the solution of the existing state of political affairs. The Taeping insurgents continue apparently in a state of quiescence—the heat of summer and the ripening of the harvests having doubtless much to do with this inactivity. Meantime there has been an uprecedentedly large business done in raw silk, the dues on which must have greatly augmented the exchequer of the Taepings. Their stores of provisions must certainly be very low at the present moment. Rice is dear at Shanghai, Ningpo, and the adjacent places. It is imported to some extent into Shanghai, the demand being for the interior, into which, though held by the Taepings, it is allowed to be sent, doubtless under the fear that if it were stopped the Taepings might retaliate on the silk trade. A short time after the last mail left a very active demand for rice suddenly set in at Shanghai, and the price rose to a figure unheard of previously. This demand as suddenly ceased, and rates reassumed their previous standard. No specific cause is assigned to this circumstance, and it certainly would appear highly probable that the demand arose from the wants of the Taepings, and that the rice was paid for out of the transit dues on raw silk. At all events, it cannot be doubted that food must have been very scarce in the districts contiguous to Shanghai, which are held by the Taepings; and to their credit it should be observed that no one instance has been adduced against them during the prevalence of the late scarcity of their appropriating rice belonging to the people to their own purposes-a circumstance which forms such a contrast to the conduct of mandarins under similar circumstances as to be well worthy of note.

Notwitstanding the enormous revenue secured to the Taoutai by the British authorities, and extorted by his own ingenuity, the Chinese land and sea forces are known to be several months in arrears of pay, and it is stated on good authority that, unless something be shortly done for their relief, they will go over in a body to the Taepings.

mandarins hold the city under the guns of a few British and French vessels of war. The Taepings are in force at a town called Yow Yau, which is about twelve miles distant, and which is so situated that it commands the communication with the interior. As stated in last reports, contracts had been made at Shanghai for the delivery of silk at Ningpo, the object no doubt being to save some of the transit fees levied by the Tacpings en route to Shanghai. There appears to be some difficulty in arranging matters with the Taepings at Yow Yau, and the consequence is that they are to be attacked and dislodged, doubtless by a combined Chinese and allied force. The Taepings at Yow Yau are known to be pressed for food, and the Taoutai of Ningpo will not allow rice to be sent into the interior-a device peculiarly calculated to intensify the sufferings of the There is no intelligence to people generally. hand from Nankin; hostilities there are, no doubt, suspended until some force can be procured either to assault the city or bombard it. The Imperial Government is still evincing some energy in their attack on Nankin, for a large flotilla was lately equipped at and despatched from Canton to assist in the siege. The expense of this equipment was doubtless drawn from the Foreign Customs Inspectorate. It should be added that this flotilla was lost in the late typhoon.

The intelligence from Pekin, though not politically important, is, nevertheless, far from being devoid of interest. Cholera was raging to a frightful extent, the daily victims exceeding, it is said, a thousand. Kwei-liang, one of the commissioners who negotiated the Tien-tsin treaty with the Earl of Elgin, fell a victim to it. Ho kweitsing, who was governor-general of the Kiang provinces when they fell to the Tacpings, and who has since been under degradation and arrest, was beheaded lately for his misdeeds. Teas come forward freely at Hankow, Kewkiang, Foochow, and Canton, whilst at Amoy rather more than usual is being done. The new crop of green teas is shortly expected at Kewkiang.

By the last mail the advices from Yeddo came down to the 16th ult. These stated that, owing to the assassination of 26th June, the British legation had moved to Yokuhama, the other foreign legations remaining at Yeddo. The dates viâ Shanghai now come down to the 22nd ult. The local Shanghai newspaper stated that all the legations had left Yeddo; but this requires confirmation. If true, something important must have happened between the 16th and 22nd, which does not appear to have been the case. The Japan Herald, prior to the 16th, both published and contradicted such a report. The probability is, that the editor of the Shanghai paper saw this publication, but not the contradiction. public impression here is that matters have reached that point where the Japanese Damios must either be coerced or the trade abandoned. Overland Trade Report.

A Hong Kong journal gives the following particulars of the terrific typhoon in the Chinese waters:

"A typhoon of unprecedented violence swept over Hong Kong, Macao, Canton, and Whampoa, on Sunday, July 27, 1862, committing frightful ravages on property, and being the cause of the loss of no less than 40,000 lives. The centre passed over Canton and Whampoa. Macao did not have it quite so strong, and Hong Kong escaped with a stiff gale, which simply caused a few ships in the harbour to foul one another. The most peculiar features in this terrific scourge is the short time it lasted, and the extraordinary high tide, eight feet higher than usual.

"In Canton it came on to blow at 9:30 A.M., the glass standing at 29.68, and wind from N.E. The wind veered to S.E. at 11 A.M. It was a dead calm at noon, and the sun shining, and then blew furiously from S. and S.W., passing away at that point. Lowest pitch of barometer 29.17. The Imperial fleet of war vessels, numbering sixty, with an immense flotilla of covered soldiers' boats, are all dispersed, and their wrecks line the shore. Ten merchant junks remain at their old anchor-At Ningpo affairs wear a different aspect. The lage. The war junks had just been reviewed, and were upon the point of being despatched for the north, covered with paint and decked with flags, but with very few effective guns. The gale was very severely felt in the new suburbs, where the town has not yet been entirely rebuilt; detached houses of great depth went down as if they were built of cards. In one of these near the Five Genii-gate 160 refugees from the river, &c., had effected a lodging, when they were overwhelmed in its ruins.

"The old Chinese boat people say that within their recollection there has not been so heavy a typhoon, nor so high a tide. It is ruin for a populous place like Canton to be in the centre Macao was the centre in the typhoon of July, 1841. and the strength of this one was very similar to the Macao one, as also in its phenomena as regards the way in which the wind veered round from N.E. at 9 A.M., and S.W. at 3 P.M.

CASUALTIES IN HONG KONG .- Mr. Max Wengler, of the firm of Messrs. Rourjau Hubener and Co., drowned by the capsizing of his boat in the harbour. Two other house boats capsized and lost, crews saved. American ship Bengal fouled H.M.S. Urgent. Peninsular and Oriental steamer Pekin fouled the store chop Sylphide. American brig Sprite dragged her anchors and fouled the Lotus. Dutch barque Borneo, and American barque Oriental (of Hong Kong), fouled each other. H.I.R.M.S. Novick fouled H.C.M.S. Malespina. All the mat sheds in the colony were blown down; several houses belonging to Chinese fell down, causing the deaths of many of their inmates. Hong Kong may be considered as having come off well.

CASUALTIES IN MACAO .- The Chinese-owned ship Chilo, with a full cargo on board, bound to Singapore, was driven on shore and has become a total wreck. The steamer Sycce was blown into a paddy field, but will be floated again. fleets of west-coast boats are lost. In the inner harbour of Macao alone one hundred oil, sugar, and other boats have been lost. The fast boats on their passage from Hong Kong to Mucao were lost-one of them with sixty souls on board-The praya Grande is completely destroyed, and the damage done to houses, gardens, verandahs, &c., considerable. The loss of life in the inner harbour alone was seven hundred.

CASUALTIES IN WHAMPOA .- New Town and Bamboo Town, two villages forming part and parcel of Whampoa, are one mass of ruinshardly a native house is standing. The disasters amongst the shipping is as follows:-American ship Jacob Bell, on shore in a paddy field; she is discharged, dismantled, and will get off with the aid of water casks. &c. British barque Canata went on shore, is now off and in dock, badly injured. The steamer Bombay Castle was in dock receiving a new fan; she filled with water, which prevented her being knocked to pieces. The iron brig Mexicana was thrown on her beam ends in dock. The mail steamer China was within six inches of floating when in the graving dock-did not sustain any damage. The steamer Autelone bus her stem on the dock wall, and laid at an angle of forty-five degrees. The Washington, American ship, went on shore, badly damaged. The steamer Whampoa broke adrift from Couper's Wharf, and went into Assee's Dock. The British ship Iskundershaw went on shore at the Bogue-got off with injury. The Custom House chop was capsized with nine tide-waiters (Europeans) in her, four of whom were drowned: the Bethel was smashed to pieces, nearly all the chops went on shoreone of Mr. Couper's was blown a long distance in shore. The Cha-sze lost her jibboom. After the gale was over; no sampans could be seen, and labourers were not to be had. The loss of life in Whampoa is estimated at 6,000.

CASUALTIES IN CANTON .- With few exceptions the river was clean swept of all its flower boats, hong boats, and every other kind of boat; houses fell and killed people by the hundred; large junks broke adrift and came thundering up the river doing much damage to the Shameen Site, and the houses along shore. The Mandarins are giving 100 dols. for every body found. The Rev. Mr. Gaillard was killed by a wall of his house falling on him.

ORGANISATION OF THE STAFF OF THE ROYAL

No. 798.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following extracts from a despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 238, of July 2, 1862, notifying the future organisation of the staff of the royal artillery in India:—
Para. 8.—H.M.'s Government have, therefore, come to the determination that the appointment of commandant of artillery in the several presidencies shall be abolished; that there shall be four inspectors of artillerv-two in Bengal, one in each of the other

9. These officers, being regimental colonels belonging to brigades serving in India, will be appointed by the several Governments at the recommendation of their respective commanders in chief.
The officers selected for these duties must have served at least three years in India, and must possess the usual qualifications for staff service in that country, the tenure of the appointment being limited to five years, during which period they will not be liable to removal on promotion to the rank of major gadiers of the 1st class.

10. The rank of brigadier general will be conferred upon these officers, who will be placed, in regard to pay and allowances, on the footing of brigadiers of the 1st class.

11. A brigade major, being an officer of artillery, will be attached to each inspector of artillery.
12. A deputy adjutant general of the artillery.

being a regimental lieutenant colonel, will be at-tached to the head quarters of the army in India. 13. The officer nominated to this appointment must have served not less than three years in India: in other respects the appointment will be made subject to all the conditions connected with the appointment of staff officers in India as to qualifications and tenure of office.

14. An assistant adjutant general of the rank of field officer will be attached to head quarters of the hadras and Bombay Presidencies respectively, for the conduct of artillery duties, under the immediate direction of the local commanders in chief.

15. The appointments of assistant adjutant general of artillery in Bengal and Madras, and that of brigade major in Bombay, will cease with that of commandant of artillery, or as soon after as the transfer of their records to the adjutant general's office can be effected.

16. The immediate effect of this measure will be the abolition of the following appointments:—

8 brigadiers, 1st class. 1 brigadier, 2nd class.

2 assistant adjutants general, Bengal.

1 assistant adjutant general, Madras.

1 brigade major, Bombay. 1 deputy assistant quartermaster general, Bengal and the creation of the following appointments:

2 inspectors of artillery, Bengal.

1 inspector of artillery, Madras.

1 inspector of artillery, Bombay.

4 brigade majors.

quarters of the army in India.

1 assistant adjutant general at Bombay.

17. As artillerymen fit for duty and trained to the use of Armstrong guns are now and will henceforward be despatched to India, instead of recruits, as heretofore, the artillery depots of instruction at the three presidencies are no longer requisite.

18. These depots will, therefore, be broken up at once, and artillerymen will, on landing, be sent to the general receiving depots at the presidencies, and thence forwarded, as speedily as possible, to the head quarters of their brigades or batteries, in the same manner as drafts for line regiments.

In view to carrying out the above directions the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to notify that the new organisation of the staff of the royal artillery in India will come into effect from the 1st November next, from which date the appointments at present existing, as notified in paragraph 16, and the artil-lery depots of instruction will cease to exist and the appointments have effect.
o. 799.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to make the following appointment:

Colonel Lord Mark Kerr, C.B., 1st battalion H.M.'s

18th L.I., to be a brigadier, temp., during absence on m.c. of Brig. S. T. Christie, C.B., commanding at

No. 800.—Lieut. J. Thompson, late 58th N.I., has leave from Sept. 15 to Dec. 15, to Bombay, with permission to proceed thence to Europe, on furlough, on private affairs, for 3 years, under old regs.

Letter from civil paymr., No. 20, dated June 24,

Resolution.—It was ruled in this department on Sept. 10, 1858, that travelling allowance at the usual rates should be granted to public officers transferred from one station to another for the convenience of the public service, but not to those transferred on promotion or at their own request.

On an enquiry from the civil paymr, in the Pun-jab, it was decided in March last, that the rule was applicable to chaplains and asst, chaplains, and that, before bills from these officers for travelling allow-ance are passed, they should be required to produce certificates that they are not transferred at their own request if the Gazette be not sufficiently clear on this

With reference to this decision the Venerable the With reference to this decision the Venerable the Archdeacon now solicits orders as to the construction of the rule in the case of a chaplain who expresses a wish for a station, the duties of which he occurrence of a vacancy; and the Government of Bengal, in submitting the question, observes that, though in such cases the prohibition against the grant of travelling allowance would not apply, it would still be impossible to grant the chaplain a certificate that he had not been transferred at his own request.

From the correspondence to which this reference From the correspondence to which this reference has given rise, it appears that although the rule regarding the grant of travelling allowance to officers removed from one appointment to another is clear, there is at present no arrangement for keeping the civil paymaster informed of the cause of removal in every case. H.E. the Governor general in Council is, therefore, pleased to determine that whenever an officer is transferred from one station to another, any claim for travelling allowances shall be supported by a certificate that the transfer is for the benefit of the public service, irrespective of the wishes of the officer transferred.

This rule, H.E. in Council remarks, will remove the difficulty brought to notice by the Government of Bengal, by avoiding the necessity of testifying that officers are not transferred at their own request:

that officers are not transferred at their own request but H.E. in Council trusts that due discretion will be exercised in granting the certificates now pre-scribed, and that no certificate will be given in cases where the officer is transferred to meet his own convenience only.

REPORT ON THE POLICE ADMINISTRA-TION OF THE SUBURBS OF CALCUTTA FOR 1861-62.

From S. Wauchope, Esq., c.B., Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, dated June 24, 1862.

I have the honour to submit, for the information of the Hon, the Lieut, gov. of Bengal, the accom- river and into the Soonderbunds for the purpose of panying statement of crime reported to have been year 1861-62.

2. The suburbs extend from Balee Khal and Barnagore, on the north, to the Botanical Gardens their lodgings looking out for fresh victims. The and the end of Garden Reach, on the south, and strange part of the matter was that, although I from the Salt Water Lake, on the east, to a distance of one to two miles to the west of the River Hooghly, on the west.

3. I had charge of the suburbs to the east of the River Hooghly during the whole year, but took over at the canal and, so returning unobserved, taking the Howrah division only on the 9th July. I have their booty at once to Balee and Cossipore, where it reported so fully on the organisation of the police was immediately disposed of. My police arrested a in my letter No. 172 of the 17th Feb. last, to your address, that I shall not here allude further to the subject, but proceed at once to remark on the various descriptions of crime which occurred during by us. the year.

4. MURDER.—There were two murders reported. The first was that of a woman, Mungla Dassee, aged about sixteen, by her husband, Modoosoodun Kurmokar. It appears he had an intrigue with his sister-in-law, a widow, and his wife having discovered it, watching her opportunity, locked him up with the widow. When the door was at length opened he seized a crow-bar, murdered his wife, and fied. This was on the 20th September, 1861. The police traced him out and arrested him, and he executed on the 13th January, 1862.

The second was that of a woman of the town, who was murdered at Bhowanipore on the night of the 6th of March, 1862, and property stolen from her house valued at Rupees 73-12. From the circumstances of the case it was evident that she had been visited by some person during the night, who had gagged and murdered her with a billhook. trace has ever been found of the murderer. She was a woman of intemperate habits, and about three years previous had been drugged and robbed of all her property in the same house, and no trace was obtained of the offender. I am afraid, as I have have often before remarked, that the practice of murdering women of the town for the sake of their ornaments is very common, perhaps more so than is generally supposed, and the police are almost invariably unsuccessful in their efforts to bring the perpetrators to justice. The entry of strange persons to the houses of these women, and their departure at extraordinary hours, is not considered suspicious, and consequently long before the murder is discovered the murderer is far beyond the reach of the neighbouring police.

5. CUTTING AND WOUNDING, ARSON.—The cases of "Cutting and Wounding" call for no particular remark, and in those of "Arson," where every son arrested was acquitted, I can only say that it is very doubtful if any of the fires were the work of incendiaries.

6. DACOITY.—I had one case of dacoity during the year. It took place last September in the house of a pawnbroker near Tallygunge, standing by itself, and close to the boundary of the suburbs. Property valued at Rs. 2,594, consisting almost entirely of pledged goods, was robbed; the owner of the house was wounded, and the robbers got clear away. Mr. Mylan, the superintendent of the division, and some of the best native officers, were set to work, and, although not one of them had ever before seen a house where a dacoity had been committed, in the course of about a fortnight obtained a clue, by following which they arrested the greater portion of the gang, who belonged to Calcutta and to the Hooghly and Howrah districts, and recovered a considerable part of the property. Fifteen men were concerned in this dacoity, of whom ten were con-victed. The rest made their escape out of the neighbouring districts. In this case a very well known Calcutta receiver, on whom I had had my eve for many years, was convicted on the clearest evidence, and sentenced to sixteen years' imprisonment. There can be no doubt of some of the old suburban police, who had remained on the establish-ment, conniving at this dacoity; but, with this exception, I was well pleased with the result. This case proved the advantage of the union of the Calcutta with the suburban police. Before this took place there would have been considerable difficulty in arresting those of the dacoits who lived in Calcutta, whereas, in the present instance, some of the best Calcutta officers assisted those of the suburbs, and the arrests were made without delay or difficulty.

7. While on the subject of this dacoity, I may as well refer to another case, although it is more intimately connected with the Calcutta police. I had for a long time been aware that there was a powerful gang of dacoits which used to go every month from Calcutta and the neighbourhood on the dacoity. They were about eighty in number. committed in the suburbs of Calcutta during the knew most of their names, and I discovered that year 1861-62. while some went out to rob, the others remained could always find out when they left Calcutta, I never could discover how or when they returned. last I discovered that, instead of coming back by water, they were in the habit of engaging carriages number of the gang, recovered a quantity of stolen property, and found their boats, which they had scuttled and sunk to prevent their being discovered The case was made over to the dacoity commissioner, and I believe several have been con- nant-Governor.

victed; but, before the proceedings of their gang were thus put a stop to, the injury caused by them to persons travelling by boat must have been immense.

8. Burglary.—I was perfectly startled on taking charge of the suburbs to find the enormous numbe of burglaries committed everywhere in the course of each month, without the slightest success on the part of the police in arresting the perpetrators, and the worst of the matter was that evidently many were never reported, and in those that were the majority of the persons robbed declined to prosecute. It is true that few of the burglaries were of a very heavy nature, but still it was most discreditable to the police that robbers should dig holes in houses large enough to carry out chests and convey them clear away. But the same state of things prevailed in Calcutta not many years ago; a dozen burglaries in one night was then a common event, whereas now they are almost unknown.

9. My great efforts were directed towards preventing the concealment of the crime, and during the year no less than 223 were reported, in which property valued at Rs. 6,893 was stolen, and Rs. 1,339, or one-fifth, recovered. Eighty men were convicted of burglary, and sixty-six of lurking, nearly all of the latter being old offenders, about to commit burglary.

10. In the Howrah Division alone 102 burglaries were reported, in which Rs. 457, out of Rs. 1,266 stolen, were recovered. It is difficult to make a comparison with former years; but, supposing the same number of burglaries were committed the pre-vious year as in this, and I cannot think they were less numerous, I have ascertained that of property valued at Rs. 3,006, only Rs. 18 were recovered and six persons convicted.

11. The old police seemed to be utterly helpless with regard to this crime. Hancef Khan, the best darogah in the Lower Provinces, told me he could do nothing with them, and that he could not make out where the burglars came from, and where they went; that, in fact, they seemed to rise out of and sink into the ground.

12. But although we have not put down the crime of burglary, I believe we have, to a certain extent, obtained the confidence of the people, and we have discovered a very curious state of affairs regarding the perpetrators of this crime, resembling, in many respects, what existed previous to the commencement of the Dacoity Commission in 1852.

13. I have no hesitation in saying, after very areful and diligent enquiry, that in those districts where the dacoity commissioner has worked with the greatest vigour, burglary has increased in nearly the same proportion as dacoity has decreased. coits have become burglars, and taken to a trade which is much less dangerous and quite as profit-The Gwallas of Jehanabad, in the Hooghly district, and the Nuddea Bedgas, men with whom I have been acquainted for many years as dacoits, now come before me as burghars. There are gangs of them in Calcutta and elsewhere constantly rob-bing and plundering, only, instead of being collected in twenties as formerly, they are now associated in small parties of two or three.

14. I am perfectly certain we shall be as successful in checking burglary in the suburbs as we have been in Calcutta. In the Chitpore division alone Mr. Littlemore, who is a most energetic officer, has, in forty-six burglaries, succeeded in procuring the conviction of forty-four burglars, and in the other divisions their haunts are tolerably well-known to my police officers.

15. THEFT .- There is nothing among the cases of theft which calls for any particular remark, except that about half of the whole of the property stolen was taken from houses within the premises of the ex-King of Oude and in their immediate neighbourhood. In my letter No. 956, dated the 1st November, 1861, I brought to the notice of the Lieut. governor the discreditable state of affairs prevailing in Garden Reach. I am happy to state that the remonstrance addressed to the ex-King has had the best effect. The dependants and others residing with him are kept in better order. Many of the scoundrels who lived there have quitted Garden Reach, and every assistance is given to the police.

16. During the year 5,185 persons passed through the hands of the suburban police; of these twenty-six were convicted and eight acquitted at the sessions; 4,160 convicted and 991 acquitted by the magistrate. Property valued at Rupees 58,168-1-6 was robbed and stolen, of which Rupees 19,021-8-8, or nearly one-third, were recovered. I trust these results will be deemed satisfactory to the Lieute-

17. I have to express my obligations to the magistrates of the 24-Pergunnahs and Howrah for the co-operation and assistance they have invariably afforded me in extending the Calcutta police system to the suburbs. It was looked on with disfavour at first by the people, and was opposed by the officers of the court, the native Mooktears, and, I am sorry to say, by some of the subordinate magisterial officers. It is now liked by the people generally, as is proved by the enormous number of applications of every description made daily to the various police stations, and, with the aid of the district magistrate, the whole machinery moves on without jar or bindrance.

18. My own impression is that my superintendence might be extended without difficulty and expense to the large towns, such as Serampore and Hooghly, and even up both sides of the river for twenty or thirty miles. Calcutta is the head-quarters of nearly all the serious crimes committed within the radius. There are hundreds of professional thieves, the swell mob of Calcutta, who go regular tours in the interior, and these men are quite unknown to the Mofussil Police. Indeed, they sume so many disguises, and many of them have such an air of respectability and wealth, as to be able to deceive all but the most experienced. Some months ago I sent three detective officers to a great festival held near Calcutta, where they found more than sixty of this class, who would, no doubt, have made a glorious harvest had they not been prevented. In the same manner they go where large bodies of people are congregated, besides travelling singly all over the country.

19. The success of this system of police must, of course, depend much on the superintendents of divisions, and I attribute any which may have attended its introduction to the suburbs to the exertions and good conduct of Superintendents Littlemore, Mylan, and Percy, who have all given me much satisfaction during the year. The European and Native officers have generally conducted themselves well, but it is no easy matter to procure men fit to be Native con-Nearly the whole of the old Chowkeedars have left the suburbs, and although I transferred a considerable number from Calcutta, there are many in the service who are raw and of very little use for police purposes. Time, however, will overcome this, and in a year or two the men will learn their duties and become efficient officers.

STEAMERS ROUND THE CAPE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,-Your journal of the 10th inst. contains extracts from several Indian papers which have reference to the steamers of the East India and London Shipping Company (Limited)-statements calculated in the highest degree to injure the company, and hold them up to public oppro-

It is unfortunate that a journal so well known as Allen's Indian Mail should give currency to such charges without making the slightest inquiry as to their truth or falsehood, although the head offices of the company are in London. The legal aspect of the question is of course a serious one, but it is not the wish of the board to be compelled to insist upon this, but to deal with the accusations made strictly upon their merits.

The accusations may be taken as threefold:—
1st. Protracted passages. 2nd. The want of stores. 3rd. The want of moral discipline.

The first of these charges admits of a complete answer. It is notorious that the protracted pas sages have been less upon the average than the first-class sailing ships that were at sea under the same conditions of time and weather. The passages, it is true, did not come up to the expectation of the board; perhaps the board were too sanguine in their expectation of the results to be obtained by the combined power of sails and steam.

The first voyages, however, enabled them to discover the precise causes which had led to the protracted voyages. These causes were met, and the board have the satisfaction of knowing that two of their ships have since made rapid passages to India, one of them, the Hydaspes, having made he quickest passage on record.

The next charge is that of the want of stores. Fortunately, out of the six ships which have upon her homeward voyage. Why should these charges be all raked together and flung headlong at the company? Assume for a moment that the Queen of the South did fall short of provisions arising from a protracted passage, have none of the "first-class sailing ships" that are so loudly referred to done the same? Does not this constant reference give the key to the anxiety of some of the Indian journals to damage the interests of the East India and London Shipping Company? In answer to the charge itself, it may be observed that it is simply "not true." Had you taken the trouble to inquire we could have shown to you the source from which these unfounded ex parte statements have arisen.

This ship was victualled in England upon precisely the same liberal scale as the other five ships, concerning which no complaints whatever have been made, and we are prepared to submit to you communications from many of the passengers by this ship, now in England, ladies and gentlemen of position and respectability, who ex press their astonishment that any such charge should have been preferred against the Queen of the South.

The next charge, that of the want of moral discipline, is by far the most serious. It is upon this point, above all others, upon which the Board cannot avoid expressing a very strong opinion; how any one, especially the editor of a respectable journal, should have given countenance, much less currency, to such ex parte statements it is diffi-cult to imagine. The ship that is more particularly referred to remained in Calcutta 37 days, and surely if any charge could have been made against it it would have been whilst all the parties were upon the spot. Upon the contrary, the company's advice from their agents in India, in reference to this particular ship, runs as follows: -" It affords us much pleasure to announce that the screw steamer Jason arrived here on the 12th inst. It will be as gratifying to the Board as it has been to ourselves to know that out of Captain Hurst's large number of passengers not one had any cause of complaint, but, on the contrary, all expressed themselves delighted with the kindness and attention shown them by the captain and officers, who really, as far as we can judge, seem fully to have merited the praise bestowed on them. We believe that before the vessel reached Madras the leading passengers went to the captain and told him that a purse of about £100 had been made up for him, and which they asked his acceptance of, but which, it appears, he thought it best to decline. The ladies, however, said they would be offended if he did not take a testimonial from them, so a piece of plate is to be presented to him to-morrow." Surely this is sufficient to warrant the Board in denying emphatically any such charges. The Board lay no claim to infullibility, but they do complain of the unfairness of being singled out for such unwarrantable attacks as have lately been made upon them in some of the Indian journals-attacks made, for the most part, upon the unsupported testimony of a single individual, who may or may not be entitled to credit.

The Board feel that no exertion has been spared to make their line of steamers what it should be-a first-class line of steamers. Even were there any shortcomings in any one ship, arising from causes beyond the control of the Board, surely no one would be found to do what has been done in this instance-viz., to include the whole of the company's fleet in the same sweeping category.

From the time the company commenced operations to the present time they have never received one single complaint from any passenger carried upon their ships, except in the one case of the passenger carried in the Queen of the South, whose ournal has been supplied for publication in the Indian papers.

The Board court every inquiry into their proceedings. "The quantity of provisions," "the testimonials of their officers," "the private instructions to their commanders," are all open to your inspection, and they feel sure that the result of your inquiry would satisfy you that the commade completed voyages to India, the only ship pany and its officers have been most unjustly complained of is the Queen of the South, and that assailed. I may add, in conclusion, that the assertion as to forty passengers going overland from Madras, likewise that also which states that the head steward has a contract for the supply of food, are, like all the other charges, pure fictions -they are simply malicious untruths .- I am, sir, your obedient servant,

MANCHESTER AND SIR CHARLES WOOD.

THE Cotton Lords of Lancashire have declared war against her Majesty's present Secretary of State for India. The proclamation of hostilities issued by Mr. Laing has been adopted by the manufacturers of Manchester, and it is proposed to memorialise the Premier demanding the immediate dismissal of Sir Charles Wood from the office he now holds. Conscious of their own shortcomings, they look around for a scare-goat, anxious only to shift the -blame from off their own shoulders. At the meeting of the Cotton Supply Association on Tuesday, the 23rd, the Vice-President, Mr. E. Ashworth, even ventured to assert that "if the Land Tenure Bill and the Contract Law had been enforced, as was expected, India would now have been supplying us with cotton." Now, this is pure and unmitigated nonsense. Had those laws been now there is no reason to believe in force single additional bale have been forthcoming up to the present time. The president, Mr. John Cheetham, frankly admitted that the Bombay merchants had tried the experiment of sending agents into the interior to open a direct communication with the ryots, but found that it did not answer. The fact is, that at the prices which have hitherto ruled it does not pay the ryot to grow any very large quantity of cotton. There are other crops far more profitable, and which he therefore naturally prefers. No doubt the cultivation will gradually be extended if a certain and remunerative demand can be relied upon; but even then it is very questionable if the annual supply of really good cotton from India will exceed two millions of bales. The quality, however, can be considerably improved, not only by the introduction of exotic seed, but by greater care in cleaning, ginning, and packing. The local consumption, already very great, may be expected to increase in proportion as the native population emerges out of the abject poverty in which their own improvidence aiding the rapacity of usurers has for so many generations held them enthralled. The China market is also likely to require larger supplies than heretofore, with the advantage of a shorter voyage and less variable prices. English manufacturers will do well, therefore, not to trust too implicitly to India as a substitute for the Southern States of North America, unless they are prepared to insure a permanent demand at prices fairly profitable to the grower. As this is obviously out of the question, they cannot safely reckon upon more than 2,000,000 bales per annum, of a quality equal to good Middling Orleans.

Mr. Cheetham, indeed, maintains that it is "a duty and a responsibility of the Government to aim to assist in the attainment of the desired object," and he enforces this view by charging the Government with a violation of the laws of political economy in other respects. They grow tea and opium; they own and work iron foundries; they give assistance and encouragement for the cultivation of flax; and yet refuse to do anything on behalf of the cotton trade. But if India were made "an exporting country to the extent of two or three times her present trade," "would not the Government derive a better rent for their land?" Certainly not, Mr. Cheetham, under the permanent settlement for which your party clamours so vehemently. If the land revenue be settled in perpetuity it will no longer be to the immediate interest of the Government to construct canals of irrigation or roads for the conveyance of agricultural produce. But it is far easier to repeat a cuckoo cry than to give sound reasons for doing so, and the Manchester School have at all times been more ready to find fault than to suggest practical remedies. They point to the hole in the rut and loudly abuse the driver of the wain, but never do they take the slightest trouble to mend the road or assist the floundering team. What avails it to say that it is not "the duty" of the consumer to place himself in direct communication with the grower? If the former stand in urgent need of that which is produced by the latter, it is nothing short of a drivelling imbecility to hold to the rules which guide their ordinary relations in normal times. Exceptional circumstances call for exceptional treatment, and if one system has proved inefficient recourse must be had to another. But, says Mr. Ashworth, "we ought to demand free access to our fellow subjects in India, so that we may be of mutual benefit to each other." Who denies free access; who raises any obstacles; who places any obstructions in the way? Is it the Government of India,-that Government which has already expended, and is still expending, such vast sums of money in improving the internal communication between all parts of that immense empire? Have these provincial orators ever formed to themselves any idea of the extent of our Indian possessions? Have they ever given a thought to the rapid succession of wars which were forced upon the Company's Government, either in self-defence or in furtherance of an Imperial policy, and which more than absorbed the revenues arising from the acquisition of territory? Have they ever reflected upon the exceedingly small number of European officials scattered over so wide a surface and in the midst of an indolent, distrustful, and unfriendly people, averse to change even for their own obvious advantage? We are now told to look to Turkey and take a lesson from that enlightened and enterprising The Porte has already re-Government. nounced the tithe levied upon cotton, and has abolished, for five years to come, all taxes upon hitherto uncultivated land which shall be devoted to the cultivation of that staple. Roads, too, are to be made in Syria and that which was not true, and had treated all their arguments as those actuated by merely selfish motives." We are curious to learn what other motives actuated these worthy but maligned and slighted individuals. Their own conduct towards the distressed operatives, thrown out of employ in some measure by their twofold improvidence as to the supply of the raw material and over-production, is not calculated to impress the public mind with a very exalted belief in their generosity, their disinterestedness, their pure love of the common weal. If their motives are not altogether selfish, there is no difficulty in giving an unquestionable proof of their single-mindedness by pledging themselves to take so many bales of Indian cotton for a certain period at a certain price. As it is, if cotton from India and from Turkey, of precisely the same quality, but the latter one farthing per pound cheaper than the former, were to arrive in Liverpool, to which would the preference be given? Would patriotism and sympathy for "our fellow subjects in India" count for anything against that farthing profit? The "India Board," we fear, was not very far wrong in its estimation of the motives which actuate this Association, however legitimate the object for which it has been formed and maintained. Mr. Laing himself was far too astute to claim any credit for unselfishness on the part of the Lancashire capitalists. "After all," he said, "cotton-spinning was an affair of business, and not of philanthropy; and he did not see that he had any right to call upon a man to go into what he thought a bad speculation." Very true; nor is there any reason why Government should be importuned to enter upon the bad speculation of biassing the ryots in their choice of what crop they should cultivate, or of employing its own servants as agents for English cotton-spinners. But, as Mr. Laing showed, the real point at issue is of a far more important and comprehensive character than the export of the greater or less quantity of any particular kind of produce :-

ment which has already expended, and is still expending, such vast sums of money in improving the internal communication between all parts of that immense empire? Have these provincial orators ever formed to themselves any idea of the extent of our Indian possessions? Have they ever given a thought to the rapid succession of wars which were forced upon the Company's Government, either in self-defence or in furtherance of an Imperial policy, and which more than absorbed the revenues arising from the acquisition of territory? Have they ever reflected upon the exceedingly small number of European officials scattered over so wide a surface and in the midst of an indolent, distrustful, and unfriendly people, averse to change even for their own obvious advantage? We are now told to look to Turkey and take a lesson from that enlightened and enterprising Government. The Porte has already renounced the tithe levied upon cotton, and has abolished, for five years to come, all taxes upon hitherto uncultivated land which shall be devoted to the cultivation of that staple. Roads, too, are to be made in Syria and Turkey, and thus a despotic Government has put to shame the India Board,—whatever that may mean—which, says Mr. Ashworth, "had treated them from the first with the greatest contempt and contumely, had-stated Governor-general. Under the new constitution this was all changed. The tendency was altogether the other way, and the interference extensed to the most petty details, and that in anything but a liberal Under the new constitution this and progressive spirit."

The question, then, is, should India be governed from Calcutta or from Westminster? At present there are two rulers, each responsible to Parliament, but who may pursue totally different lines of policy. The Viceroy being on the spot should be, one would imagine, the best judge of what is expedient to be done, and the more so since the Secretary of State is not likely ever to possess a local knowledge and experience of Indian matters. But if he is not to be the virtual ruler of the land, let it at once be understood that his duty is merely to register and carry out the orders he receives from the home authorities. The reference to England, on even questions of detail which might fairly be entrusted to the Executive, must inevitably impede the action of the Government, and inspire the natives with distrust and contempt. Let there be one ruling power, whether London or Calcutta be the real seat of Government, and so avoid the constantly-recurring misapprehensions, delays, and recriminations which retard the progress of the country, and destroy all confidence in the administration. It is evident that this question will be mooted and hotly contested when Parliament again assembles for the despatch of business. Manchester has already taken the field, and will act under the guidance of the ex-Financial member of Lord Canning's Council. The strife will be embittered by personal enmity, and hard words may be expected to be freely interchanged. One speaker at the second meeting at Manchester was in favour of a Bill of impeachment, but probably the majority of his associates would be perfectly contented with the resignation of Sir Charles Wood, and willing to dispense even with that if a supply of cotton come to hand in the mean time. The abolition of the Council of India is imperatively demanded by Mr. Laing, but he has not attempted to show how that would diminish the influence of the Secretary of State. To the unprejudiced mind it would seem that the Council must be some sort of restraint upon the most autocratic minister, who otherwise might issue what orders he pleased in secrecy and in haste, and compel the subordinate Government in India to adopt the most unjust and ruinous measures. With Mr. Laing's concluding remarks, however, most persons who know anything of India will heartily agree :-

"The spirit," he said, "of every board sitting in London to govern a distant dependency was that of pedagogy, regarding every measure adopted in the colony as a sort of schoolboy exercise to be revised colony as a sort of schoolboy exercise to be revised and corrected at home. If we wished India to be kept contented, we must have there a Government which, while absolute, was felt to be a national Government in India, and influenced by public opinion on the spot. The control from England should be limited to a general control in matters of large national Concern resembling very much the sort of helm so successfully, patiently, and with the calm dignity of a thorough English gentleman steered the sinking vessel of England's honour?-Yours, RELIEF OF LUCKNOW.

CENTRAL INDIAN PRIZE MONEY. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

-We hear a great deal of the distribution of Indian prize money, but nothing whatever of any remuneration to the troops who, under General Roberts, successfully attacked and captured Kotah, the capital of Rajpootana, under the immediate superintendence of Brigadier-general George Lawrence. This is extremely unfair on an army of eight or ten thousand men, who underwent such terrible fatigue for nine months under a burning sun. A VOICE FROM KOTAH.

MISCELLANE OUS

PRESENTS FOR THE KING OF MADAGASCAR. The presents offered by the English Government to the King of Madagascar, Radama II., consist of ten cases, and contain, among other objects, the portrait of Queen Victoria, a Bible, magnificently bound, a parasol, a scarlet mantle, a sword, a gun, musical instruments, a silver cup, a pair of silver goblets, and several uniforms. of these articles is about 40,000f. The Government of the Emperor of the French has also made magnificent presents to King Radama, s part of which, consisting of arms, military uniforms, and Court dresses, were sent in the month of December last, under the care of Baron Brossard de Corbigny. In addition, M. Lambert, on his return to Tananariva in June last, was the bearer of two crowns destined for the King and Queen. The Royal flag of Madagascar is white with a red border; in the centre is a spread eagle standing on a globe, with a crown above its head.

SPECIE TO THE EAST .- The Bombay mail steamer Mooltan, which sailed on the 27th, took out specie to the amount of £206,615, of which £2,665 in gold was for Alexandria, and the remainder, £30,100 in gold and £173,850 in silver, for Bombay.

PIRACY IN THE EASTERN ARCHIPELAGO. Colonial-office have intimated, in reply to repreentations with regard to the unprotected condition of the Island of Labuan from piratical attacks, that instructions will be forthwith sent to the Admiral on the China station to despatch as early as may be practicable to the coast of Borneo some suitable vessel for the suppression of piracy in the Eastern Archipelago.

India Bonds.—A notice has been issued by the Secretary of State for India in Council that on and after the 30th September India Bonds may be exchanged at the Bank of England for new bonds with coupons attached, carrying the same rate of interest as the old bonds -- a change that will be an obvious advantage to holders. notice, however, does not relieve holders of bonds who may desire to retain those securities from the necessity of bringing them in on or before the 30th to be marked for continuation at the interest of £4 per cent. per annum from the 31st of March next. If holders omit to take that step their bonds may be paid off on and after that date.

DEATH OF DR. BURNES .- We regret to learn the sudden death of Dr. James Burnes, which happened a few days since at Manchester, whilst on his wedding tour. He was elder brother of the late Sir Alexander Burnes, who fell at Cabul of control exercised by the House of Lords over the proceedings of the House of Commons, and which existed only on the tenure of being exercised rarely and with discretion."

A SUGGESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I observe at Charing-cross an empty pedestal opposite to Sir C. Napier's. Is this not a fitting spot to fix a statue of the ever-memorable illustrious Canning, the pilot who in that interest of the late Sir Alexander Burnes, who fell at Cabul in 1841, and himself formerly held the post of Physician-general at Bombay. Dr. Burnes, who fell at Cabul in 1841, and himself formerly held the post of Physician-general at Bombay. Dr. Burnes, who was known in the literary world as the author of a "Visit to the Ameers of Scinde," was a magistrate for the counties of Forfar and Middlesex, and was one of the most active of the visiting justices of the Lunatic Asylum at Hanwell. The deceased gentleman received the Hanoverian Order of Knightheod in 1837. By his first wife, affitting spot to fix a statue of the ever-memorable illustrious Canning, the pilot who in that on his wedding tour. He was elder brother of STEAMERS ROUND THE CAPE.—There has been a good deal of discussion in some of the Indian papers relative to the merits of the new line of screw steamers from England to India, via the Cape, and the heaviest charges have been brought against the commanders and pursers of some of them, with reference to the bad quality and de ficient quantity of the provisions, the lack of attendance, and the ill breeding of the officers. We (Madras Athenaum) have good reason to believe, however, that much exaggeration disfigures those adverse statements, and that the public have no cause to fear risking themselves on board the ships of the company in question. Many passengers, indeed, have publicly expressed their entire satisfaction with the treatment experienced by them during their voyages.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. stoth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Conte is the apostle. . . . Of the whole work we can confideably say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics and the metaphysics and the metaphysics and the metaphysics and the metaphysi

A SHORT TRIP in HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. ANSTED. Post 8vo., cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted's descriptions are written with a neatness attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. His volume is one both of value and entertainment: a book calculated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube."—Athenæum, Aug. 16, 1863.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so describing events as to suzgest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ('Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable highminded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failures."—Spectator.

By Duncan Forders, LLD., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes a stout fight for the Hudoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the milabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europes. The book is, therefore, full of curious for that lean on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative etymology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the mainers and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but freshly, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Hersid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

The Bombay mail of the 12th September has at length arrived, with the scantiest possible amount of news.

The execution of the notorious Pandoo Rung, alias Rao Sahib, which took place at Cawnpore on the 21st of August, appears to have given general satisfaction to the European community, still unsatiated with the blood of rebels. There can be no doubt that this man richly deserved his fate, but for all that we cannot admire the taste and feeling that prompted English ladies to witness his last agony. Another ringleader of the mutineers, named Mahomed Ali, is said to have been apprehended at Indore, and put to death by the orders of Holkar. Serious complaints, by the way, are made of the maladministration of justice in the dominions of that native potentate, and a pretext is evidently sought to justify the intervention of the Supreme Government. Any interference by the paramount Power is likely, however, to do far more harm than good, and is in every respect undesirable and impolitic. An article on this subject copied into our columns from the Friend of India will be read with considerable interest.

His Excellency, the Viceroy, returned to Calcutta from Bhagulpore on the 30th August with renovated health. The Commander-in-Chief was to leave Simla about the 25th of the present month, and after a tour through Central India will proceed to Lucknow. Sir Hugh Rose will then meet Lord Elgin at Agra about the middle of January, and will accompany his lordship to Simla.

A public demonstration in favour of Mr. Laing was to have been held at Calcutta on the 30th August, but on the previous day a telegram was received by the Agra and United Service Bank announcing that a reconciliation had been effected between the Secretary of State and the late Financial Member of Council. In consequence of this report, which was not, however, generally credited, the meeting was postponed until after the receipt of more authentic intelligence by the following

We have taken from a Calcutta journal a long and somewhat rambling explanation of the military scandal at Dinapore, but do not vouch for its accuracy. In all countries there are two ways of telling the same story, but in India there are twenty-not one of which need necessarily be true.

The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal held a durbar at Dibroogurh on the 9th August, when he strongly urged the native gentry to have their children instructed in the English lan- utmost to maintain order. The guard of the

Mr. Mead, of the Hurkaru, and Mr. Judge, of the Assam Company, were drowned on the morning of the 6th September at Calcutta by the upsetting of a boat.

From a supplement to the Calcutta Gazette of the 27th August, it appears that eleven millions sterling are to be expended on public works by the Government, or under its superintendence, in the course of 1862.63. The Imperial grants for public works are 388 laklis; the local grants, including the one per cent. of the Income-tax, 147 lakhs; and the funds for Mysore, administered as a trust, 12 lakhs and 79 thousand. All this, Rs. 5,35,00,000, is raised in India. In addition to this there is a sum of Rs. 5,52,50,000 raised in England for railway and irrigation companies.

Dost Mahomed is reported to have arrived within a short distance of Herat, after suffering heavy loss at Bayanbaug. His further progress was likely to be sternly disputed, and the rumour is, of course, revived of money and reinforcements being forwarded from Persia for the defence of Herat.

We hear that a large quantity is now lying on the banks of the Indus, which the owners will not ship on account of increased river freight; and that the Judicial Commissioner of the Punjab has been directed by the Government to urge forward the much needed repair of the roads, and to endeavour to increase the facilities of communication. The authorities in Nagpore are also fully engaged in promoting the cultivation of the waste land with this all necessary pro-duct, and if Manchester be but unselfish, and the Government of India left unhampered to carry out its own projects, England may yet ook with certainty to India for future immuty from her present manufacturing dis-

THE DINAPORE SCANDAL.

We mentioned some days ago that Brigadier Burney had resigned his command at Dinapore, and that the resignation had taken place under pressure, if not under compulsion. We now lay a statement of the case before the public, which we can guarantee as substantially correct; and we may, we apprehend, add this to the list of eccentric and unintelligible examples of military jurisprudence which have of late attracted so much attention, and of which the military body holds the unenviable monopoly. The facts we are about to relate we have gathered from several independent sources, and they may be strictly relied on. We must premise by saying, that in laying this narrative before our readers, which in the prosecution of an unavoidable public duty we consider ourselves bound to do, we regret extremely the necessity of making special and frequent allusion to a lady; this necessity, however, arises out of the injudicious course taken by her own friends, and is, under the circumstances, unavoidable. The delicacy which would fain spare the gentler sex from public notice is of necessity set aside when it interferes with the higher pur poses of justice.

It appears, then, that the brigadier had formed very intimate friendship with the wife of the colonel commanding H.M.'s 38th Regiment; so great was the intimacy that the lady was constantly to be seen driving in the brigadier's carriage, while her husband was engaged in his own pursuits. The brigadier was a constant and welcome visitor at the house, and the depository of many friendly confidences; constant gifts, christening dresses, crockery, China fans, and chow chow were showered upon the lady by his lavish hands, and the devotedness of a warm and generous friendship on the part of the gentleman was met with the confiding esteem and flattering attachment of the lady. While this state of things was at its most satisfactory and gratifying crisis, the colonel left Dinapore for Darjeeling, and a few days afterwards a ball was given by the regiment. At that ball the lady appeared in a dress, which, though probably the height of fashion, was not sufficiently high to meet with the full approbation of the spectators. Whether the criticisms of the community were well founded or not, it is not within our province to determine; but it is necessary to mention the fact, because it has been the source of a scandal which has obtained general circulation, and has been re peated far and wide to the prejudice of the brigadier. The story imagined, or invented, is, that the brigadier insulted the lady in the ballroom by placing his hand on her shoulder, and telling her her dress was indelicate. For this fable we can find no foundation whatever, save in the simple fact that the brigadier, at the lady's own request, handed her her scarf when she moved from one sofa to another. The day after the ball, the brigadier, in writing to her as he constantly did, in the spirit of familiar gossip habitual to both, made some allusions to the dresses of the ladies who figured in the dance; indulged in somewhat severe censures upon the everlast ing crinoline, and its effect when in rotation upon a sensitive elderly gentleman seated on a low chair, with sundry other pleasantries of the kind; and, with reference to a previous confidential complaint of the lady, that her husband could not or would not afford to keep an English maid for her, he made the kind and considerate offer of taking two rooms in their house for his office and paying half the rent, thereby enabling the colonel to overcome the financial difficulty. this letter he received from the lady the same evening a reply, written in the usual friendly style, a tolerable proof that, whatever others might think, she, at least, had found no cause of offence in the letter. But "what dire events from little causes spring!" This letter contained a postscript, and in the postscript was a facetious allusion to the name of another lady, with whom its recipient was living. The other, and we may be sure that the irreverent postscript did not escape notice, and it is shrewdly suspected that this playful postsoript had no little share in all the subsequent events. That very night, when Brigadier Burney was about to abandon the anxieties of the day and steep his senses in the forgetfulness of sleep, the husband of the lady thus alluded to in the postscript, with the adjutant of H.M.'s 38th, Lieut. Eyre, entered his sleeping apartment, informed him that his lady correspondent was highly offended with his letter, insisted that he should abstain from all further communication with her, and demanded from him the note she had written in reply to his " objectionable" epistle. The brigadier honourably but unwisely delivered this note, and the heroic ambassadors took their departure. After this nocturnel adventure, the brigadier wrote an apologetic and conciliating letter to the colonel, expressing his hearty regret at having unintentionally given offence to a lady for whom he entertained sincere esteem. The reply to this letter was curt and uncourteous, intimating that Colonel W-- would "shortly answer it in person." The brigadier supposing from this that Colonel W——intended to return to Dinapore for personal explanation, though of what description it was impossible to divine, gave up his claim to leave of absence which had been sanctioned, and waited quietly for two months at Dinapore to meet the colonel and act as circumstances might demand. Colonel Wever, never came at all, and no further open proceedings were adopted. Several months after these occurrences, the brigadier received an official despatch from head quarters, and then, for the first time, he discovered that secret charges had been "confidentially" brought against him before the general of the division, and through him to the Commander-in-Chief, without the brigadier receiving the slightest hint or intimation of the same; and that on secret and ex-parte statements he had been also "confidentially" condemned of "disgraceful conduct" towards a lady, and of allowing an officer under his command to threaten him with corporal chastisement. In consideration of these supposed misfeances, he is then " confidentially " told that he must resign his post; but it is added, that if he denies the soft impeachment, a strict inquiry shall be instituted. On this the brigadier, after first expressing his extreme reluctance to involve the lady's name in unnecessary publicity, after vainly asking to know on what portion of his private letter (of which he is refused a copy) the charge of "disgraceful conduct" is founded, eventually challenges the inquiry proffered, at the same time indignantly and emphatically denying that any threat of corporal chastisement had ever been made. The order for "inquiry" is then issued. General Campbell comes to Dinapore, and the brigadier, confident of acquittal, appears before the tribunal, consisting of the general and Colonel Turner, the Deputy Judge Advocate general.

The charges, then, were—the first of "disgraceful conduct to Mrs. --," resting upon the Brigadier's private and confidential letter, written in the unguarded style of familiar friend ship, and comprising all manner of subjects from crinoline upwards; the second of submitting to a threat "founded on the assertion, as it then appeared, of Mr. Eyre," a junior officer, who had Quixotically assumed the championship of the lady, and whose statement, improbable in itself, was flatly contradicted by the Brigadier. Now, an "inquiry" into such matters as these, unless it were intended as a farce, necessarily presupposes the production of the charge, the reception of the answer, proofs in support, proofs in refutation, and a careful summing up of the evidence on either side. Unless there be an infallibility inherent in military inquiries which falls not to the lot of other mortals, these must form the essential element of every "inquiry" that takes place; much more when the character of an old and deserving officer is implicated. All this procedure, however indispensable for the discover of truth, was quietly ignored. We are credibly informed that the atstaments of the two accesses. latter it appears was shown by the one lady to the who paid the nocturnal rigit to the brigadier, and got the lady's first friendly reply to his note out | a copy of which, as well as the substance of his of him, were read out for the brigadier's benefit, and he was then simply asked, without being showed the opportunity to cross-examine or refute, whether he would resign! He refused at first, but hearing the next day, that, unless he did resign, he would be arrested, and brought to a court-martial, and thus at the close of his service be subjected to all the harassment and indignity of a trial he tendered his resignation, still, however, solemnly denying the truth of Mr. Eyre's statement.

These are the salient facts of the case; but there are other details which would place in still stronger light the intolerable injustice of the whole procedure. At present we simply point the attention of our readers to the following fact :-Here is an old officer of reputation, holding a high military command, compelled to resign his post, and thus bring a stigma upon himself-for what? First, because he wrote a gossiping pri vate letter to a lady who had admitted him to close and intimate friendship. He is not told what word, what sentence, what sentiment of this letter contains the offence charged. The lady's answer, proving that she was not offended, is taken from him: a copy of his own letter is refinaed. In the absence of all accurate information of the charge, he can make no pertinent defence, and the only evidence against him is the unsup ported statement of the two individuals who have privately prosecuted the charges against him. And, secondly, because a bumptious young gentleman, whose prominent and ostentatious championship is not exactly what a married lady would like to admit, is pleased to say that he threatened him, the statement being supported by no evidence whatever, being improbable in itself, and positively denied by the brigadier.

That a man is simply not popular is not a warranty for his excommunication from all the plainest principles of social right and common justice; and we ask in wonder why it is that military authorities, otherwise men of high and honourable principles, will persist in believing that they are. a their judicial proceedings, exempted from all those obligations which truth and justice impose upon others? There is no more honourable or atlemsaly man in existence than General Campbell, and in any other than a "military proceeding " he would have been the first to perceive that all the elements of fair dealing were absent in the so-called "inquiry." Would any men of honour or experience, without a red coat, dream of punishing a peccant pot boy so be hauled up for some unknown and undisclosed levity, a foolish word, or indiscreet exsesion in a private letter, addressed to a female friend, and brought to disgrace upon, perhaps, a forced or false interpretation of his meaning attached to it by the prurient, the silly, or the spite fal; or is he to be branded as a poltroon by the unsupported assertion of one whose statement he denies, but is not suffered to disprove?

We cannot for an instant believe that such unjust proceedings will stand. We should recommend the brigadier to lay his case at once before the Governor general in Council, for submission the Dake of Cambridge, who will, doubtless, wouchsafe to him an impartial hearing and effectual redress .- Englishman.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BEN. GAL AT SEERSAUGOR.

The Lieutenant-governor arrived at Scebsaugor an the morning of the 11th of August. Leaving the Rhotes here he steamed on in the Kolodyne to Nazara, the head quarters of the Assam Tea Company; after visiting their extensive establishment, and examining the different processes of electure, he went on as far as the commenceat of their gardens, which at this place cover me twenty square miles. He appeared to be ch pleased with all he saw. In the evening ned to Seebsaugor. On the following he received in durber a large assemblage state principal inhabitants of the district, who presented his bonour with an address in English.

On the same day he visited the Government school and the different offices, as well as the American Baptist Mission Press. It is not, perhaps, generally known that an Assamese vernaenlar newspaper, or rather illustrated magazine, is published monthly at this press. The illustra-tions, which are all executed by natives of the provinces, some copied from pictures, others from natural objects, are in general extremely creditable. The children of the Mission School were brought on board the Rhotas by the Rev. Mr. Ward and his wife. It was really wonderful to witness the aptitude with which children, some of them not more than from three to four years old, had been trained not only to sing English hymns with perfect correctness, but also to explain and spell words taken at random from any of the hymns. Seebsaugor is certainly in many respects one of the most forward and promising districts in Assam, and the Lieut.-governor seemed much gratified with all he heard and saw.

Dated Seebsaugor, August 12, 1862. To HIS HONOUR THE LIEUT. GOVERNOR OF BENGAL.

HONOURABLE SIR,-We the undersigned inhabitants of Seebsaugor most respectfully beg leave to lay before your Honour the following lines for your indulgent consideration.

Under the weak rule of our native rajahs this country was subject to the frequent inroads of the furious Muttucks, Burmese, and other mountaineers. The devastations which they committed throughout the length and breadth of the land were productive of intolerable sufferings to the people; but happily for the nation Providence not allow such a state of things to continue further. A mighty race and the most civilised in the world was sent to reign over us. The English assumed charge of the Government of this country in 1838, and with that assumption a better day dawned. Since the above date the country has been enjoying uninterrupted tranquillity, together with a larger share of internal good government than has ever fallen to its destiny. The local officers of Government that have from time to time been appointed here, Colonel T. Brodie, Major C. Holroyd, and Mr. W. O. A. Beckett, the present officiating incumbent, have all of them been very impartial in the administration of justice. To Major Holroyd we are espe cially indebted for his exertions in suppressing the outbreak of 1857-1858. We beg permission on this occasion to communicate to your honour the grateful feelings that we entertain towards these respectable gentlemen.

- 2. Our joy at your Honour's arrival here is beyond description, and we look upon it as an indication that the benighted people of this region will no longer be suffered to continue in that sad state in which, notwithstanding peace and good government, they still exist; and we may venture to express a hope that our request for the adoption of measures calculated to contribute to the amelioration of the country will meet with your Honour's approval and sanction.
- 3. The abolition of the Licence-tax and a portion of the Income tax has offered great relief and pleasure to your poor and humble subjects: and they hope the remaining tax may be soon discontinued.
- 4. Almost the whole surface of this country is covered with jungles, and the want of high roads necessitates the conveyance of letters, sent through the post, by water. This frequently causes much delay in their receipt; your petitioners, therefore, humbly beg that your honour will be pleased to sauction additional expenditure and to take means for facilitating internal communication by land.
- 5. For want of European medicines, fever, cholers, and various other diseases commit here at times dreadful ravages among the people, whose poverty precludes them from procuring medicines from any other quarter; it is therefore humbly solicited by your petitioners that the establishment of a charitable dispensary be sanctioned by your Honour.
  - 6. There are two Government English schools in Assam which are capable of imparting only mentary education to our children; in o quence, at the conclusion of their school can our boys are obliged either to put a stop to the studies, or to take the alternative of prosecution them in a college in Bengal under considerable disadvantages, of loss of money, &c., and other inconveniences; we therefore beg that your Honour will be pleased to order the foundation of a college or high school in this country. Year petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray,

REPLY OF THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

I am glad to meet in this public manuer large an assembly of the native gentlemen of Seebsaugor, including some who have done good service to the State, and to assure them of the interest felt by the Government in their welfere and prosperity. I have also to thank you for the address which has just been read by the gentleman who presides over the Government school at this station, and is a graduate of the Calcutta University.

Since I came to Assam it has been my weet gratification to observe among the people of the province no signs of any feeling but these of loyalty and goodwill; and this district is no exception to the rule.

You have alluded to the events of 1877 and 1858 when the mutiny of the sepoys led same misguided men to doubt the power of the British Government and to imagine the possibility of its overthrow. They have long ago been convinced of their mistake; and I only mention the subject now in order to repeat emphatically in person ties approbation with which the conduct of Rae Rehadur Hurnauth Burroa has already been noticed by the Government; and to add that the remainder of the sentence of imprisonment passed on the conspirator Dootee Ram Barrock will now be remitted. The Government of her Majesty the Queen, acting in accordance with her gracious commands, is as ready to partica her enemies, when this can be done with safety to the State, as it is to reward those who render true and faithful service.

I exhort you to look up with respect and comfidence to the officers who are appointed to creecise authority over you, to the Deputy Commissioner of the district, and to the Commissioner the division. They will always be ready to de every man justice, and to make known to the time vernment your reasonable representations.

There are a few points in your address which I will specially notice.

First, as to the repeal of the Income tax. Yes all know that it is the duty of every man to contribute according to his means towards the seaport of the Government to which he looks for protection and defence. You know also that the British Government demands no more from the people of India than it requires for the purposes of administration, and that recently, when it was found that the revenue to be derived from the Licence-tax, and from small incomes under the Iucome tax Act, was not required, the one was repealed, and the other partially remitted. When the remainder of the Income-tax will be remitted, or whether it will be remitted at all until the expiry of the five years for which & was imposed, is more than I can undertake to say; but of this you may be certain that, as seen as the income of the Government is found to exceed its expenditure, taxes will again be reduced. Meanwhile all must continue to bear cheerfally their share of a burden imposed alike on us all from the Governor general himself down to the lowest who enjoys an income of Rs. 500. I agree with you in attaching the greatest importance the construction of roads in Assam, and am giad to inform you that the subject is one which cogages the attention of the Government. It is admitted that a great continuous Trunk Read connecting Kurribaree in Gowalpara at one cad of the valley, with Dibrogurh at the other, and leading by branches to all the principal scation and marts of the province is a work which wast be undertaken. Portions of it, indeed, has already been sanctioned, and I am in kepes that it may shortly be taken up in earnest, and he emleted in the course of four or five years.

In regard to the establishment of a college or high school in Assam, I must say that none had so good a right to speak on the subject as the people of Seebsaugor, where an English school has been established, and has flourished for many years, and where there are a greater number of vernacular schools, both for boys and girls, and those better attended than in any other district. I think the time has come when a school of a higher order ought to be established in the province, either here or at Gowhatty, and as soon as money is available for the further extension of education, I will not fail to give due consideration to your claims, so that the youth of Assam may have the means of obtaining at least a partial collegiate education, without having to seek it at a great distance from their homes.—Englishman.

KING STORK.

When Captain, afterwards Sir John, Malcolm, in the year 1800, conducted to Persia the first political mission from a European nation which the Shahs had received for a century, the most difficult thing he found in his conversation with the king was to explain to him the meaning attached to "the liberty of the subject" in England. After a long explanation, his Majesty observed, "your king is, I see, only the first magistrate of the country. Such a condition of power," said he, smiling, "has permanence, but it has no enjoy-ment; mine is enjoyment. There you see Sûliman Khan Kajir, and several others of the first chiefs of the kingdom-I can cut all their heads off; can I not?" said he, addressing them. "Assuredly, 'Point of adoration of the world,' if it is your pleasure." "That is real power," said the king; "but then it has no permanence. When I am gone, my sons will fight for the crown, and all will be confusion: there is, however, one consolation. Persia will be governed by a soldier. Nothing could more accurately illustrate the difference between an Asiatic despotism and a European constitutional monarchy, or better convince us as rulers of India of the gulf we have yet to bridge between our native feudatories and ourselves. We, by our example, our legislation and our administration, would teach such great Hindoo and Mussulman nobles as Holkar, Scindia and the Nizam that their so-called subjects have rights as well as they, and that in recognising these rights, which we are prepared to enforce according to treaty, they will not only secure our favour, but their own happiness and the prosperity of their estates. The same Shah of Persia told Malcolm that he would like to enjoy the wealth and power of George III. of England but for one circumstance-his Majesty kept only one wife; on such terms the supremacy of half the world would not be endurable. At once trusting to the influence of education and the spread of the true faith we do not attempt to interfere with the personal pleasures of our feudatories, and remember that few of them were so bad as George IV. But since peace is now the necessity of our progress in the East, since it is our object to create a contented middle class and a loval aristocracy, we warn every great noble like Holkar that we are prepared to interfere between him and his tenants, to protect them, and restrain him as far as treaties will allow

The very essence of what is called Lord Canning's native policy is this, that no chief, however noble, no potentate, however exalted, shall be above the law. There are weaklings in India who deprecate our recent remarks on the Nizam, as indicating hostility to the natives. Every line that we wrote was penned in the interest of the Nizam's "subjects," who are indirectly ours so far as treaties allow. Is it for the benefit of the natives that there should still exist in India three or four King Storks who will swallow them up? When we are sacrificing revenue and irritating statesmen in England by freeing our own subjects from the burden of a licence and an Incometax, are we to see the inhabitants of the native states ground down to the dust by new taxes imposed in the name of Lord Cauning, and avowedly beginning of the eighteenth century, but which able, still we have not the pestilence, and we are in imitation of the English? Are we to see millions again and again became extinct, we raised him as thankful. In the city the cholera has declined.

mercies of despots, under treaties which guarantee their personal liberty, fleeced and harassed, and not enforce the treaties we have signed? We do not so act in Europe, as the Peninsular war, our Portuguese alliance, and our moral support of Italy testify. The time is not long past since grievances and reiterated oppression led us to extinguish a monarchy in Oude which we had created. It is a mistaken reading of Lord Canning's native policy to suppose that he gave the colour of English protection to tyranny and misrule. They have read his addresses at durbars. his sunnuds, his speeches in Council wrong, who suppose that it was his object to keep feudatories like the Nizam, Holkar, and Scindia in power at all hazards. His policy was so to restrain and at the same time reform these dignitaries that their "subjects" should live in peace, their peersnobles like themselves, only lesser in degreeshould enjoy all their rights, and while they checked their chief and he checked them, the people as in feudal Scotland might have their own. The policy which erected the talookdars of Oude and sirdars of the Punjab into a great aristocracy sought likewise to strengthen in their privileges the Rajpoot chiefs of Central India against Holkar and Scindia. Else would have consistency demanded the restoration of Wajid Ali and Dhuleep Singh to the tributary thrones of Lucknow and Lahore.

Yet Holkar cites the policy of the late Governor-general as his authority for rescuscitating such of the exploded Mahratta cesses as "Duhmookhi," and for oppressing both his Rajpoot peers and his poor subjects. With both he has long been very unpopular. They detest him for his avarice, and above all for seeking to gratify it by means so harassing. What these cesses are —on bullocks, ploughs, ornaments, children, huts, mill stones, and almost every possession of the peasant and shopkeeper, every history of India describes. During Colonel Monson's disaster, when Jeswunt Rao Holkar in hard pursuit lost many of his gun-bullocks, he levied a tax of a bullock each on several villages, and they still pay at the rate of ten rupees a year under the head of "topkana kurch" or train-charge. So when the favourite horse of Madhajee Scindia died in Mewar, he levied a tax, which long continued, to remunerate him for the loss. So oppressive is the conduct of the present chief of Indore that the Rampoora Thakoors, influential and dengerous men to oppress, lately took refuge from his proceedings in our Residency. Had Major Meade not managed to avert the catastrophe, the Rampoora country would have been in a blaze, and all Holkar's territory would have been "up." All the chiefs, thakoors, and grassias of Holka and Scindia have mediatized agreements made by us in 1818 with the concurrence of both parties, the feudatory and the feudal inferior, which they have ever since jealously regarded as the charters of their freedom. These are the men who formed the old Rajpoot and Moslem aristocracy, over whom the waves of Mahratta and Pindaree anarchy broke without sweeping them away. To us their loyalty is far more important than that of their feudal superiors. They are to Central India what the talookdars are to Oude and the sirdars to the Pucjab. Lord Canning's policy in the case of the latter is based on exactly the same principle which led Malcolm in 1818 to protect the rights and position of the old Malwa aristocracy, and enabled him to draw a line along the plateau of East and West Malwa, which divided the long lair of Mahratta territory then extending from the Jumna to the Southern Mahratta Country. To supplement this policy Lord Canning gave Scindia Neemuch where none of the old Malwa aristocracy survived, and in exchange for his Deccan possessions brought him up upon the Pahooj.

His highness Maharajah Tukujee Holkar Rao Bahadoor owes all he is and has to the British Government. To represent the baronial family which Mulhar Rao, a shepherd, founded at the

of people whom we have handed over to the tender | a child to power in 1845. He had no claim either adoptive or hereditary. Till 1852 we administered the country for him, as we do in Mysore, and raised it to a great pitch of prosperity. His youth gave promise of a successful administra-tion. We trust he will take our advice and gratify his avarice not in the oppression of his chiefs, which can only lead to his own extinction, but in the improvement of his estates and the happiness of his tenantry .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GOVERNMENT INTERFERENCE IN GWALLOR-We (Englishman) are informed that orders have been issued by the Government for the entertainment of a better class of men than those bitherto employed in the police of Gwalior, and that a military guard has been provided for the treasury at Morar. It is very easy to issue orders to the above effect; and if we thought that such orders were worth anything more than the paper upon which they are written, we should be very glad to see the above order extended to all India; but, unfortunately, we know too well that, as it would be impossible to employ worse men than those who constitute the police generally in this country, so would it be impossible to induce a better class of men to enter the force, which, for aught that we can perceive to the contrary, is likely to remain at its past and present dead level of rascality and inefficiency till doomsday. We were not till now aware that our Government was exercising police power and jurisdiction in the territories—nay, in the very capital, of the Maharajah Scindiah, and as his highness is quasi independent, it would be as well to come to some definite understanding as to how far we, or he, must look after the internal condition of his dominions. If our Government would pass an order regulating, at something like moderate rates, the wages which British officers are obliged to pay to natives of his highness's territories whom they engage as servants, it would, in our opinion, be conferring a greater benefit than by issuing the above useless

THE NEW LINE REGIMENTS .- His Excellency the Commander in Chief has applied to the supreme Government requesting that an order may be immediately issued, releasing all officers appointed to the new line regiments who may be employed in the civil or public works departments, from their connection with those branches of the public service with a view to their immediately joining their respective corps. This order will appear immediately, as the Governor-general has applied to Sir Hugh Rose, to the effect that his views, not only as regards these officers, but in respect to the employment generally of officers of British regiments on the staff, are entirely concurrent with those of the home Government, as already communicated to his Excellency. The departments in which the officers above referred to are employed have been ordered to make arrangements for filling up their appointments as soon as possible; so as to enable them to join their new regiments, which they will do at the public expense. These arrangements will vacate several very desirable appointments, which we hope to see filled by the nomination of deserving and competent officers, of whom scores are to be found living all over the country in the farcical performance of "general duty;" and who would gladly accept any employment that would utilise their time.

JHANSIE, August 22.-Nothing could be better than the state of the camps at Kyler Babenna and Buxar. The last is the spot where the Royal Artillery are at present located. Few people can have an idea of the work of the medical officers. Providence seems to have aided all their efforts. The results of a change into camp are almost miraculous; men died off, and there seemed to be no stopping the progress of the malady. I can assure you that everything has changed. The men are comfortable; they have their cots, and although a "tent" life just now, amidst the rains and the thunder storms, is far from agree.

THE GANGES CANAL NAVIGATION COMPANY.—It is said that the affairs of the Ganges Canal Navigation Company are not in a very flourishing condition; the blame of their non-success being attributed by the shareholders to the late manager. A loan of Rs. 10,000 is required; and the removal of the head office of the company from Meerut to Cawnpore is spoken of, and ought to be immediately effected.

THE INDIGO CROP .- All over Northern India the progress of India promises to be unusually Tirhoot deserves its prosperity. Its planters were warned in time, and they increased the price paid to the cultivator proportionally with that given to the opium ryot by Government. The Tirhoot system is in all respects better than that on which opium is grown, in spite of the denial to the planters of the contract law which Government itself enjoys to protect its advances. The fall of rain in Benares and the neighbouring districts has been so heavy as to reduce a large to an average crop, while all the more northerly districts will make full seasons. At present the total result is likely to be a crop of 110,000 maunds of 82 lbs. each, which ought to sell for £2,500,000. This result depends, however, on a continuance of good weather. The crop of all Northern India last year was only 68.196 maunds. The source of the crops in the two years will be seen from the following :-

			Maunds.		Maunds.

Bengal	•••	•••	17,465	•••	37,840
			68.196		109 840

In Bengal Kishnaghur which yielded 1,120 last year is estimated at 3,700 maunds this, and Jessore which gave 548 is estimated at 4,200. Where natives in Bengal last year raised 3,500 they are expected to manufacture this season 5,500 maunds. We are indebted for these figures to Messr. Thomas and Co.'s last report. If, as we have said, none of the increase in Lower Bengal is due to a return to the old and condemned ryottee system, then all-philanthropist, trader. and official alike-may rejoice at the revival of so important a trade. Coal-tar and chemistry have as yet failed to supply a substitute for our Indian blue. Yet the stagnation or positive retrogression of the Indigo trade in Northern India is remarkable, and the fact is to be explained by the dearness of the dye, and the limited demand for it, for England imports less than she did ten years ago from all countries. The following shows the export from Calcutta for the last ten years :-

Year.		Maunds.		Value.
1852-53	•••	86,697	•••	1,429,279

Of the ten years the highest was thus 1855-56, when the indigo sold in Calcutta for nearly two millions sterling. The lowest is last year when little more than a million was secured. But now, if the weather permit, the yield, all produced on a healthy commercial system, promises to be 110,000 maunds, or the highest since 1855-56. And for the first time Tirhoot distances Lower Bengal, as it deserves to do, and stands at the head of all the indigo-producing districts of India and the world. It alone produces three times the quantity exported from Java. Its success is only another illustration of what may be called the ethics of Political Economy—that "the liberal soul shall be made fat."—Friend of India.

MUSEUM OF ECONOMIC BOTANY.—The Agricul tural Society of India have addressed the supreme Government recommending the establishment of a museum of Economic Botany in Calcutta. Such a Museum is much wanted. Mr. Edmonstone lately promised to do his utmost to establish one for the Nort West Provinces.

CUTTACK, August 19 .- Mr. R. N. Shore has incurred the censure of Government for offering pardon to Sumbulpore rebels beyond his jurisdiction. Mr. Shore urges in his defence that at that critical period he held it unadvisable even to raise a question as to the terms of the amnesty, more especially in regard to men who were then coming in on our direct invitation; and under this impression he overlooked the fact that the matter was one beyond his jurisdiction. If when the proclamation was first issued, all persons guilty of murder, whether within or beyond the jurisdiction of the Bengal Government, had been exempted from the amnesty, not a single rebel would have surrendered; even those who had not been thus guilty could not have felt sure that they might not be falsely accused and wrongfully convicted. This, however, was not Mr. Shore's reason for not raising the question when the expediency of issuing the proclamation was first mooted. He was not aware at the time, any outrages had been committed outside the Bengal jurisdiction, nor is this a matter of surprise—he himself had recently taken charge of his office, and Sumbulpore had been transferred to this commissionership only a few months previously. Whatever may be said on these points, however, Mr. Shore has solicited instructions of the Bengal Government as to whether he was to take action in the matter. The Government of India in the first place directed that Mr. Shore should offer certain terms to these men. The Bengal Government in reply pointed out that these further proceedings should issue from the Nagpore authorities, and at the same time remarked on the injurious effects which would probably follow a revocation of the pardon. The supreme Government in reply stated that the terms of the proclamation must be scrupulously observed, and that the maintenance of the character of the British Government for good faith is of more importance than the punishment of the culprits. The recent overflowing of the Mahannuddy has caused great damage to the paddy crops on both sides of the river. The weather continues to be delightfully cool.—Englishman.

CAPTAIN H. A. COCKBURN, of the late 53rd N.I., and at present an assistant in the office of Major Hill, Military Accountant to Government, is appointed to officiate as Paymaster of Pensioners in the Meerut division, during the absence of Captain Hamilton, who has obtained leave to England on medical certificate.

England on medical certificate.

Dr. F. Mouatt, Inspector of Gaols, lower provinces, has been compelled by severe and continued illness to avail himself of leave of absence on medical certificate, and proceeds by next steamer to Madras and the Neilgherries, where he will remain till the commencement of the cold weather. Dr. N. Chevers officiates for Dr. Mouatt during his absence.

DACCA, August 23.—The Lieutenant-governor arrived here last night quite unexpectedly, for it was not till the booming of guns was heard that our townsmen were informed of his sudden arrival. I, however, was fortunate enough to hear of it last night, and resolved to go and see him landing. Therefore, early this morning I hurried to the coal depot, where his yacht was anchored. my arrival I saw a guard of honour from the East India Regiment drawn up before the ghat to receive his honour, and Khajeah Abdool Gunny's four-in-hand was also waiting there. About half-past six A.M., his honour's gig commenced to pull for the shore. When the gig reached the landing-place, the Lieutenant governor, accompanied by Mr. Buckland, our commissioner, Major James, his private secretary, and Captain Beadon, his aide de-camp, got on shore, and as they were passing between the guard of honour, the soldiers presented arms, the band struck up, and the guns boomed forth their welcome from Suddee Ghat. Here the party getting into the carriage drove straight for Lalbag; from there he went round the racecourse, and from that place to the E. I. regiment barracks, and so after inspecting the barracks and the hospital, his honour returned to his vacht. He left this at 111 A.M. for Sylhet and Cachar.

DIBROOGURH, August 9 .- At a durbar held at Dibrooghur this day, the principal native gentry and officials were presented to his honour the Lieutenant-governor, who afterwards addressed them to the following effect:—" My native friends,—I am glad to have had the opportunity of visiting Upper Assam, of seeing with my own eyes the vast improvement that has taken place in the condition of the country and of the people during twenty years of direct British rule, and of welcoming in this public manner the principal native gentry of the place. I regret that the season of the year prevents me from receiving at the same time the chiefs of the less civilized tribes by whom we are surrounded. It has always been the first aim of the British Government on the occupation of a province to give security of life and property to all, and to ensure to every man his just rights. These are the very elements of civilisation and prosperity. That in this district the Government has been successful in accomplishing this end, chiefly, I may say through the able and distinguished officers who have been charged with the local administration, is evident from the increase of wealth, revenue, and population; from the clearance of many thousands of acres of forest; from the contented appearance of the people; and from the existence of this thriving town and station in a spot, where, a few years ago, the voice of man was not heard. But something more is required. It is the desire of the Government that every encourage ment should be given to further development by the grant of waste lands on favourable terms; by opening out roads throughout the province, by establishing at every station schools in which sound knowledge may be imparted to all, both in English and in your own language, and by every other useful and practicable measure. It is for you to show your appreciation of these measures by taking advantage of them, and thereby to co-operate with the Government in the advancement of your country. I exhort you especially to have your children taught English as soon as the means of such instruction are provided, from funds with which the Government is prepared to supplement the efforts of private liberality. A large English community is springing up amongst you, from the example of whose enterprise, industry, and integrity, you cannot fail to profit. English is the language of your rulers, and is fast becoming the language in which all public business must be conducted. You may be assured that every Assamese child of respectable family now living, who is not instructed in English in his youth, will have cause to lament it in mature age. Major Bivar has mentioned to me that a general desire is felt by the community for the extension of the electric telegraph to Dibroogurh. This is a measure which I have long advocated, and I am happy to say that sanction has already been given to the construction, next session, of a line to connect Gowhattee with Calcutta, and that the extension of this line to Dibroogurh is promised in the following year. I am obliged to speak to you in English because I cannot speak the language of Assam, but Major Bivar will explain to you the substance of what I have now spoken .- Eng-

EXECUTION OF RAO SAHIB.—We learn from the up-country papers that Rao Sahib was hanged at Cawnpore on the 21st Aug. a little before sunrise, behind the magistrate's cutcherry. A large crowd was present, among whom some of the fair sex were visible. Several had gone to Cawnpore by railway to be present. One chronicler says:—"The murderer walked up to the gallows with a firm step, and throughout seems to have shown the usual indifference which the Asiatic considers resignation to fate. He of course died protesting his innocence."

THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY will be opened as far as Ranaghat, a native town on the Matabanga fifty miles from Calcutta, before the holidays, which begin on Tuesday, 20th September. In October the line will be opened throughout to Kooshtea on the Ganges.

Englishman recommends the cultivation of the totacco plant on the Hills. "I have heard," he says, "an experienced dealer in cigars declare, that with properly-cured tobacco from Sandoway and Bhilsa, in Bundelkund, he could cut cigars equal to the best Manilas. It be interesting just now to some of your readers to learn that tobacco grown in certain districts near Simla has been pronounced, by a eritical smoker, to be quite as fine as Latakia, and I have had several opinions given as to its d flavour. The plant differs materially from the tobacco of the plains, growing to a height of four feet, and more, with a smooth fine leaf, smaller than a low-country tobacco, and bearing s pretty pale pink flower. It thrives anywhere, but is seldom well cured. And this is the fault of the tobacco grown on the plains, which would require the Virginian process of airing and putting mp, to suit the market at home."

THE RANGE OF BHOPAL .- This very respectable and exceedingly well-disposed female potentate has expressed her intention of celebrating in her metropolis, on the 1st of November, the anniversary of her Highness's inauguration as a member of the Order of the Exalted Star of India. Her Highness is said to have invited the Govermers of the North-West Provinces and of Bombay to be present on the occasion, when there is to be a display of fireworks, which is to eclipse anything of the kind ever before seen in India. The above may be depended on; not so another story, which has obtained circulation and some credence, to the effect that the Rance is not indisposed to become a Freemason, providing a certain inaugural eremonial which has been described to her Highness as not only incompatible with her dignity. but of a very trying character, be dispensed with in her case, and she be immediately elevated to the post of Provincial Grand Master, or rather Provincial Grand Mistress .- Phanix.

MONEY ORDER REGULATIONS .- Mr. Sandeman, the Civil Paymaster of Bengal, has issued a peraphlet, by authority, with the rules of the money-order system, of which we wrote some time ago. For the present the system will be confined to Lower Bengal, in which fifty-five offices will be opened. The fee paid is 2 annas for remitting not more than Rs. 10, 4 annas for not more than Rs. 25, 8 annas for not more than Rs. 50, 12 annas for not more than Rs. 75, and one rupee for not more than Rs. 100, beyond which no sum will be remitted. No order is to contain a fractional part of an anna. Forms will be supplied at the offices to applicants who will fill in the surname and one Christian name, or in the case of a Hindoo or Mahomedan, the caste or tribe, and parentage both of the remitter and of the payee, together with the remitter's address.

RASLWAY EXTENSION.—As the Calcutta and Delhi railway will be open next February to Ghazee-ood-deen nuggur, twelve miles from Della and twenty four from Meerut, the Hills advecates a single line from that point to Meerut, and one hundred miles to Hurdwar and Roorkee. It is certainly true that the pilgrim traffic alone would make the line pay. When we saw Hurdwar s season of the year when there is no mela, the quaint old town was thronged with deluded bethers, who shivered in the cold waters of the infant Ganges. Meerut must and Roorkee ought to be connected with the railway, and the Branch Railway Company could do the work, if the road be leased to them, at £2,500 a mile. Then it will be possible to go from Calcutta to the top of Landour in a few hours. All this will come in time, and local capital should be applied.

ARMSTRONG BATTERIES .- There are to be two batteries of Armstrong guns to be completed at once. One will be given, or rather has been given, to B Battery 5th R.H. A CHRISTIAN LITERARY INSTITUTE has been established at Simla: and we wish it all success. Soldiers' institutes need all the books, pamphlets, and money the public can give.

WARREN HASTINGS' ELEPHANT .- During the Benares insurrection some eighty odd years ago the native rabble composed a doggrel rhyme, the burden of which was Hatee pur houda, ghora pur zeen, Juldee jao, juldee jao, Warren Hasteen. Horse, elephant, hoisda, set off at full swing, Run away, ride away, Warren Hasting.

Whether any particular elephant was alluded to in these lines cannot at this remote period be confidently asserted, but it so happens that a member of the pachydermata which Warren Hastings owned, and which he continually rode. died within the last three weeks at Benares. are told that this was the elephant which bore the once dreaming Daylesford boy, then Governorgeneral of Bengal, to Buxar, and afterwards to Benares, on the 14th of August, 1781, when he performed his journey to Cheyt Singh. In all probability it crossed the river which we read was studded with a large fleet of boats; that it witnessed its rider's famous interviews with the contumacious and disaffected rajah; and saw the son of Bulwunt Singh place his turban on Hastings' lap; that it was present at the disturbance at Ramnaghur when native craft outdid Warren's expectations; that it saw two companies of Grenadier sepoys sent into action without ammunition. and eventually described the discomfitted rajah escaping down the cliff at the water's side by means of his retainers' turbans tied together. Then came the other side of the picture, which it might also have seen, Hastings' " annihilation, rather than defeat," the subsequent famine, the storming of Pateeta, and then, with a fluctuation resembling that of the present fratricidal one, the retreat of Cheyt Singh, and the bold defence the rajah's wife and mother made, which reminds us in this later day of the of Warren Hastings' accusers; how that bitte spirit which the Governor-general manifested towards the defeated raish could never be accounted for, except by the strength of the pass which had waited years for gratification, and by the overwhelming sensation of triumph consequent on gratification when attained. Be this. as it may, the elephant which lived and moved and had its being years before the events at. which we have glanced, but which played its part throughout, passed away a few days ago .- Delhi Gazette.

Sylher.—Our frontier has again been enlivened with another fight in that most benighted of all. uncivilised regions, the beautiful valley of Munnipore. It appears its rajah, like other savage rajahs, is a tyrant and oppressor, and does all the injury he can to his subjects in doing which we give him protection, lest the excellent man's throat should be cut by his own subjects. But even our protection does not prevent yearly attempts being made to dethrone him. This place and Cachar is filled with Rajpootras from Munnipoor. Hungry, idle, lean, starving, Rejpootras, and hundreds of their followers. A large body of these people armed with guns, and a couple of field pieces, started from Cachar, and descended upon the valley of Munnipoor. They were overtaken by some of the 44th N. I. and some of them. killed, but they reached the capital, and got into the rajah's residence, killing and wounding lots of fat Munnipoories, and some six or seven of our sepoys, they were however, beaten out, and the leader, a notorious rebel and thief (who it is to be hoped is hung ere this), was captured, wounded in about twenty places. This attack was planned months ago, when it was supposed the Political Agent was withdrawn from Munnipoor. For the sake of preserving trade with Burmah, and protecting British subjects living in Munnipoor, by all means give the rajah protection; but at the same time force him to treat his subjects well. Let the whole country be thrown open-make a good road right into Ava :- and then this savaga country will be civilised; but not till then .- Hurkaru.

LAHORE, August 30 .- During the past week the number of deaths among the military at Meean Meer and in camp has been considerable, while a proportionate decrease has occurred in the city and suburbs of Lahore. Still, however, sickness is much above the usual average, and fevers, dysenters, and diarrhosa exist to a great. extent. Our medical staff are actually worked off their legs; one of them, the civil surgeon, is completely knocked up, and it is as much a matter of surprise, as it should be of gratitude, that the whole are not laid up. If such were the case I know not what would become of us all, for at such a juncture it would be impossible they could be replaced. At Sealkote the disease is described as being very severe, many have fallen victims, both among the troops and the population, the former of whom have been removed into camp. Our commissioner, Mr. Forsyth, has come down from Dalhousie in the event of his presence being needed in this emergency, either as regards the removal of troops or other matters.

MISCELLANEOUS. Rangoon, August 16 .- The Chief Commissioner has changed his mind regarding his method of progression to the Burmese capital. He now very, sensibly proposes to take one of our own river steemers and flats all the way to Ava, instead of coawling up there in country boats provided by the king,—a change which will add very considerably to his dignity and comforts. It is still somewhat unwise in him to go without an escert. There is a very uneasy feeling about the future among all classes in Burmah Proper, and if, by any unlucky, mischance, a resolution which places heir-apperent on the throne should be contemporaneous with Colonel Phayre's visit, a giver steamer manned only by Chitta gong lascars would have a vary poor chance of asceping down the river unraclested. A very considerable change is said to have lately come over his Burman Majesty's ideas with pard to his relations with other States. He is now not altogether averse to entering into a commercial treaty with the Indian Government, and it is centain that such a treaty is looked upon as a not very remote possibility by a large party at the Burmese Court. This wonderful concession is attributable parily to the accounts of the Armstrong guns which has reached the king's ear, artly to the bellicose style of writing which has lately been adopted by the Indian press with regard to Burmah. It is by no means improbable that the result of Colonel Phayre's visit may be a treats. There is a large conservative party. headed by the heir apparent at the capital, to whom this projected change in the traditionary principles of the kingdom is by no means tasteful. It remains to be seen what action, they will take if negotiations are entered into. Our Recorder's Court is still in nubibus, at least as far as regards the public, who are not admitted behind the scenss, are concerned. It is believed to be undergoing the process of incubation somewhere or other, and rumour has it that it may be expected to be hatched about the beginning of next year. It is believed that there will be one Re conder for the whole of British Burmah, who will hold his Court at the three seaports of Rangoon, Maulmain, and Akyab, and perhaps Bassein, and an Assistant-recorder at each of those towns. The measure is one which is considerably in advance of the requirements of the Province, and it is much to be desired that Government would be as liberally inclined towards other schemes which are much more calculated to confer material benefits upon the country-the encouragement of immigration for instance. The first sten taken by the Chief Commissioner in this direction, i.e. his proposition to import a thousand Chinese agriculturists, the supreme Government are said to have negatived. The present judicial deputycommissioner, Dr. Clarke, will, of course, be the first mecorder, but the rule requiring a recorder to have been five years a practising barrister will have to be relaxed in his case, as he was called to the bar only in 1861. He appears to be generally popular here, and will no doubt do very well for the place. A party of the Rangoon town police have recently been giving evidence of their activity by chasing some Chinese burglars-with a very briunate result, as one of the peons was stabled to the heart, and all the burglars escaped. The peen, of course, died on the spot-an unfortunate commence, which will not encourage his comrades in haickerbockers to be very zealous in capturing Chinese criminals in future. An officer of the new police force at Thayetmyo has embezzled a considerable sum-several thousand rupees-out of the pay of his men. He has been made over to the military authorities for trial by courtmarial.—Englishman.

jowaree cakes have been passing from village to production of some very black sheep in the corps; laity, among whom it is meritorious to build village, of which information has been received by Major Thornhill. What precludes the Govern. ment from punishing the officials of the village by whose mandate the jowares cake is passed on? I begin to believe that the fellows do this to annov us, for, whilst there is nothing moving, and no rumour of a general spread of disaffaction from any known grievance, the circulation of the cakes must be unintelligible as to its purpose, and consequently useless. One interpretation, has just been given me. It is to cause a drought, that good prices may be obtained on grain. This never could have been avowed, and no one, if it had been, would have given any aid to the circulation, but the reverse may be gathered from hence, and the circulation of the cakes may be a supplication for rain, the want of which-we have not had more than six or seven inches-threatens a famine. I observe in a Poona paper a complaint against the Nizam's Government for not permitting the exportation of grain out of the country. The party complaining does not recollect that self-preservation is the first object of a government and the first law of nature; and if we feed others from our scanty granaries we must starve. Prices of most articles of food have risen one hundred per cent. It is much to be lamented that jowaree, the common food of the poor, should have risen to that price. The people clamour to have prices for grain fixed by the Government, and the Nizam, knowing no better, issues his mandate to his minister to that effect. The minister is obliged in appearance to lend himself to a purpose, the impolicy of which is not, and would not, be understood by the people here; political economy is not an Indian science, and I fear the minister will have a difficulty in steering his course between the Nizam and the people acting conjointly, and the dictates of a sound policy. A letter from Lahore, addressed to a Mahomedan, who was not to be found, came by post to Bolarum, the cantonment of the Nizam's Contingent in the vicinity of Hyderabad. It was opened, and its contents were to the effect that during the last rebellion the Mahomedans had given no assistance to their brethren in the North. would be a rising in October next which they were expected to join. The letter has been sent to Sir Robert Montgomery, and it is clear that it and the journee cakes have no connection with each other. - Englishman.

FOOLISH INNOVATIONS .- We (Madras Times) regret much to hear that a feeling of dissatisfaction has been engendered in a Madras Native Regiment, now serving in British Burmah, through the inconsiderate and somewhat precipitate introduction into the corps of a new style of topee. There appears to have been, as there usually is in all such matters, some mismanagement at the outset, as the regiment has long enjoyed an excellent character for loyalty and subordination. The direction, or misdirection as it turned out, of this affair was entrusted to a young Quarter-Master, an officer from another corps, who had but recently joined, and it is thought that his imprudent manners, coupled with his inexperience, was the prime cause of the failure which ensued. unknown to the men, and possessing little weight in the regiment, ordered up a company to receive the new caps-the sepoys never having been told that such caps would be worn; and the G.O.C.C. distinctly lays it down as a rule that their introduction shall not be compulsory. The men in a body refused to take the topees and therefore some of the men were singled out and ordered into confinement, and this was the signal for the whole of them to step forward and demand that all or none might be made prisoners. The difficulty was not, as we have said, wisely handled in the earlier stage, and at last the illfeeling and discontent which had for some time been smouldering kindled, and took the shape of a manifesto, which was found posted on the general's gate. This placard proclaimed the grievance we have alluded to, and the readiness of the regiment to break out, if the caps were forced upon the sepoys. We must regard this HYDERABAD, August 8.—I have just heard that declaration as merely a brutum fulmen, and as the

and we are induced to do so from the circumstance that when our latest advices left there were indications of the return of wonted good feeling and contentment amongst the sepoys generally. This temporary display of discontent is suggestive, and we are thereby led to inquire when will the Commander-in-Chief, a soldier of no carpet experience, interdict authoritatively this interference with the dress of the sepoy on the part of regimental. commanding officers? Such practices are certain to occasion resentful feelings on account of extra cost, for, strange to say, we never yet knew an instance where a cheaper was substituted for a more expensive item of dress. some good exceptions there is a meddlesome propensity inherent in commanding officers to decorate their men, regardless, to some extent, of the cost to the sepoy; -and against this unjustifiable tendency the sepoys should be protected. All patterns of dress should emanate originally from the commander-in-chief, and not in the first instance, as now, from commanding officers, and submitted by them for his approval and sanction. It is as rational to permit a commanding officer to introduce a new style of detonating cap for his men's muskets as one for their heads; yet who would counsel the granting the first named licence to a commanding officer? The number of commandants a regiment has had within a given time may be calculated pretty exactly by the number of novelties, in the way of caps, shoes, or frippery, introduced within the same period.

NEILGHERRIES, August 31 .- You will be sorry to hear that the past week has been a week of inaction on our estate; and not only this, but on Wednesday last my coolies were within an inch of taking away my life. It occurred in this way :-On Monday I put fifty men pitting, and told them when they commenced that I expected twenty holes per man out of them. They told me plump they would not do more than fifteen. I, however, kept all the men down till six o'clock, till each had finished his twenty pits. On Tuesday not a man, woman, or boy would come to work unless I promised to let fifteen pits be a man's day's work. I refused. On Wednesday they went to work, and before they commenced I repeated my order about the number of pits. On this one man threw down his tools, and began cursing me, and called upon the others to go to their villages, and not work out the heavy advances that were made to them. I walked up to this man and took him by the arm, and shook him, and told him to go to work. Immediately I took hold of him another man called to the coolies, "Run, Run, strike him, strike him!" More than twenty of them at once rushed upon me with their crowbars and pickaxes. I was prepared for those in front of me, but some rushed from behind, and their crowbars were raised to strike me down, when providentially a European writer, who was near me, made a blow at the foremost with a wooden mallet which he had in his hand. This checked them. I got warrants against some of the men the same day, and they were seized and brought np before the magistrate the following day The ringleader (the man who (Thursday). called out "strike him") was sentenced to one month's imprisonment, and the others to fourteen days only. This seems to me, and to every person here, a very paltry punishment for so serious an offence. The coolies left the plantation in a body on Thursday, but I had them brought back on Friday. I gave the same order about the number of pits. The men commenced work about 9 A.M., and nearly all of them were in their houses by 2 P.M., having finished their twenty pits each! I think this proves that so far from over-working them I had been too lenient. -Times of India.

BUDDHISM IN PEGU.-Even Buddhism is not free from ecclesiastical divisions and disputes. The head of its hierarchy is a sort of archbishop named "Tha-tha-na-bying," or ruler of religion, who is appointed by the king, and occupies a magnificent monastery in the capital. Under him are "Gyne-okes" and "Gyne-douks," or bishops and suffragans. Heads of monasteries, who are commonly called "Yahans," are selected by the monasteries, the nomination of the "pongyee" or resident monks resting in the hands of the lay patron as in England. The Rangoon Times tells us there is a squabble in Pegu among the priests for precedence, four young men having advanced claims to be bishops. They call on our Government to confirm them in their office, while the people are averse to so unorthodox a proceeding. The "Gyne-oke," or bishop of the district, is an old man, who was nominated by King Tharawaddy in 1814.

Kurnool, August 15.—I hear that a gang of Robillas have recently been threatening our Makorpoor frontier, and the authorities here have applied to Government to call upon the durbar at Hyderabad to see that the ghats at Vajia Kurnool, Runkputsputt, Nolgoodah, and Dowrisonah are properly guarded.

EURASIAN ARMY SURGEONS.—A meeting of East Indians has been held at Madras with the view of transmitting a memorial to Parliament praying for the removal of disabilities imposed by the decision of the Secretary for War that East Indians cannot hold commissions as medical officers in the Royal army.

THE DEWAN OF TRAVANCORE has published a proclamation increasing the duties upon all imports and exports to and from the Travancore territory. The duty on exports and imports at 5 per cent. will henceforth be 6 per cent.; ditto at 8, ditto, 10 per cent.; ditto at 10, ditto, 12 per cent. It is in contemplation to lower the tariff again so soon as the finances will permit of doing so.

CAPT. KIRKLAND AND MR. ANSTRUTHER

A general court-martial has been ordered to assemble on the 2nd September, at Belgaum for the trial of an officer attached to the 10th Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, and as the subjectmatter of the charges preferred against him by his commanding officer, Major Gell, is no longer any secret, we shall be excused from taking prominent notice of them in these columns. officer about to be brought to trial is Captain Nugent Kirkland, of the late 29th Regiment Native Infantry, attached to the 10th Native Infantry at Kolapore, and the charges laid against him have been framed on the representations of Lieutenant Robert Durham Anstruther, of the 10th Native Infantry, under the following circumstances. It appears that some time ago the officers of the regiment were invited by the native officers to an entertainment given in their lines, at which Captain Kirkland and Lieutenant Anstruther attended, and that during the evening Captain Kirkland happened accidentally to touch one of the native officers with his boot, for which he immediately apologised, as any gentleman under the same circumstances would have done. Mr. Anstruther, who was a chum of Capt. Kirkland's, and was living in the same bungalow with him at Kolapore, where the regiment is stationed, upon this took the extra ordinary and by no means friendly course of reporting the untoward occurrence and the apology, at a late hour on the same night to the adjutant of the regiment, and immediately went home and commenced a violent altercation with Capt. Kirkland, who we may state is one of the most quiet and estimable men in the service, in the course of which he assaulted that gentleman, who was in bed at the time, and shamefully ill-used him. Capt. Kirkland at once reported the circumstance to the adjutant, who we understand placed both officers under arrest. A court of inquiry was ordered, and in consequence of what then transpired, Capt. Kirkland and Mr. Anstruther were allowed the option of sending in their papers and retiring from the service, or standing a courtmartial. Mr. Anstruther has elected the second alternative, and he is no longer a member of the military service, but Capt. Kirkland has, very rightly as we think, chosen to submit himself to the ordeal of a court-martial.

The foregoing are the facts of the case as they have been communicated to us by one who is personally acquainted with all the circumstances, and we certainly must say, that if they are correctly stated, we feel extremely surprised that Captain Kirkland should be subjected to the indignity and annoyance inseparable from a trial before a court martial. His conduct does not appear to us to have been in any way improper. It cannot, surely, be considered a dishonourable act that he apologised to the native officer who was offended in the manner described. These officers all bear commissions, and wear the same uniform as their European comrades in arms, and it would certainly not be good policy to make it appear to them that they are unworthy of the consideration of gentlemen. So far from being held blameworthy for having on the instant made that amende which every man of gentlemanly feeling would voluntarily propose, we consider Captain Kirkland's conduct on the occasion was most praise-

The extraordinary and outrageous conduct of Mr. Anstruther is perfectly unaccountable, unless that he was out of his senses when he made the violent and unprovoked assault upon Capt. Kirkland. Had he elected to be tried by a courtmartial, the result must have been fatal to his commission, and there would have been little sympathy on his account: but we are quite at a loss to understand why or wherefore Capt. Kirkland should be subjected to this indignity. He is an officer of thirteen years' standing, and the loss of his commission would be fatal to his prospects in life. We have, however, every confidence in the honourable tribunal on whose verdict his fate depends, that it will afford to him every opportunity for setting his conduct right in the view of his brother officers of this army; and, if the occasion should call for it, which as we are at present informed seems scarcely probable, that it will temper justice with mercy .- Deccan Herald.

MISCLLLANEOUS

FAMINE IN THE DECCAN. -About a week ago [September 6th] there lived at a village near Jeejorie (so the story runs) two brothers. One was a poor man, but the other had some little property. The poor one obtained from his brother a gift of a "pahli" of corn, a quantity equal, we are told, to four seers. But the wife of the donor not approving of this liberality, which appeared to her extravagant, followed him and took it away. The starving wretch went away into the jungle and obtained some roots of the "caner" tree (a shrub which either is or resembles the rhododendron) and made a poisonous drink. This he administered to his wife and children, who drank it and died; and after laying them on the floor he lay down by them and took the poison. Shortly after the brother entered the house, and finding the whole family lying dead on the floor, with the half-emptied cup beside them, drank the rest of the contents, quietly lay down and died also! We are further informed that his wife is now in custody in Poona, and the case awaiting investigation. We (Poona Observer) have before us a table published by Government as a supplement to the Gazette, showing the prices current of all articles at most of the stations in the presidency, during the month of July. At Poona according to this statement bajree is put down at thirteen seers; whereas it is only nine. This may indicate the great increase in distress which has taken place since July. The large towns are better off than small places in the country. At Tulligaum (on the road towards Naggur) we believe the same nominal prices rule as in Poona, but there is very great difficulty in obtaining any food even at that price; and the inhabitants are reduced to eating all sorts of unwholesome substances instead. The cattle are dying fast; and a loss of human life must soon follow, for a continued scarcity will soon tell upon the old and weak, and upon the very young. In the other direction, towards Khandalla, we understand there is not quite the same amount of scarcity. The impression continues not less general than before that the present extreme prices are fictitious, and the result of a combination of the dealers; and happy to learn of European gentlemen also, and of some in important official positions. Under these circumstances we are in hopes that Government will be persuaded to do something, but we cannot help remarking that the sooner action is taken the better. Lengthy consultation is out of place when a house is on fire, or a famine raging. Relief is of double value when it is immediate. Already much suffering must have been endured. Meanwhile, so far as Poona itself is concerned, the Government will no doubt be pleased to learn that a solution of the question is expected which may save them the trouble of immediate action. From what we hear we think it not improbable that the inhabitants will loot the shops in the city. This sounds a little alarming at first; but if we consider the subject the uneasy feeling will soon disappear. For it seems that this proceeding was not a very uncommon one under the old native regime. tional recollections of the old Brahman and Maratha administrations are fresh and vivid; and it appears that in those times also it was found that the banians held the monopoly of sale in their hands, and that combinations among them tokeep prices too high were either frequent or frequently suspected. Under these circumstances the inhabitants used to cry out to Government; and the course which their Government used to take on such an emergency is indicated by the remark which we hear now made-" If we had a Maratha Government now," it is said, "they would tell us to loot the city. Let us do so now, for one hour, and let the authorities only keep quiet for that time, and we shall supply ourselves.

MAURITIUS .- The Commercial Gazette of the 23rd July contains a statement of the revenue and expenditure for the first six months of 1862. which shows that, including £50,000 for railway, the expenditure has been £221,601, and revenue £210.595. The accounts of the colonial agent in London and the emigration agents in India are not included in the expenditure. There is a falling off in the revenue, as compared with last year, of about £10,616, principally in Customs, but no uneasiness is felt on account of this decline, from its having been caused by the commercial dulness of the early months of the year, dulness which is not expected to return again. The Quarantine Committee is sitting, and the officers of health have fallen under the censure of the press for allowing ships to leave the colony with a clean bill of health when the decrease of the cholera on the island is not sufficiently clearly manifested. The disease is not so bad as it was, but still cases are almost of daily occurrence. A meeting has also been held, and the usual preliminaries adopted, for opening subscriptions for the Prince Consort's Memorial Fund.

THE "TROPIC BIRD" appears to have foundered on the 16th of August. The Sirius picked up six of the lascars, and made them over to the Clifton, who brought them up to Calcutta. The captain and some of the crew have not been heard of, while it is stated that the chief officer and eleven of the crew were drowned in a boat which was swamped.

THE FRENCH IN THE RED SEA .- The Aden correspondent of the Times of India says that Obokh, the last annexation or purchase of territory by the French in the Red Sea, is not likely to prove very profitable. The place is situated near the south entrance to the Red Sea, and is occupied by savage tribes at variance with each other. is nominally under the dominion of the Sultan, who sends an officer periodically to collect a certain tax. The French have paid to one chief purchase-money for a certain amount of land, which is no sooner known to other chiefs than they refuse to allow the transfer to take place until they too are paid. The Rhone, of the French navy, was at Aden with iron coal-b oats and stores, to make preparations for the Messa. geries steamers. Already there is much coal stored there under a French agent.

COLONEL LUCAS, commandant at Kirkee, is to receive the new appointment of Inspector general of Artillery for the Bombay Presidency, with the rank and allowances of a Brigadier-general on the staff.

JACOBABAD, August 24 .-- Our mountain friends, the Boogtees and Murries, most of the latter and part of the former, have been trying their old dodges; however, they have been disappointed as usual. A party of fourteen horsemen left the hills on the 18th, consisting of a brother of Hybut Mussooree, a branch of the Boogtee tribe, who for some years past have lived separate from the main portion of the tribe, and all men of note in the hills, for the purpose of plundering. They carried off 400 camels from near Mitree, eleven miles N. N. E. of Kusmoor. On the night of the 18th, about 9 p.m., Bhadur Khan, Russaldar at Kusmoor, got kubbur, and [taking Yaroo, a Koosah and jemadar in the Belooch Mounted Guides attached to the Sind Horse. This man has been repeatedly mentioned for gallant conduct, and in 1853 by order of the Governor-general of India was granted a pension of Rs. 5 monthly, to be held " irrespectively of any pay or pension to which he may hereafter become entitled," for valuable services rendered by him in an affair with hill robbers on the 3rd April, 1853. He is covered with wounds, most of them received since he entered Government employ, seventeen years ago], with twelve of his sowars and part of his own detachment, went in pursuit; they followed the track for forty miles, when, owing to the heavy rain and excessive darkness, they lost them. Bahadur Khan then sent a party of Kosas, eight men, in one direction, while he went in another, to try and find the track again. This party of Kosas appear to have come on the Lootoos, who, thinking they had only to deal with the 8th Belooch, showed fight; the Kosas immediately sent one man back for Bahadur Khan, and most gallantly charged the Lootoos, just double their number. In the mean time the sowar sent back found Bahadur Khan, who immediately pushed on to the scene of the fight, and found that four Lootoos had bitten the dust, but that one Kosa had been killed, and all the others wounded, some very severely. He soon settled the matter by following up the other Lootoos, who had bolted on seeing him, and killing everyone of them. The fight took place amongst the low hills near the Gehandaree Mountain, much cut up with ravines. He threw his men out as shirmishers, and soon settled the business, recovering the whole of the camels; also bringing off the arms and mares of the robbers. Of course the Lootoos had no chance when our own men arrived; but I do think that the Kosas behaved nobly, and had they not kept the robbers in check by boldly going in at them, they would have got off with their plunder. This will do much good all along the frontier.—Times of India.

CEYLON.

We have received files of the Colombo Observer up to the 18th of August, recording an unusual change in the weather, and a heavy fall of rain, welcome in Colombo and the low country, but not by any means so in some of the planting districts. The same paper also states that while the decrease on plantation coffee, as compared with last season, is no less than 40,000 cwt., the increase on native is 25,000. This reduces the aggregate falling off to 14,556 cwts., total shipments to date being 559,000 cwts., against 573,000 to the same period last year. This, it is said, is considerably better than was ever hoped for. There can be no doubt that the roads recently made are tending materially to increase the prosperity of the colony, and it is said that along the line of road there are perfect series of coffee gardens, where, not long ago, not a single coffee bush was to be seen. The Government agent for Trincomalee had submitted a proposal to Go-vernment for the cultivation of cotton in that province, and as a preliminary step it is suggested that the upset price of land be reduced, in order to encourage the natives. The local papers speak most hopefully of this proposal, but the sugar cultivation has proved itself something very like a failure. The Governor has returned to Colombo, and preparations are being made for an approaching session, when his Excellency, it is said, will announce definitively the position of the railway question. It is now officially known that tenders have been sent in, and it is stated that one is as low as £873,000, and so the good folks of Ceylon are again sanguine about their railway. Messieurs Varangot and De Cortanges, agents for the Messageries Imperiales, are now at Galle hurrying on the arrangements for the Calcutta and Saigon lines, which are to run in October. Both gentlemen are said to be extremely popular in Galle; M. Varangot is a Capitaine de Vaisseau, post-captain, in the French navy, and has had considerable experience in these seas.

RETIREMENT OF COMMODORR WELLESLEY.

Sept. 10.—No. 144.—The period of service of Commodore G. Wellesley, c.B., having expired on the 7th July, Capt. J. Frushard, of II M.'s I.N., is appointed commodore comg. H.M.'s I.N. from that date.

his experience and advice on the numerous subjects on which he has been consulted.

During Commodore Wellesley's tour of command the Indian navy was constantly employed, especially in the late war with China. At the close of that struggle the whole naval force under Rear-Admiral Sir C. Hope, K.C.B., including seven ships of the Indian navy, received the marked commendation of the Lords of the Admiralty. Although in this service Commodore Wellesley had no personal share, the Indian navy felt then, as on all occasions, the influence of his just and impartial command and its discipline; and, therefore, the credit it won was in no small degree due to the admirable spirit of which Commodore Wellesley afforded to every officer and man so distinguished an example.

H.E. in Council takes this opportunity of directing the publication of the following letter addressed by Commodore Wellesley to Capt. Frushard, the senior officer of H.M.'s Indian navy:— "London, July 3, 1862.

Clerks in the Financial Department.

The following extract from the proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, under date Aug. 29, No. 6a, is republished for general information :

Read again Financial Resolution No. 84, dated May

Read also Financial Resolution No. 3.772. dated June 5, calling on all heads of offices of account and audit to submit reports as to the effects of the resolution of May 13 last on their subordinates.

lution of May 13 last on their subordinates.

Read Reports submitted in obedience to the orders passed in the above-mentioned Resolution.

Resolution.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council observes that a general impression seems to exist that the prospects of clerks will be injuriously affected by the Resolution of last May, and that they will no longer be eligible to the higher posts to which they have hitherto looked forward. This impression is errongous. All chars, who may be ship to qualify have hitherto looked forward. This impression is erroncous. All clerks who may be able to qualify themselves for higher employment will continue to possess the same title as hitherto to such advance-ment as they may deserve. The chief assistants in the several offices are admitted into classified grades, and the Resolution provides that the report of the head of the office in which a vacancy occurs shall be considered before such vacancy be filled up. It will thus be in the power of the head of an office to recommend any of his clerks for promotion to the thief assistantships and for admission into the classified grades.

It remains to review the classification of the several appts, of the Financial Department. The Gov. gen. in Council remarks that while the existing salaries are proportionate to the duties of the several salaries are proportionate to the duties of the several offices, the admission into the present classes of some offices will involve a considerable progressive increase of pay, whereas the general scope of the Resolution is the reduction of allowances. The Gov. gen. in Council considers Rs. 600 a month to be a sufficient maximum for the grade of chief assistants in the principal local offices. H.E. in Council further remarks that, under the Resolution of May last, ther remarks that, under the Resolution of May 1885, an officer in any but the first class must serve in each class two or three years before he gains any increase of salary. H.E. in Council considers that in India, where service is so much shorter than in England, the increase of salary may be allowed to commence earlier.

Staff Appointments—Examinations.

Stail Appointments—Examinations.

Bombay Castle, Sept. 9.—Under instructions from H.E. the Gov. gen. of India in Council, as communicated to the Govt. of Madras, in letter No. 505, dated March 14, 1862, it is notified that the appt. of an officer to a staff situation, he not having passed the prescribed examination, is in contravention of the clear rule laid down in the General Order No. 784, of May 19, 1859, which directs that the order prohibiting the employment on the staff of any unpassed officer shall be thenceforward strictly enforced.

This rule admits of no exception, the utmost re-laxation allowable being the grant of leave of absence to an unpassed officer to join a personal staff except in such rare cases as those alluded to, the appointment for a period of six months, within rules laid down in the G.O. of 1859 would be strictly enforced in all appointments subsequent to SHAW, wife of Capt. C. R., son, at Moisgunge, Aug. 26.

This relaxation of the general rule is, however only permissible on the sole ground of the personal convenience of high officers, military and civil, which to this extent may be consulted with public advantage.

No stail pay is to be passed to an officer so situated until he has passed; but having passed his pay and appointment should be made retrospective.

The following remarks and instructions by the Government of India on the subject of staff appointment.

ments are published for general information:

It was ruled by the late Court of Directors that no officer who entered the service subsequently to the 9th of January, 1837, would be deemed eligible to any staff situation (except a temporary one dur-ing actual service in the field), or civil employ, until he had passed an examination in the Hin-doostance language.

Attention was again drawn to this regulation in the year 1850.

The rule in question is applicable to all the Presideucies, and no officer who entered the service after the 9th January, 1837, is eligible to hold a staff appointment, or any situation in civil or detached employ, or to receive the salary of such post unle he has passed the prescribed examination in the Hindoostanee language.

This has been the rule of the service, and has always been maintained; though occasionally, when from the absence of properly-qualified officers, it may have been indispensably necessary to nominate an unpassed officer to act in any situation as a temporary arrangement, the allowances have also been granted as a special indulgence.

Such nominations have been very rare, and H.E. the C. in C. has recently been requested to notify that no such temporary appointment will be con-firmed unless it is shown that no qualified officer is available, and that the nomination of an unpassed officer for the time is indispensably necessary.

Owing to the exigencies of the service, consequent on the mutiny and the recent campaigns in India, the rule was temporarily relaxed in Bengal, but the the rule was temporarily reased in Estigan, structure restriction was again imposed in May, 1859,‡ though it was slightly modified in October of the same year,§ for the convenience of the public service. The nefor the convenience of the public service. The necessity for even this slight relaxation has long since ceased.

Exemption was granted in January, 1861, T to officers employed in the public works department, who are required to pass special tests as laid down in the Code of that department.

But under the new system now coming into force, appointments in the public works department, if not appointments in the public works department, if not held by engineer officers or civilians, as well as all other appointments in India (save those on the general staff of the army, and enumerated in paragraph 76 of G.G.O. No. 332, dated April 10, 1861, and which are open to officers generally, whether of the British or Indian services, or of the staff corps) are eventually to be filled by officers of the staff corps, and no officer can be admitted to the staff corps unless he has passed the prescribed examination in the native language.

The letter No. 505, of March 14, to the Secretary to the Government of Fort St. George, had reference to personal staff officers, and to such only, the special and temporary relaxation therein authorisehaving been sanctioned on the sole ground of the

G.G.O. No. 7, dated 9th January, 1837.

† G.O. No. 734. of 1859.—Under the exigencies of the service during the last two years, many officers have been made available for employment on the staff and in various situations who have not passed the examination in the native languages, laid down by G.O. by the Gov.gen of the 25th June, 1850; but tranquillity having now been generally restored, H.E. the Gov.gen. in Council is pleased to announce the provisions of that order will in future be strictly enforced, and no officer will hereafter be appointed to any situation on the staff or to any civil or other detached employment, who has not passed the prescribed examination.

Every officer who has been removed from his regiment for staff, civil, or other employment, who has not already passed the prescribed examination, or shall not pass it within six months from the date of this order, will be remanded to his corps. † G.O G.G., dated 25th June, 1550

§ Camp Oonao, Oct. 31, 1859.—G.G.O. No. 9, of 1859.—In consideration of the difficulty of relieving at once all the officers holding staff and detached appointments who may fail to pass in the native languages on the 19th November next, under the operation of G.G.O. No. 734, dated 20th May, 1859, H.E. the Gw.-gen., in order to prevent inconvenience to the public service, is pleased to determine that such unpassed officers shall, after the 19th proximo, retain their respective appointments as "officiating," and shall receive the usual salaries, but only noth it is found practicable to relieve them. In no other respect is the G.O. No. 734 affected by this order. H.E. is further pleased to direct that, in addition to the usual half-yearly examination to be held in January and July next, committees of examination shall be also held on the 10th April n.xt, at the usual stations, to facilitate the passing of officers qualifying themselves for staff employ.

The rules laid down in 1837, and followed up in The rules laid down in 1837, and followed up in 1850 and 1859, apply to all appointments or employment, whether civil or military, the only relaxation permitted being, as already noted, in the case of officers of the Indian or old local service, who, if selected for employment in the Public Works Department, come under the provisions of G.O. by the Governorgeneral of the 15th January, 1861, and in the case of personal staff officers who are allowed six months to qualify as authorised in the letter to the secretary to the Government of Fort St. George, No. 505 dated to the Government of Fort St. George, No. 505, dated 14th March. The rules, however, do not apply to the officers of the department of the adjutant general, her Majesty's British forces.

T Camp Jubbulpore, January 15, 1861.—G.G.O. No. 10A, 1861.—Inconvenience having been found to arise from the application to officers of the engineer establishment of the different tests for examination in the languages laid down in G.G.O. of the 9th January, 1837, H.E. the Gov.-gen. is pleased to notify that the G.O. in question does not apply to officers employed under the Public Works Department, the tests of which will remain as laid down in the code, or amended from time to time by the Government of India in the Department of Public Works time to time by the of Public Works.

MR. LAING ON IMPORT DUTIES IN INDIA.

THE late Financial Minister of India is determined to keep himself prominently before the public. He is right in doing so, for the public has a marvellous faculty of forgetting those who pass away from before its gaze. His last appearance, however-as this time it is in print-is little calculated to enhance his reputation as a political economist. A Committee, it seems, has been formed at Manchester for obtaining the early abolition of the Indian tariff on cotton goods and yarns, the Honorary Secretary of which very naturally consulted Mr. Laing as to the most effective means of attaining that end. That gentleman's reply is now before us. He begins by admitting from the manufacturers' point of view the importance of a further reduction of the import duties, as factories established in India have considerable advantages over those at home in the cheapness of labour and material, and in having no freight to pay for either the raw or the manufactured article. But then there is also an Indian point of view from which this question must be regarded. At present the import duty on yarns and piece goods yields an annual revenue of half a million sterling, and if that were abolished, free admission into the country must be equally accorded to iron, hardware, haberdashery, and other imported articles, nor would it be possible to maintain the export duties on Indian The whole Customs' revenue, amounting to £2,000,000, is therefore actually at stake, and even were it otherwise any deficiency thus caused could only be supplied by direct taxation, of all things the most odious to the native mind. The income-tax, though it falls so lightly upon the people at large, is borne patiently, says Mr. Laing, mainly through a confident belief that it will not be reimposed at the expiration of the five years to which it was originally limited. The repeal of this unpopular impost, three years hence, is a moral and political necessity, and no greater blunder could be made than to continue to levy it as a set-off against the abolition of import duties which are scarcely at all felt by the population. It is urged, however, by the Manchester Committee that a further reduction of the European army may now be made with perfect safety, and Mr. Laing admits that a few years later such a course may be practicable, but for the present he thinks it advisable to pay an "extra insurance to remove all temptation from unruly spirits in populous cities and in remote districts." Besides, if any reduction could be made, the saving thus effected must aware that the import duty has in no respect Navy Bay. Avenues of cocce nut and other use-be appropriated in the first place to the redemption of the income-tax. It remains then, to be considered whether England can offer India an equivalent for making "a special exception in favour of English interests by repealing or reducing this import In answer to this question Mr. Laing suggests that England should assume some portion of the cost of the home depots of regiments serving in India, as it is undeniable that these soldiers are "a reserve for England as well as for India, and that in case of any pressing emergency, such as an invasion, they would not be sent to India, however great might be her wants, until the danger nearer home was over." But as this proposal would involve additional charges on the already overburdened English treasury, it may at once be dismissed as untenable. Another equivalent might be offered in the imperial guarantee of the Indian debt, and there is no doubt that the honour and power of England are already pledged for its due payment. Still, if a series of disasters terminated in wresting that dependency from the British Crown, it would probably become a subject of congratulation that a debt of one hundred millions had not been added to the burdens of the State. In any case we may rest assured that the House of Commons is not yet prepared to accept that responsibility in the name of the country. But, observes Mr. Laing-

"There is a special capital which stands on a "There is a special capital which stands on a different footing from the national debt of India, to which these considerations might possibly not apply, viz., the guaranteed railway capital. 1. The amount is known to be limited. 2. It is held exclusively in England. 3. It is applied exclusively to an object in which English commerce has a vital interest. 4. The liability is slight, for it only extends to guaranteeing a certain return in case the traffic should be insufficient to pay it." guaranteeing a certain return should be insufficient to pay it.

The capital thus far expended on Indian railways is taken by him in round numbers at £40,000,000, to which must be added £30,000,000 more to complete them. The Indian Government, as is well known, has guaranteed five per cent. to the shareholders on their capital, but Mr. Laing imagines the latter would be glad to accept four per cent. in lieu of the larger amount, if guaranteed by the Imperial Government. The grounds for this belief, however, are not stated, and it is altogether inconsistent with the arguments which he himself adduces to prove that this country would incur no great risk in endorsing the guarantee of the Indian Government.

"The finances of India," he asserts, "are on the bundest possible footing. With a gross revenue of soundest possible footing. With a gross revenue of £43,000,000, which is rapidly increasing, the interest of debt is now one-seventh of the income, while that of England is two-fifths. England has no reserve and barely meets the necessary expenses by the taxes of the year. India invests annually out of surplus revenue at least £2,000,000 in reproductive public works. England has no cash balance beyond what is required to carry on current business; India has a reserve of at least £8,000,000 in hard cash in her treasury."

If this be the case why should capitalists sacrifice one per cent. for the sake of a security which is rather nominal than real? Very likely it would be quite possible to raise the additional capital required at four per cent., but why should the country be made answerable for the interest on thirty millions in order that the manufacturers of Lancashire may be benefited to the extent of half-a-million sterling? Mr. Laing affects to believe that such an arrangement would be to the advantage of diminished the export of goods from Manchester. The fact is that the Indian markets have been glutted with piece goods to an extent that has rendered sales impossible. India: is assuredly under no obligations to our selfish millowners that she should depart from "ordinary routine," or adopt "a new principle" for the sake of increasing their profits. And when Mr. Laing confesses that after much consideration he can suggest no other compromise, he virtually admits that the abolition of import duties is for the moment out of the question. Why, then, did he not say so in so many words instead of multiplying words to darken counsel?

A PENAL ARCADIA IN THE BAY OF BENGAL.

SHOULD the Andaman Islands ever be in. habited by an industrious and comparatively civilised population they will be indebted for that blessing to the mutiny of the Bengal army. Prior to that event their only inhabitants belonged to one of the lowest types of humanity, ignorant of the simplest arts, and leading the life of untutored savages. Situated in a stormy sea far from the mainland, the Andamans were wisely selected as a penal settlement for the convicts of all India. At one time it was proposed to send thither the ex-King of Delhi, but as such an act would have appeared to savour of useless cruelty in the case of so old a man, it was finally decided that the Last of the Moguls should expiate his crimes in the city of Rangoon. Convicts of meaner note, however, were despatched in considerable numbers to Port Blair, and the nucleus was formed of the thriving settlement at present confided to the judicious superintendence of Lieutenant-colonel Tytler. In the month of June last that intelligent officer had at his disposal the labour of 2,264 native convicts of various degrees of criminality, but so exceedingly docile and well-behaved that he declares it to be "quite a pleasure to have such willing people to superintend and look after." He even implores the Government to send him as many more as "can be spared, there being work in abundance for them." And this work is no unmeaning annoyance, no practical idleness in the shape of picking oakum, no waste of muscular power in causing a ponderous wheel to revolve. Whatever is done, is done with a purpose. Every convict is closely and constantly employed, but he has at least the satisfaction of knowing that his labour, so far from being in vain, directly conduces to his own comfort and to the advantage of those who may come after him. In the first place, having completed a road from Aberdeen to Phoenix Bay, they are engaged in planting cocoa-nut trees on either side, to furnish a grateful shelter from the sun, and at the same time refreshment for the wayfarer. Then, they are making a road from Aberdeen to Navy Bay, a distance of nearly three miles, for the double purpose of insuring an easy communication with Viper Island in stormy weather, and of throwing up, as it were, additional outworks to check the sudden assaults of the savage natives, for detachments of convicts will be located along this frontier line, and will gradually clear away the jungle. A third road is being constructed from the Phœnix Bay road our distressed operatives, but he must be well to Haddoo, and a fourth to branch off from it to ful trees are formed on either side, and care is also taken to introduce the nutmer tree and the cotton plant, both thus far promising extremely well. Colonel Tytler has further applied for a supply of vegetable and flower seeds, and for young trees of the leichee, umra, bare, jumrool, date palm, tal palm, loquatt, noona atta, rose apple, and alligott pear. Nor do fruits and vegetables absorb the attention of this active-minded superintendent. He is equally anxious to obtain a stock of turkeys, guinea fowls, rabbits, fowls, ducks, and geese. In addition to all this, he is desirous to call forth a new breed of ponies and of donkeys, and asks for a sire and two dams of either animal. Half-a-dozen elephants. too, will be useful in transporting timber to the water side, and in dragging a portable saw-mill to wherever its services may be useful in the interior. But let it not be supposed that ruthless war has been declared against the stately timber trees, the peculiar pride and ornament of these islands. So far from it only the brushwood and smaller trees are being cleared away, and even those are replaced by others of greater utility. The poultry, the ponies, and the asses are to be reared on a model farm, superintended by a European, and, indeed, for every duty Colonel Tytler demands the supervision of "good European convicts." The very police are directed by a European convict, who sees that their arms and accoutrements are kept clean and in an efficient state to act against himself should he be tempted to transgress the laws of the settlement. And as the Europeans of the Naval Brigade are in want of amusement, a road or mall, three miles in extent, is to be constructed "all round Ross Island, along the beach, above high-water mark." The Convict Hospital on that island is reported as making slow progress, but, on the other hand, sheds and houses are being built with all reasonable rapidity, and more native convicts, male and female, are required to settle along the edge of the new clearings. The men of the Naval Brigade, moreover, are to have a patch of garden ground all to themselves to wean them from idle habits, but the presence of a clergyman is declared to be the one thing still needful, unless a bimonthly communication with Calcutta be regarded as equally indispensable. Some of the native boys are being instructed in the respective mysteries of the carpenter's and blacksmith's craft, in the hope that they may eventually become useful members of society. A few marriages, too, have taken place, "the married couples settling down to domestic peaceful occupation." Not a few of the female convicts, however, having no turn for matrimony, maintain themselves by grinding corn, selling vegetables, tailoring, &c., &c., and the superintendent, fearing to lose his Christmas turkey and his Michaelmas goose, expresses a hope that they will betake themselves to the rearing of poultry. Is not this a pleasant picture of well-regulated industry? In one direction we behold the jungle disappearing. and in its place a spacious roadway, lined with graceful fruit trees, and dotted with the cottages and gardens of the laborious and obedient convicts. In another quarter a European felon is drilling the police, or standing over them as they clean their firearms and furbish up their accoutrements. Rural sounds of naval songs fill the air as the jolly tars turn the glebe and plant their potatoes, cabbages, and cauliflowers. Fervet opus, redolentque thymo fragrantia mella. New comers alone are incapable of appreciating the pastoral felicity of this marine Arcadia, and have occasionally essayed to escape by flight. In a few days, however, they have been glad to return for punishment, worn out by fatigue, terror, and starvation, and generally robbed and wounded by the aborigines. One experiment of this kind suffices to reconcile them with their penal homes and daily recurring labour, and by degrees they come to love the monotonous serenity of their peaceful existence. The question naturally arises, What will be the future fate of the Andamanese themselves? As the convict population increases they will inevitably be driven into remote fastnesses, until they gradually disappear before the white man's civilisation, which annihilates all that it cannot absorb and assimilate. In truth, the extinction of these wretched islanders will be no vital loss to humanity.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A LUCID EXPOSITION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR-Adverting to an article in the impression of vour journal, dated the 29th ultimo, entitled "Duelling: its Pros and Cons," I solicit the indulgence of permission to venture a few observations refutory of the hypothesis therein advanced. Scarcely would I have been prepared for the enunciation, even by the most verdant military neophyte, of such doctrine as is insisted upon in the article to which I have directed your attention.

It cannot be conceded that there is the remotest difficulty in meeting the very worst possible case for investigation which can arise out of the most atrocious form of insult that could ever tend to violate the harmony presumed to exist in those of her Majesty's regiments which are in the highest sense efficiently constituted. Our Indian correspondent, however, evidently labours under the false impression that the principles which form the basis upon which her Majesty's army is systematised are unsound and illusory. The inference logically deduced from a perusal of his remarks and vehement denunciations is, that he, at least, is by no means satisfied with the economy prescribed by her Majesty for the preservation of the honour of those whom she has pathetically acknowledged as the guardians of her own honour, and the defenders of those vast dominions over which she so gracefully sways her glittering spectre.

I am pained at the vein of humour which permeates the solemnly important subject broached by our Mofussil friend, and can only propound that he is mistaken if he supposes it to be possible to be absolutely neutral on any point whatever, under any circumstances that can be suggested to the human mind. He asserts that he does not advocate the revival of duelling, but further reflection will, doubtless, assure him that every syl lable which he has written on that topic is in ad vocacy of that mode of arbitration. As well may the people of England declare their absolute neutrality concerning the social and political rupture in America, but no living man is so credulous as to accept the idea that the hearts of England's people do not beat in sympathy with the noble sons and daughters of the Southern Confederacy. Neutrality, in its entirety, is a complete myth, and it is very deeply to be regretted that any one can be found to say aught in extenuation of a system of self defence based upon the flimsy foundation of hallucinations generated by mental irritation aggravated by a choleric disposition, and provocative of results which can only appropriately obtain in Pandemonium. Once more, and I have done. "Coarseness of manners," our friend writes from Hindostan, " makes some system of arbitra-and clear code of rules to guide officers in all questions concerning their honour." are as the eaves of the roof of an edifice exposed to the ruthless blast of a tropical tornado; they act as a lever by which the tempest desolates the entire fabric, for if the "coarseness of manners" so hateful to our correspondent should at any time prove of such colossal annoyance as to appear to necessitate special legislation, the laws now in vogue would concentrate their force upon any such offender presented to them as an object on which to vent their fury, and hurl him from amidst the society of gentlemen such as those who rejoice in the honour of holding commissions in her Majesty's army. If, however, the "coarseness of manners" is of such a character as that something less than an especially definite and clear code of rules would suffice to promote the well being of society in general, and the military service in particular, I totally fail to perceive any sufficient cause of complaint. It is a fact far beyond contradiction, or even cavil. that two-thirds out of every twelve quarrels have originated at the mess-table; hence, it will be apparent to any meditative man that it has not yet become necessary to endeavour to move the whole earth, in order to obviate irregularities, for the adjustment of which there is ample provision made to satisfy all, save those who seem to be akin to such as are utterly implacable.-I am, sir, yours obediently, NUMBER THIRTY.

CIVILISATION OF JAPAN.

At the meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, on Saturday, the 4th, Sir Rutherford Alcock delivered an able address on the "Civilisation of Jupan."

In the course of the discussion which ensued, The Rev. Mr. Blakesley agreed with the author in regard to the misery produced by the contact of nations of a civilisation of a totally different kind. Could Sir R. Alcock point out in what manner this collision of civilisation between Europe and the empire of China, for example, which had produced such appalling suffering to the Chinese, was likely to be tempered and diminished? Hopes might reasonably be entertained that there was some germ of improvement in the family relations or otherwise of the Japanese which might be developed into civilisation of much higher order, and eventually into Christianity. The profligacy of manners among the Japanese was not in itself an evidence that some principle of a better nature did not exist which might lead to higher results. Nor was their present disregard of human life and the barbarity of their punishments a hopeless sign, because within the remembrance of some now present life was taken in this country for shoplifting. Some of the principles of political government in Japan resembled our own. The Tycoon, for example, could do no wrong. Everything was to be taken to be the act of the minister, and he was alone responsible.

Mr. Crawfurd could not consent to place the Japanese at the head of the civilisation of the nations surrounding that empire. The Japanese were in some important points much inferior to the Chinese, and even to the Burmese. The intercourse between the sexes, for example, in China was delicacy itself as compared with Japan. Could Sir R. Alcock give any hopes of a largely increased trade with Japan in the articles of tea and silk? He believed that eight thousand bales of raw silk of pure quality were now exported from

Sir R. Alcock said that the Japanese had one great element of superiority over the Chinese, in being devoid of that stupid, stolid conceit which led the Chinaman to suppose that he was wiser and better than all the rest of the world. If the Japanese could only deliver themselves from the overruling feudalism of their institutions, there was hardly any limit to the commercial intercourse which might spring up between the two countries. Their civilisation might then, to a certain extent. fuse and amalgamate with our own, and the way would be opened for the spread of Christianity in Japan. The nativo aptitude, quickness, and intelligence of the Japanese were such that they greet the ear from yonder farm, or snatches ment necessary, and what we want is a definite would soon discover the means of opening up new channels of trade with Europe. A successful conflict with feudality was, however, the inevitable condition of progress in that country. The feudal nobles and proprietors of Japan had the sense to perceive that the knell of feudalism was struck as soon as commerce with European nations once took root, and they therefore wished to nip the evil in the bud, and check the growing desire for European commerce before it was too late. In this design they were ready not only to encounter the power of great European nations, but to run the risk of civil commotion. If the feudal element could be overthrown, or reduced within due limits, there were scarcely any bounds to the trade which might spring up with Japan. The Japanese produced silk in great abundance and of the finest quality. Their tea was of so fine a quality that large quantities were sent to China for the purpose of giving flavour to indifferent tea. It was true that eight thousand bales of silk were now exported, and that this quantity might be largely increased. The Government and the feudal nobles who possessed the land would, however, probably interpose to prevent this and other articles from coming to the ports. Our trade with Japan already amounted to £1,000,000 sterling, which was a wonderful increase when the difficulties interposed in the way of trade were taken into account. The great danger and insecurity arose from jealousy of the ruling powers. There were six hundred and twenty feudal nobles in Japan, who had two hundred thousand armed men or retainers ready to give up their lives at the beck of their superiors. With regard to the population of Japan, he had perhaps travelled more into the interior than any European of modern times, and if he might judge of the amount of population by what he saw on the high roads, he should be disposed to place it at not less than thirty millions. From the swarms of children that he everywhere saw he should also say that the Japanese were largely increasing in numbers. The power of producing vegetable wax, silk, and tea was almost unlimited. The country was rich in minerals, and there was abundance of coal if the Japanese could be induced to work their mines properly. One Japanese landed proprietor thought he could work his mines best by steam, and he accordingly ordered a European steam-engine to be sent to him. Two years afterwards, being in the neighbourhood, he (Sir R. Alcock), at the peril of his life, stepped off the high roads to visit the mines. He found the steam-engine lying outside, unused and rusty. On inquiring why it had not been used, he was told that the Japanese coalowner would not put it up because it would take the bread out of the mouths of his people. The political economy of Japan was diametrically opposed to all extension of commerce with foreign countries. It was a favourite doctrine among many of the Japanese that free trade was bringing them to poverty. It might therefore be a long time before they would freely take European manufactures. They got silver in exchange for their goods, but they said they could not eat silver, and they contended that the condition of the bulk of the people was injured rather than improved by foreign commerce. Their jealousy of Europeans was excessive. A Dutch commissioner, who had been many years in Japan, was repeatedly told that he had been too long there, and that he knew too much. He was therefore urged to leave the country. The American Secretary of Legation, who had been some years in Japan, and had learnt the language, so that he could act as an interpreter, was repeatedly warned to take care, and was told that he also knew too much. The day before this gen tleman was cut down and slaughtered in the streets some one came to him, and earnestly said, "Take care; go away; you know too much." great was the jealousy with which he (Sir R. Alcock) was regarded, that he found it impossible to hold intercourse with any but officials and ministers, the Japanese Government finding means to prevent his communicating in a social and friendly manner with any of the gentlemen of the country. The feudal system of Japan, he would repeat, lay in the path of commerce, and the sooner it was broken down or pushed out of the way the better.

The thanks of the Section were unanimously voted to Sir R. Alcock for his interesting communication.

DEATH OF THE HERO OF LUCKNOW .- With deep regret, which will be shared by every English man, we have to announce the death of Majorgeneral Sir John Eardley Wilmot Inglis, K.C.B., colonel of the 32nd regiment, and commander of the troops in the Ionian Islands. From a private letter we learn the sad intelligence that Sir John Inglis died on Saturday, the 27th ult., at Homburg. It will be remembered that this distinguished officer was in command of the garrison at Lucknow, and defended that position with a very small force of English soldiers, already enfeebled by privation and the diseases incident to a hostile climate, against an enormously dis-proportioned force of mutineers. For that noble defence he received the honour of being made a Knight Commander of the Bath. Subsequently he was appointed to the important post of commander of her Majesty's troops in the Ionian Islands; but his health, shaken by the long anxiety and desperate privation of the defence of Lucknow, languished until his medical advisers thought it their duty to recommend that he should try the air of Germany. Sir John Inglis was not more than forty-seven years of age. In 1833 he received his commission as ensign of the 32nd regiment, and it is rather a remarkable fact that he served in that regiment in every grade from ensign to full colonel, and that he was still colonel of that regiment when he was appointed to the command of her Majesty's forces in the Ionian Islands. He continued to be colonel of that regiment up to the moment of his death.

UPPER ASSAM TEA COMPANY .-- A prospectus has been issued of the Upper Assam Tea Com pany, with a capital of £250,000, in shares of £10 each. The object is to purchase some tea estates, comprising 10,428 acres in the immediate neighbourhood of those of the old Assam Company. The property is stated to be already in profitable cultivation, and its price—£131,000—is to be paid entirely in shares. Mr. G. R. Barry, late of Assam, the present proprietor, will henceforth act as manager of the undertaking.

DRAFTS ON INDIA .- The usual monthly biddings for bills on India took place on the 1st at the Bank of England, and the amount offered was £380,000. The minimum rates declared were the same as those of last month - namely, 1s. 11½d. per rupee on Calcutta, and 1s. 11¾d. on Bombay and Madras. Owing to the continued demand for remittances to India to pay for cotton the tenders within the limits again amounted to nearly £1,500,000. Those for bills on Calcutta above 1s. 113d. will be accepted in full, those at 1s. 113d. will receive about 65 per cent. On Bombay the tenders at 2s. 0 d. will receive in full, and at 2s. about 50 per cent. On Madras those at 2s. will receive in full, and at 1s. 117d. about 84 per cent.

THE TALLOW-TREE .- Among the trees which have of late been extensively distributed in the North-West Provinces of India and Punjab is the tallow-tree of China-stillingia sebifera. In China it is largely cultivated, and it is said that by its produce alone the taxes are paid in the district of Hong Kong. It grows equally well on low alluvial plains, on the rich mould of canals, in sandy soils, and on the acclivities of mountains. From its seeds tallow and oil are procured, which are extensively used in China. Its wood is hard and durable, and its leaves yield a black dye. It is now thriving well in India. The tallow and oil are easily procured from the seeds. The tree, therefore, is well worthy of attention.

with coupons attached, is now in course of delivery at the Bank of England.

Specie to the East.—The amount of specie taken out by the steamer with the Bombay mail on the 12th was £254,608, of which £158,780 was silver and £17,828 gold for Bombay, and £78,000 gold for Alexandria.

THE TRADES' ASSOCIATION OF CALCUTTA gave their annual dinner on the 22nd August in the Town-hall. More than 150 gentlemen sat down. The vocal union constituted one of the most pleasing parts of the entertainment, the town band were in attendance, and all the arrangements were perfect. Mr. Jennings, the master, presided with great dignity. Sir R. Napier represented the Government. The chairman's allusion, when proposing the Councils to the services of Mr. Laing, was received with repeated cheering. Sir R. Napier replied for the Councils. Mr. Lazarus proposed the Legal Profession, to which Mr. Clarke replied, recalling the time when the merchants of Calcutta, met to petition the Government, were forbidden by the civil power to enter the Town-hall, and when they then proposed to meet in the Exchange, Lord Comber-mere threatened to turn them all out with the bayonet. Mr. J. W. Browne proposed the Army and Navy, for which Colonel Beadle and Captain Reddie replied; Mr. Knight, the Civil Service, for which Mr. Sandeman replied; Mr. Payne, the Medical Service, for which Dr. Palmer replied; Mr. Remfry, the Chamber of Commerce, for which Mr. Bullen replied; Mr. Smith, the Landholders' Association, for which Mr. D. Macfarlane replied; and Mr. Mills, the Press, for which Mr. H. Mead replied. When "Our Guests" and the "Vocal Union" had been toasted, and "The Ladies" proposed by Mr. Mackintosh, a most leasant evening ended with "God Save the Queen."

A HOME FOR THE SONS OF PARENTS
A RESIDING IN INDIA AND THE BRITISH COLONIES.—There are Vacancies for the Sons of Gentlemen under fifteen years of age in a first-class School, conducted upon Unsectarian Evangelical Principles. Experienced Tutors, Graduates of Oxford and Cambridge, assisted by Foreign Professors, and a Civil Engineer, prepare the Pup Is for the Public Schools, the Universities, and for the various Nacal and Military Examinations. Pupils from this School have successfully entered Rugby, Harrow, and Etin, have matriculated at the Universities, have passed with great credit the examination for Naval Cadetship, for Sandhurst, for Direct Commissions in the Army, and also the Competitive Examination for Woolwich, and for the Indian Civil Service.

The religious instruction and the moral and physical well-being of the Pupils are objects of the Principal's continued solicitude, and his experience of upwards of twenty years devoted to educational training is brought to bear upon the daily school life and occupation of those committed to his care, in repressing and counteracting the evil, and in developing and bringing into healthful action the good, discoverable in invividual character and habit.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS .- PALPITATION OF THE HEART is frequently not only felt, but heard, prevents aleep, and hegets the utmost dread of impending suffocation. These Pills are particularly recommended for removing this affection, because they strengthen the nervous and debilitated, who are much more limble to this malady than other persons. Holl way's Pills so improve the digestion, increase the action of the liver, and give activity to the bowels, that giddiness, healanche, and nausa depart as the palpitation diminishes, and the sufferer at once experiences the most indescribable relief from anxiety. Hollowsy's Pills form the best riberative and a crient in all cases of convalescence from fevers, inflammations, neura gia, and all chronic diseases which have impoverished the blood and brain.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that nake The positivism of which M. Conste is the apoulte.

Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of manking to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of met physics their, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the merits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1862.

Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enriable talent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so describing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. THE HISTORY of CHESS: from the Time Tof the Early Invention of the Game in India till the Period of its Establishment in Western and Central Europe. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

By Duncan Forbes, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes a stout fight for the Handoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pinces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the nat onal temperament of the imbabitants; and then traces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious fore that lean on other and higher subjects then chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative etymology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but freshly, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world,"—Herald.

"As a prose satire, 'The History of the Abderites' yields only in breadth of humour, and pungency of wit, to Dean Swift's immortal travels of Captain Lemuel Gulliver; and of works of that class we know of none in any language that can compare with either of the two."—Observer.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English men and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution towards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to markind, of the Quixotes', Gullivers', and other human foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to our shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of nationa thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."—London Review.

MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE public meeting held in the Calcutta Town-hall on the 6th September is the only public event recorded in the local papers received by the mail of the 8th of that month. The meeting appears to have been well attended, though chiefly by commercial notabilities, and it is worthy of remark that two of the five resolutions were moved by two local journalists, anxious to assure Mr. Laing that he still possessed their confidence. The first speaker, Mr. Bullen, candidly avowed his opinion that in the question of railway exchange Mr. Laing was wrong, and that a loss of 8 per cent. must fall on India in some form or other. With regard to the opium estimate Mr. Bullen showed from figures that there would be an excess of very nearly a quarter of a million, and on other points he considered Mr. Laing's statements substantially correct. The other statements substantially correct. The other speakers appear to have been of the stump orator type, and made up by invective for Bombay on the 24th ult. (two days early).

what they lacked in argument and eloquence. Will the verbosity of his distant friends console Mr. Laing for the loss of his appointment and prestige?

The latest accounts from up-country represent cholera to be gradually disappearing. The mortality attendant on this terrible scourge has been very serious.

The martial ardour of the Calcutta residents is likely to revive the volunteer movement, now that Lord Elgin has declared himself its patron. So soon as 240 efficient members have been enrolled, his Excellency will be prepared to confer upon them all sorts of advantages.

Beyond this there is positively nothing to summarise.

TELEGRAPH LINE TO INDIA .- It is stated, with reference to the Indian telegraph question, that the authorities at the India-office have decided upon taking immediate steps for completing the land line of telegraph now in existence as far as Bagdad on to the head of the Persian Gulf, and to lay a submarine cable thence to Gwadel, on the coast of Beloochistan, from which point a land line is being constructed to join the Indian system of telegraphs at Kurrachee. Col. Stewart, R.E., directs the work generally, and Sir Charles Bright and Mr. Latimer Clark are the engineers.

MONUMENT TO SIR HENRY WARD .- The Ceylon Times mentious that a meeting was held at Kandy on the 18th Aug., for the purpose of considering what should be the nature of the memorial in contemplation, to evince the respect of the island for the late lamented Sir Henry Ward. It was resolved that the most suitable memorial would be a bronze statue of his Excellency, surmounting a granite pedestal, to be placed on the Kandy bund. The presentation of a handsome vase to Lady Ward was likewise agreed to, and a committee was appointed for the carrying out of either object, toward which liberal sums were subscribed on the occasion.

MUD SPRINGS OF HOOKEE.—In a paper read before the Bombay Physical Society on "The Country between Kurrachee and Guader," by Dr. Lalor, the mud volcanos or springs of Hookee were described. They are distant from the sea about a couple of miles. Of considerable height and conical shape they can be seen from eight to ten miles off. Access to the highest, about 350 feet, is easy, except near the crater, where the path becomes slippery. At the summit is a basin of circular form, about forty feet in diameter. Within this the liquid mud is heaved up at regular intervals, and in quantities varying from a mere bubble to jets of a foot high. The taste of the brine formed on the mud is nauseous, gypsum and sulphur abound, but there is no rise of temperature. The people of the country say that the full action is periodic, and reaches its greatest force at the time of spring tides. They seem connected with the ocean, and like it influenced by the moon. Hence their Belooch name, Dheryachum, or eye of the sea.

PUBLIC MEETING TO ADDRESS MR. LAING.

A numerous meeting assembled on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 6, at three o'clock, in the Townhall of Calcutta, in compliance with a very numerously and influentially signed requisition to the Sheriff, for the purpose of considering an address to Mr. Laing on the occasion of his having been compelled to resign his post as Financial Minister in India, by the censures passed upon him by the Secretary of State for India, Sir Charles Wood. Almost all the leading mercantile houses were represented, as well as every portion of the non official European community; the civil service were conspicuous by their absence, and but few natives attended; but a numher of the influential Parsees were present.

Precisely at three o'clock the Sheriff opened the proceedings by reading the requisition convening the meeting, and was unanimously voted into the chair.

David Cowie, Esq., Sheriff, said that he would not detain the meeting by any remarks of his own, but would simply say that it was his opinion, as a member of that Council in which Mr. Laing had worked so zealously for India, that Mr. Laing had proved himself to be, what was so difficult to find, "the right man in the right place."

Mr. J. N. Bullen moved the first resolution "That this meeting feeling confidence in the substantial accuracy of the statement of the finances of India made by Mr. Laing in his speech in the Legislative Council of the Governorgeneral on the 16th April last, is of opinion that the remissions of taxation, and the increase of expenditure on public works and education proposed therein, were wise and statesmanlike measures; and that this meeting recognising the services rendered to India by Mr. Laing has heard with great regret of his resignation of the office of Member of the Council of the Governor general, rendered unavoidable by the harsh and unreasonable censure passed on him by the Se cretary of State for India in Council in his despatch, dated 9th June last."

Mr. F. Jennings, Master of the Trades Association, seconded this resolution, which was carried unanimously. The following resolution was then moved by Mr. D. H. Macfarlane, and seconded by Mr. J. H. Fergusson, and voted nem. con.:-" The last and greatest act of Lord Canning-the sale of waste lands-has returned, after a delay of nine months, shorn of all that made it great, and mangled, until it is now a permanent settlement in favour of the wild beasts; and the holders of grants are thankful for leave to return to the rule of the East India Company. The Contract Law is forbidden, and those to whom we looked for help are waiting until the extension of slavery fills their warehouses, for they have no sympathy or influence to spare for

Mr. Maitland next proposed the third resolution as under:-" That this meeting desires also to record its opinion of the vital importance of unity of action between the Home Government and the Government of India, and the regret with which it has lately seen several instances of the absence of such unity in the reversal of the Home Government of measures sanctioned by the Government of India. That this meeting feels strongly that such a course of action, if persevered in by the Home Government, will also tend seriously to impair the respect which has hitherto been felt by all classes for the Government of

Mr. Claude Browne having seconded this resolution, it was also agreed to.

The fourth resolution was moved by the Rev. G. Smith, Editor of the Friend of India :-"That this meeting feeling confidence in the financial position of the empire, desires to ex ALLE Spread the population of the grants promised for M Applyic works and for education, but ordered by Manage Secretary of State for India to be withdrawn, and the mover of the fifth resolution, Mr. Walter Brett, editor of the Englishman: - "That in the oninion of this meeting there exists at present no sufficient supervision of the expenditure in England of money raised by taxation in India; and that the same stringent inquiry should be made into the Home expenditure for India as has already resulted in such satisfactory reductions in the Indian disbursements, the expenditure in England being, in the opinion of this meeting, susceptible of considerable retrenchment."

Mr. T. M. Robinson seconded this resolution, which, like the others, was carried without a dissentient voice.

Mr. Stewart then read the address: Samuel Laing, Esq., late Member of the Council of the Governor-general of India.

"Sir,-We, the undersigned inhabitants of Calcutta, and others, present this address to you on the occasion of your retirement from the post you lately occupied of Financial Member of the Council of the Governor-general of India-an address adopted at a large public meeting held in our Town-ball.

"Many of us have taken part in the former addresses to you, presented on your first arrival in India, at the time of your departure for England in consequence of ill-health, and subsequently on your return to India in December last.

"On your arrival we expressed our belief that you would be able to render great services to India; and on the subsequent occasions we recorded our strong sense of the services you had already rendered, and our hope that you would be able to remain with us to render to India services of still greater importance.

"As you have now resigned the important and responsible post you held, and will probably not again return to India, it is our duty, as it is our pleasure, by this address to place on record our earnest feeling of gratitude to you, and our conviction that you have in the fullest and amplest manner realised the expectations we entertained and expressed of the services you would be able to render to India, and through India to England also.

"We have witnessed with deep regret the circumstances under which you have resigned the post you held in the service of the Crown in India, but we feel that those circumstances were of such a nature as to leave you no other course to adopt, either in justice to yourself or to the interests of good government in this country. As the immediate cause of your retirement is the censure cast by the Secretary of State for India on your Financial Statement made on the 16th April last in the Council of the Government of India, and the unjust and unbecoming tone of the despatch of the 9th June last, addressed to the Governor-general of India in Council, we desire by this address to express our confidence in the substantial accuracy of that statement, and our entire belief that the finances of India were, and are, in such a satisfactory position as fully to justify the wise and statesmanlike measures of remission of taxation and increase of expenditure on public education and public works which you then proposed, and which were unanimously agreed to and adopted by his Excellency the Governor-general and his Council.

"We have seen with equal regret and surprise the tone of several of the despatches of the Secretary of State for India, addressed to the Governor-general in Council, and more especially the despatch of the 9th June last, and we desire to express our conviction that such a tone, if per severed in, must be productive of much injury to the cause of good government in India, and must especially tend to lower the dignity of the high and important office of the Governor general of India in the eyes of the natives of this country. We cannot but feel, also, that the adoption and continuance of such a tone must prove injurious ultimately to the Minister holding the important office of Secretary of State for India in England, while it will increase the already existing difficulty experienced in finding men of character and post should, we feel assured, be always occupied by a financier from England, as it has already been with the happiest results by the late Mr. Wilson, and afterwards by yourself.

"Although, sir, it appears probable that you may not again be able to render services to India in India itself, we trust soon to hear that your health is entirely re-established, and that you have re-entered Parliament. You will there be enabled to render eminent service by the personal knowledge you have of this country and its wants, and will be prepared to supply that information we see with regret is so much wanting in Parliament from the small number of members who appear to have any acquaintance with, or take any interest in, its affairs.

"We earnestly hope soon to see restored that unity of action and purpose between the Government in England and the Indian Government which appears not to exist at present, and without which good government for India cannot exist; we trust also inquiry will be made in England into the heavy expenditure on account of India similar to in India itself, and that it will be attended with the same happy result—a considerable reduction of such expenditure, without any injury to the public service, and that measures will be taken for a regular and efficient supervision of such expenditure. We hope also the wise and liberal policy of the late Lord Canning in reference to the sale of waste lands and redemption of the land revenue will be reverted to, and that every effort will be made by the improvement of the means of communication still further to open up and develope the resources of India, and especially to increase for England the supply of cotton from India, and to enable this country fully to avail itself of the golden opportunity now offered to it.

"We fully believe that an era of great prosperity awaits this country if only well and wisely governed; and we know, sir, that we may rely confidently on your earnest and continued aid to the cause of good government—government whose great object and aim shall be the promotion of the moral and material improvement of this vast empire, and the benefit alike of all the races, creeds, and classes of her Majesty's subjects in British India. We have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient faithful servants."

Mr. Manockjee Rustomjee seconded it, and after a vote of thanks to the Chairman, proposed by Mr. T. M. Robinson, and seconded by Mr. Bullen, the meeting separated, all hastening to affix their signatures to the address .- Englishman.

"RES MILITARIS."

The social history of armies, like that of nations, passes through many phases and is affected by similar causes. Years may glide on without a Court-martial of sufficient interest to attract attention. A period may succeed when general orders every week teem with the records of trials and the remarks of the military authorities, and the eyes of the public are attracted to the army. In no body so much as among soldiers and their officers does peace work so much mischief through its invariable attendant, idleness; and in no place is that mischief so patent, as in the Capuas in the Himalayas, which nature seems to have made for those just sick enough to fancy themselves invalids. Hence the occurrence of scandal and the existence of good cause for it, most of all periods when the excitement of such campaigns as those of the rebellion has passed away, and most of all seasons of the year when Simla sparkles with uniforms and the frigid etiquette of the more public stations on the plains has been abandoned. And if Simla is so attractive as to allure the head of the army from those duties in the Calcutta Council for which he is so highly and specially paid, and for those stations where, while cholera is thinning our troops, one word from the highest military authority might save valuable lives, then must we expect that the hills will become the fashion still more. What the head of an army is that will all its undecided officers be. Twelve years ago Sir Charles Napier ability to proceed to India especially to fill the found it necessary to revive use of the second was the Hon, W. S. Fitzwilliam, post of Financial Member of Council, and which William Bentinck, which limits the number of officers who may leave their regiments for the But for an officer not to be a gentleman, hills, and to remind all that, while they had every luxury that can diminish the discomfort of a hot climate, their English troops who had the same constitution, none of the same comforts, and far more discomforts, never got leave on urgent private affairs.

The influence of the first personage in society on its condition has been nowhere more remarkably shown than in England. The great domestic virtues and high character of George III. during his long reign served to check all that open manifestation of immorality in high places which had been so prevalent since the Restoration. When the Prince Regent became George IV. it again burst forth for a time, and hard drinking, deep gambling, and gross licentiousness became the marks of gentlemanly and pratician birth. But all this evil hid its head on the accession of her Majesty; and the expression of public opinion regarding Lord Clanricarde, and more recently the delicate hints of the leading journal to the Prince of Wales, show that even were another George IV. to reign in England, vice would be driven into a corner by public opinion. And nowhere more than in India are perfect blamelessness of conduct and the positive exercise of all the virtues noted. The experience of our officers in Affghan istan, in the Punjab, in Burmah, and in every newly-conquered province, shows what the natives think of continence in all things. The sorrow which thrilled through India on Lady Canning's death, as well as the mantle of popularity which her devotion threw over her husband, proves how Anglo-Indian society, no less than English, is affected by the example of its leaders. This is even more true of the army into which officers enter as boys fresh from school. with their characters unformed, and with the natural respect for the teaching of their superiors fostered by military discipline. What the commanding officer is that the subalterns will generally be; what the Commander-in-Chief of the hour is that every undecided senior officer will be. And no military authority on earth has, from the very character of his daily life, such an influence on an army as the Commander-in-Chief of the forces of India. He is at once the fountain of substantantial promotion, and the centre of social attraction. Beyond the Presidency cities public opinion has little influence. In the brief year and a half of Sir Charles Napier's command, that General cashiered or dismissed six Queen's and fifteen Company's officers. Drunkenness and gambling were the chief offences. There one case in which the officer who at that time commanded the 44th N.I. was declared guilty of having, at Barrackpore, used the almost paternal authority with which he had been entrusted by the father of a married lady, to endeavour to seduce her affections. The court, after pronouncing him guilty of disgraceful conduct and sentencing him to be cashiered, recommended him to mercy on the ground, among others, of "the highly peculiar nature of this investigation." Sir Charles Napier's remarks are well worthy of study. He declared that he left the members of the court to their own reflections on such a proceeding as " endeavouring to throw upon the Commander-in-Chief the odium of refusing that, which its own sentence renders it impossible for him to grant, without insulting the officers of the Bengal Army in general, and those of the 44th in particular." For years after, throughout the whole weak administration of his successor, the effect of this and other orders continued.

But while, by his own example and by such orders, Sir Hugh Rose will, we doubt not, uphold the honour and extend the fame of the Indian army, we would warn him against an opposite evil into which anxiety for the reputation of his officers or his own may lead him. The simplest rules of justice and social right must not be sacrificed in the effort to discover offenders and convict the accused. The procedure of military courts is informal enough already, without adding to it the curse of a disgraceful espionage. It is still a question of discussion how far private which involves something more than being a man, is to be unfit to hold his commission. Off duty, in his club, at the mess-table, in his quarters, the Articles of War recognise the officer as retaining all the rights of a private gentleman. His privacy must be as much respected as the civilian's. He may in private conversation express any opinion of his military superiors, he may even to a friend "speak words tending to the hurt or dishonour" of the Commander-in-Chief, if there is no evidence that these words were intended to be published. In every respect they are a privileged communication, and the evil does not exist till they are publicly repeated. while the guilty party is he who reports not he who speaks them. The case has been cited of a subadar who was recently punished for omitting to report mutinous language. There is no parallel between this and Colonel Priestley's conduct. The sepoy was on duty, and spoke the mutinous words publicly. Nor, we would add, is there any parallel between an alien mercenary soldier belonging to a class which so recently mutinied, and an English officer and gentleman of the highest character, in staff employment. There are considerations of a political kind which would make it necessary to invade the privacy of an Asiatic sepoy; but every consideration should lead Sir Hugh Rose, as it did the Duke of Cambridge, to respect the sanctity of a private conversation between two officers, to punish by his contempt the talebearer, and to scorn to make use of information obtained in so disreputable a manner. Captain Priestley's letter in his brother's behalf had better never been written. It not only states the facts very differently from the account given by his brother to the club, but it sets up an apology for Colonel Priestley's conduct, which, if it were to be received, would make it impossible for any man, not to say gentleman, to hold her Majesty's commission. The mistake of Major Fitzgerald throughout the whole affair is that he tendered what, we regret to confess, is rightly described as "an abject apology."

Colonel Priestley, relieved of his duties in the Commissariat Commission, has gone to Dugshai, and we believe that, up to the present moment Sir Hugh Rose is determined to acknowledge him. Not only so, but it is said there is some ground for the fear that there are persons, who have not considered it beneath them to violate the laws of society and honour, by reporting to head quarters the private opinions and remarks of officers in Calcutta. If this be true, henceforth no club, no mess, no private gathering in which there are officers, not even the Viceroy's own table, is safe from espionage. If it be not true-and we cannot believe that the hero of Central India would encourage the most detestable of all characters, the spy-then it becomes Sir Hugh Rose, and that speedily, to convince the world that, while Major Fitzgerald has a perfect right to his own opinion, that opinion is hasty and unwarranted. We commend to his study the farewell address of Sir Charles Napier to the Indian army, in which that general, after castigating the vices of officers who drink, gamble, get into debt, and follow licentiousness as they would lay siege to a fort, said, "I have not sought for this information from officers."-Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS

JUBBULPORE, August 23 .- The Central Provinces are certainly improving wonderfully under Mr. Temple, who has shown himself eminently adapted for his position. His report lately submitted shows that he is eager for the welfare of the provinces under his management, and anxious for reform in matters where it is much needed. Especially has he turned his attention to the allimportant subject just now, the "development of internal resources," about which many others talk so much and do so little. He has seen that, without internal communication, the most fertile and flourishing district is helpless alike for export or import or even for internal trade, and therefore he has devoted all his energies to afsoldiers when they enlist cease to be men. ford the people of the Central Provinces some safe and not over expensive mode of transport. ing their goods to the market intended for them. Roads are being projected in all directions, and moreover we are to have what we very much want, a postmaster general, who will be responsible for the management of our postal arrangements. A carriage dåk has also been established between here and Mirzapore, which will be of the greatest possible utility to the community. I hear that an order has been issued for the introduction into Sumbulpore of Oordoo and Hindee in substitution for the Ooriah language. I suppose that this is as much as to say that the two former are to be the languages of the courts, and certainly it is high time some general language was appointed for the courts all over India as far as circumstances will permit.

Nepaul, August 19.—Intelligence has just been received from Thibet to the effect that in consequence of the recent disturbances the Delai Lama has fled. His authority has, I hear, been seized upon by the Settia Rye, who has, moreover, invited Jung Bahadoor to recognise him as a lawful prince, and promised to punish the murderer of the Ghoorka subject, to whose death I alluded some short time past, that is to say, if he can be found. The Maharajah has now another excellent opportunity of intervening in the affairs of Thibet, and I am certain he will not fail to use it to his own advantage. It is impossible even to guess what arrangements will be made between him and the new ruler, or whether he will take the part of the fugitive Lama, but one thing is certain, and that is that in either case something tangible will be exacted by him as a reward for his interference or recognition. August 23.—Some short time ago an Istahar appeared in the Benares Gazette inviting expert and active gunners, good marksmen, to enlist in the Goorkha army. This has attracted the attention of the British authorities here, and the Durbar has been called upon to explain whether the said advertisement was inserted with its sanction. As yet no answer has been received, but it is pretty clear that a notice so much in accordance with the Maharajah's wish to improve his army, could not have been promulgated without his connivance. Probably the gunners alluded to were intended for the benefit of the Thibetans in case of their proving obstinate. If all be true. however, that I hear-and I have no reason to doubt it-Jung Bahadoor has just done a very liberal thing. He has refused to receive back any of the articles sent by him to the International Exhibition, and has placed them at the disposal of the Royal Commissioners. It seems that he has still pleasant recollections of his stay in England, and the warm welcome he received there. The Maharaiah intends, I believe, very soon to leave Katmandoo for the Terai, at least, as soon as the Dushurah festival is over, in order to have some shooting. The cold weather is fast approaching here.

LAHORE, August 27.—Cholera has made its appearance in the jail here, and instructions have been issued to the officers in charge to discharge all the prisoners whose term of sentence may expire within the current month, in order to relieve the jail from being over-crowded. This, it is to be hoped, will in some measure tend to stay the ravages of the disease. I am happy to say, however, that this dreadful scourge has disappeared from the Hissar division; and the fever lately prevalent in the neighbourhood of Jhelum has also abated.

THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.-We learn from the Punjab frontier that cholera has been busy in the Trans-Indus districts during the last few months. It seems to have been brought down from Cabul by the Provindialis last autumn, and after running its course and apparently leaving the frontier to have come to us again from the Wuzeeree hills. Tank, the great resort of the trading Wuzeerees, is now suffering from it. The hill tribes have never been so quiet or behaved so well. The report of the Commander in-Chief on the frontier is now before the Governor-general. We trust the interests of the officers of this distinguished force will not be lost sight of. No men have such claims.

TEA CULTIVATION IN THE DEHRA VALLEY .-Much has been written describing the cultivation of tea by settlers in Assam, Darjeeling, Almora, and Kaugra. An account of a plantation in the Dehra Doon, specimens of the early produce of which are before us as we write, may not be uninteresting for purposes of comparison to planters elsewhere. The valley stretches from south-east to north-west for forty-five miles and in breadth varies from fifteen to twenty miles. With an acreage of 431,240 the population is about fifty to the square mile. In this exquisite spot, between the Sewaliks and the Himalayas, which recals some of the finest scenery of Europe, the Government experiment of tea cultivation has best sucseeded. Now, besides the Government gardens, which cover some 500 acres, settlers have planted out about 1,130 acres with tea, almost entirely in the Western Doon. The eastern part of the valley will not for many generations, until it has been well drained and cleared, be fit for the residence of man, or at least of the European. The great want in the Western Doon is water, of which there is plenty, but no proper attempts have been made to utilise it. We select the Annfield plantation as a fair example of what a single settler with a little capital may do. At the end of 1858 the proprietor obtained a grant of land covered with heavy grass jungle on a high and open situation. The soil best adapted for tea has been found to be that in which iron most predominates, a mixture of light reddish sand and loam destitute of chalk or lime, as unlike as possible to a clay soil and so drained that water will not lie about the plants. At the end of 1858 twenty maunds of seed were sown and one-anda-quarter acre was planted with seedlings from the Government gardens. In Nov. 1859 forty maunds more were sown at the same time, next year thirty more, and in 1861 forty-five more. The seed of the first three years has been planted out and covers seventy two acres. The first tea manufactured was in July, 1861, the produce of the seed sown in 1858 and 1859. A system of high cultivation was adopted, every inch of ground being trenched two and a half feet deep. process of transplanting from the seed-bed is both expensive and delicate, for care must be taken that no injury is done to the long tap roots. Manure was used in preparing the soil. When planted out the seedlings required watering every ten days the first year, and in the second once in five weeks, after which the water was applied only once or twice in the season. There were constant weeding and hoeing. In 1861 this resulted in 1,517 lbs. of fine Southong, Pouthong, and Bohea, and this year there will be 4,000 lbs. The cultivation might have been carried out much more cheaply at first, but in the Doon it is believed that high cultivation will pay best in the end. With other fifty-one maunds of seed forty acres more will be planted out in the cold season, and so on, till the whole 1,200 acres of the estate are covered. We can only say the plantation is likely to be very profitable, and the capital invested no more than an official may hope to save from his salary on retirement from the service. Thus, since the mutiny, the colonisation of the Doon is being carried out with a success that contrasts strangely with the failure of the first attempt in 1837. Then some 30,000 acres were granted on a forty years' lease after it had long been resisted by an officer who expressed the opinion that "an acquaintance with Europeans contaminated the Natives." But jungle abounded, fever broke out, labourers and settlers died, and the crops rotted for want of hands to gather them. We are wiser now.—Friend of India.
RUNGFORE, August 12.—We have had a failure

RUNGPORE, August 12.—We have had a failure in our tobacco crop this year, owing to the unfavourable weather experienced. I cannot tell you now to what extent the failure will go, as no returns have been sent in. That awful potentate, the Rajah of Cooch Behar, has been again thrusting himself into notice. This time he says his dignity has been grossly insulted. It appears that in the sunnud in which Government bestowed upon him and his successors the right of adoption, he was styled simply Rajah instead of Maharajah Bhoop Bahadhur.

Public Works .- The Government of India has issued the first of a most admirable Statement on the Public Works Budget for 1862-63, the current year, signed by Col. Strachey. The leading facts are these. The whole sum spent on public works in British India this year will be £11,002,900 of which one-half is English capital guaranteed at 5 per cent. In rupees the Imperial grants are 388 lakhs; the local grants, including the Income-tax 1 per cent., 147 lakhs; and the funds for Mysore which we administer as a trust at present, Rs. 12,89,000, or Rs. 5,35,79,000, all raised in India. Raised in England for railway and irrigation companies there is Rs. 5,52,50,000. We compile the following table, showing the chief details for each presidency and province and the minor administrations :-

The enormous charge for establishments, especially in Madras and the Punjab, the former of which spends 16½ lakhs out of 68, and the latter 13½ out of 51, calls forth as severe comments from the Supreme Government as we have ever made. Altogether this statement is most flattering to the honesty, the ability, and the benevolence of the Government of India. No other ruling power on earth could spend upwards of eleven millions sterling on public works annually, or would spend it even if it could afford to do so. And when the time comes for the reproductive works to yield their return our finances will be even more prosperous than they have hitherto been gloomy.—Friend of India.

SIMLA, August 24 .- A late number of the Friend of India has an article on Indian fibres suitable for making paper, in which an extract is given from a report by Dr. Cleghorn on forest productions in the Himalayas, mentioning the eiber or inner-bark of a species of Daphne, as being used by the Kamas in Upper Kunawur and Thibet for the manufacture of paper. The discovery is not new, as I will show presently. The shrub in these ranges is the D. mucronata. It affects the forest tracts, seldom growing in open ground unless in the vicinity of woods; but it is not very abundant—not sufficiently so to be of use in supplying the want of materials for paper at home. I doubt even if Sikkim and Nepaul, which boast of three varieties of Daphne, one or two attaining a large size, could aid the home market materially beyond one year's supply, as the process of barking the trees and shrubs would kill them, and half-barking, or stripping from one side only, would unfit them for another operation for some years. In Kumaoon and Gurhwal there are, I believe, two species of Daphne; in the former district, paper is made from the bark, which is sown into bags for hold son.

Our Daphne is rarely ing rice and other grain. found five feet high, and not thicker than a stout walking-stick, it bears a small white star-shape flower, which comes out in October and November, and continues through frost and snow until the early spring. The seed vessel is a small red pod, not unlike a dwarf capsicum. 1857, Captain D. Briggs, then in charge of the Thibet road, sent some of the bark to the Secretary to the Agricultural Society, Calcutta; but I believe the quantity was too small to admit of its being tested, and the mutiny called Captain B. away on military duty. It was not known to him, nor even to the late Deputy-commissioner, Lord William Hay, that tolerably good paper was made of the Daphne within twelve miles of Simla, but not for sale. Some years ago, whilst on a visit to the Bhujoe Rana, I noticed the paper in use by his moonshees, and recognised it as being the same description as I had seen sold at Lucknow under the denomination of Nepaul paper. A few families of Kutnowlie, a hamlet on the southern spur of Shali, where the Rana has a summer residence, have acquired the art of making this paper; but whether from the Lamas or from Goorkahs of the old Nusseeree Battalion, I cannot at present say. It is only made for durbar use, although it would find ready sale in our bazaars and elsewhere. The open sheets are 26 inches by 19; these are folded into four parts. I enclose three specimens of Daphne paper-one from Kumaver, one from Kotgurh, made by a Lama formerly attached to the Church Mission School, and one from Kutnowlie; the last mentioned being the best of the three in colour and texture. I could send a fourth made in Kunawnur, but it is coarse and dark as the sample from Kotgurh. If made stouter, it would answer well for port-fire paper. Any of your readers who are curious about Daphne paper will find an account of the manufacture in the Asiatic Society's Journal for January, 1852, or in the Agricultural and Horticultural Society's Journal for the first quarter of 1838. The Museum in Park street, Calcutta, used to contain a sheet of Nepaul paper about thirty feet long, and nearly three in width. For the information of your sporting readers, I may add, that the late Mr. Wemyss, as good a shot as could be met with in his day, used, when collector of Cawnpore, to make up his own shot cartridges of several rolls of fine Nepaul paper, and frequently declared them as good as Eley's best. Nepaul paper can be purchased cheap and good

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE HOOGHLY. -- We (Englishman) regret to have to report a very dis tressing accident which occurred on the morning of the 6th September, by the upsetting of a police beauleah conveying a party of gentlemen on board the Oriental Inland Steam Navigation Company's new steamer Ganges, which was lying off Prinsep's Ghaut, ready to start on a short trial trip down the river. The party consisted of Messrs. T. E. B. Judge, S. B. Coe, W. B. Walls, - Harper H. Clarton, C. T. Milner, H. Mead, -J. B. Roberts, and Captain Leisk. A tremendous tide was running, and at the first attempt the boat did not succeed in reaching the steamer, being carried below by the current. She then came in shore, and went a head of the steamer. On reaching the steamer's bow no rope seems to have been ready, and instead of dropping astern of the paddle-box, an attempt was made to make her fast on the bow with a slight rope, which broke instantly, and the tide swept the boat away from the side of the steamer. The manjee appears to have lost all presence of mind, and endeavoured to sweep the boat in again, bringing her diagonally under the front of the paddle-box, when the force of the current completely capsized her in an instant, the majority of the party being actually under the boat, which drifted away bottom up. One gentleman, we believe Mr. Clarton, made a desperate jump at the moment of her turning over, and succeeded in retaining his hold upon the paddlebox. Two dinghees put off immediately for the struggling party in the water, followed as quickly as possible by the jolly-boat from the steamer and others who witnessed the accident. Eventually, six of the gentlemen were found to have been saved, the unfortunate sufferers being Mr. T. E. B. Judge, solicitor, Mr. Henry Mead, the editor of the Hurkaru, and Mr. Stanley B. Coe. Mr. Mead's body has been recovered, but, up to this hour, we believe neither of the others have been found. Mr. Mead was in the cabin of the boat and was unable to get out of it. Mr. Judge was known to be an excellent swimmer, and we therefore conclude that he too must have been in some way entangled with the boat, or that it was he who is said to have been struck by the paddle-box in the collision. The agent of the company, Mr. Besemere, at once countermanded the trip, and set on foot every possible means for the ascertaining the actual results of the sad accident, and for the recovery of the sufferers.

A DIVORCE COURT is about to be established in Calcutta, and will be presided over by Sir M. Wells, on whom most of the labour of initiating the recent charges in the procedure of the Courts has devolved. The work of the new Court will be very light, and entirely confined to Europeans.

RUMOUNED APPOINTMENTS.—The Mojussilite reports the rumour that Lieut.-Col. Johnstone, C.B., at present Officiating Adjutant-General of the Army, will be appointed Deputy Adjutant General of the Royal Artillery, with the Commander-in-Chief; and that Colonel Huyshe is most likely to be selected as one of the new Inspectors of Artillery. Brigadier Swinley is said to have declined the appointment. So long as Colonel Huyshe is engaged in the Commissariat Commission, Colonel Tombs, C.B., is to officiate in the new appointment.

REBEL BANDS.—Letters from the Bhopal territory announce the final dispersion and flight of the rebels from that State; but accounts from Central India mention that the British force sent against the rebels in the neighbourhood of Bosoda had only succeeded in driving them across the frontier into Bhilsa; and the detachments, which by the latest advices at Raiseen, had been permitted to return to their head-quarters, we suppose to recommence their operations against the rebels next month, when the season for military movements opens.

MAJOR JOHNSON will return to Meerut, and resume his old appointment as Assistant Adjutant-general of Artillery. The rumour of the departure of Brigadier Swinley, of the Artillery, commanding at Meerut, for England in October, is unfounded.

Manchester Goods in Demand.—In a journal of missionary tours in the Christian Observer Mr. Sherring says that in Fyzabad the demand for Manchester goods is greater than for cloths of native manufacture. He was told by severall of the sellers that if a house were erected for their exhibition the sale would be much promoted thereby. This suggestion should be carried out in all the important cities of India. The English goods sold in Fyzabad are brought mostly by the way of Mirzapore and Cawnpore. After leaving Calcutta they made a detour of seven or eight hundred miles before reaching their destination. This distance might be much shortened were a good road to be made uniting Oude with Behar.

AYODHA.-A missionary describes the old city of Ayodha, which gives Oude its name, where as many as 400,000 people at a time attend the melas. It contains little besides temples, and seems to be as dull and solemn as a cathedral town in England. It is the birth-place of Ram as Muttra is of Krishna. Human Garbi is a strongly-built fort and temple, ascended by a long succession of stone steps. It is loopholed for musketry, and its lofty tower commands a con siderable part of the city. Its head priest is a man of much importance, as he holds under his authority several hundreds of able-bodied, and if need be, desperate faqirs. This man rendered excellent service to the Government during the rebellion. He sends out his fagirs two hundred at a time, who traverse the country far and wide, exacting not less than a pice from every house The prestige of this temple and they visit. thereby of Hinduism is thus maintained, and the revenues of the monastery are at the same time augmented.

LORD ELGIN AND THE VOLUNTEERS .- The Governor-General has given his sanction to the formation of another volunteer rifle corps in Calcutta, and as soon as 240 efficient members are enrolled, and the rules and regulations of the corps approved of by Government, the latter will be prepared to furnish to all the efficient members long Enfield rifles with accoutrements and ammunition. as also butts for practice. The practice grounds belonging to the Government on the Budge-Budge Road and at Dum-Dum will, subject to the approval of the Commander-in-Chief, be open to them, when not in use by H.M.'s regiments. The volunteers will be allowed to elect a commandant from amongst the officers in Calcutta not employed on milltary duty, subject to the approval of the Government, who will appoint an adjutant and inspector of musketry, as also a serjeant and two non-commissioned officers as drill instructors-all to receive staff pay from The Governor-General espethe Government. cially commends the public spirit which has in duced so large a number of gentlemen to come forward for a third time, with the object of establishing a permanent volunteer corps in Calcutta.

CHOLERA.—Accounts from the Upper Provinces announce, on the whole, a gradual decrease in the prevalence and severity of the cholera; for, whilst it has in some cases appeared in stations hitherto unvisited, it has, in the larger proportion, abated much in the number of those attacked, and in the virulence of its type. At Gwalior its appearance amongst the Europeans in the fort has caused the brigadier commanding to remove these troops into the Phool Bagh, replacing them with the 41st Native Infantry. At Bhopal the disease is still prevalent, but with few deaths, and in a milder form. As the cold weather in the Upper Provinces will commence with next month, it may be safely assumed that the cholera has done its worst for this year.

The Garrows.—The disturbers of our Eastern frontier seem to be still astir; if indeed they have ever of late been quiet, of which there is much reasonable doubt. We learn from Nowgong that a suspicious body of garrows have been seen making their way through the forests and jungle, from Jynteah towards the Dukhin Khola hat: and that Lieutenant Wheler, commanding an out-post detachment in those parts, had despatched a body of sepoys towards the frontier to get intelligence of, and, if possible, intercept and attack them.

AGRICULTURAL PROSPECTS OF THE PUNIAR -The Englishman is glad to hear, from almost every part of the Punjab, that the prospects of an abundant harvest are such as to warrant an assurance that both khureef and subea crops will be larger than they have been since 1857. The breadth of land sown in all directions is said also to exceed that of any previous year. Many of what are in that province called rukhs (reserved lands) have been broken up by those to whom they belong, the Government being, however, the great holders, and there is a great desire manifested in all directions to purchase those which are not private property, for cultivation. It is said that cotton, unfortunately not so good and clean as it ought to be, is being exported in considerable quantities to Kurrachee, and our correspondent estimates the probable amount for this year at seventy thousand maunds, or two thousand five hundred tons. This is pretty well, seeing that cotton has hitherto been imported into the Puniab from the East. In the former years the cultivators are said to have realised £500,000 extra by the sale of wheat; now they are likely to reap another most unexpected profit from cotton, as the price has risen from seven, eight, and nine rupees per maund, to from sixteen to nineteen rupees; the difference on the whole crop will be profit over and above that of ordinary years. No wonder we hear that the Punjab agriculturist is rapidly becoming independent of his banker, and taking the management of his own money into his own hands.

THE "LABARIM" RUPPES - A writer in " Chos. son and Woodhall's Miscellany," who had an interview with the Maharajah of Cashmere at Jummoo, confirms in all particulars our account of the origin of the Labarum symbols on the local rupee. The visit was paid to Golab Singh in the time of Lord Hardings. He summoned a pundit, who read an old MS. to prove that Christianity prevailed in these hills 150 years after the death of Jesus Christ. He said he felt assured that many years would not elapse before the land would be Christianised; and that he had, at the suggestion of the son of Anund Mussel. an ordained minister, connected with the Church Missionary Society at Delhi, Agra, and Meerut, recently in his confidential service as a tutor. added the symbol of the Cross, with the letters "I.H.S.," to the inscription on his coinage (the Hureesingee rupee, worth ten annas) .- Friend of India.

THE BANK OF BENGAL has reduced its rates to a uniform 5 per cent. on loans, and 6 per cent. on discounts. Money has seldom been so abundant in both India and England. At the meeting of the directors, on the 4th September, a further reduction of the rate of interest was made to the extent of ½ per cent. on discount loans, which stands now at 4½ per cent.; and the margin on Government paper was also reduced, the Bank now advancing 90 instead of Rs. 85 on Rs. 100 of the 4 per cent. stock, Rs. 100 instead of 98 or 5 per cent. stock, and 106 instead of 104 on 5½ per cent. stock, the relative values of the several denominations of paper being about 95, 1054, and 113.

KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY .- The Englishman gives circumstantial details of that part of the Kirwee prize money which was made over to the Allahabad Treasury in July, 1859, and of which 61 lakhs have ever since been bearing interest at 5 per cent. The whole amounts to Rs. 33.13.987. believe Messrs. Hamilton and Co. received at least 35 lakhs for the booty which they sold, and thus the whole prize is about 60 lakhs. It had been almost decided to allow Sir H. Rose's force to share with Sir G. Whitlock's column, when an equally good claim was made out for the columns under Roberts and Smith. This again checked progress, and the Madras claimants have been so active in writing on the subject that once more the scale has turned in their favour.

CAPTAIN R. W. CHAMBERS, of the late 11th N.I., has been nominated by the General Officer commanding at Meerut to act as Pension Paymaster at that station, in the place of Captain O. Hamilton, now at the Presidency on his way to England on medical certificate.

SMALL-POX AT DARJEELING .- The Englishman learns by letters from Darjeeling that a serious visitation of small-pox has spread amongst the natives of the district, attributed to the presence of a number of Nepaulese inoculators, who have come into that portion of our territories to practise their fatal vocation. He is also informed that the superintendent of Darjeeling discourages inoculation, as he considers that it has spread the small-pox throughout the district subject to his jurisdiction.

MAJOR B. P. LLOYD, who has done well in Ajmere, succeeds the late Major Pinkney as commissioner of Jhansie. Captain J. Davidson, the first assistant, succeeds Major Lloyd.

CENTRAL ASIA.—For some time no information has been received of the movements of Dost Mahomed and his force, on their march against Herat, as they are now off the direct line of com-munication. The Lahore and Agra journals now state that the Ameer had left Subzwar and had advanced to within one march of Herat, to Moghulan, where an engagement took place between the Heratees and the Ameer's advanced guard. The Lahore journal says the Affghans kept their ground as the Ameer immediately sent forward 2,000 cavalry in support, and followed rapidly with the main body, which united with the advanced force at Adershikum, and the whole marched together to the banks of the Kuz river, which was reached on the 21st July. The Agra journal states, on the contrary, that the Ameer was compelled to retreat with great loss, and that several Khans fell in the battle. The accounts probably refer to two different engagements, since the dates differ, the Lahore account being up to 21st July, the Agra letter to 9th August. The Wullee of Herat, it is stated, has made every preparation to resist the Ameer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

RANGOON, August 30 .- A fortnight hence the Chief Commissioner starts on his third visit to the Burmah capital. He proceeds in a river steamer, accompanied by a flat, both of which he will take all the way with him. The steamer is armed, but the Chief Commissioner takes no escort with him, except a few military officers and a photographer. The King is said to be calculating on the abolition of our frontier duties, and in order to take advantage of the increased trade which is sure to follow such a measure has sent for two powerful river steamers from Glasgow, each of which is to cost him Rs. 1,25,000. He has also ordered a sea steamer, which is to ply in the Bay of Bengal. If he continues to monopolise all the chief products of his country, he will be the only one who will reap much advantage from the freer intercourse between the two countries which will follow upon a treaty. We can hardly stipulate for the abandonment of these monopolies, and yet any treaty which leaves the subject untouched will be a failure in a commercial point of view. The mercantile community of Maulmain have been having a correspondence with their commissioner, and expressing their discontent at being allowed only a third share of the one recorder that is to be appointed to British Burmah. They consider that there is ample work for one Recorder at Rangoon, and suggest that a second should be allowed to Maulmain and Akyab. They say, "Our aspirations were, and are, for a man trained in the law, who should sit in permanence here." They will have a large portion of Dr. Clarke's time and attention-what more can they require? They further suggest that in the event of a second recorder being appointed for Maulmain and Akyab, a High Court of Appeal might be formed by the two recorders sitting with the Chief Commissioner, to receive appeals from the recorders and other Courts. They request that the assistant recorder may be selected from the officers of the local Commission, as they consider it important that that officer should be one who is not unacquainted with the people, and one of whom they have had some experience. The Commissioner of the Tenasserim division concurred with the mer-chants in thinking that one recorder is not sufficient for the whole of British Burmah, but does not approve of the suggestion about the High Court of Appeal, as he considers there should be only one appeal from the recorders' decisionsviz., to the Privy Council. The assistant recorder is, he states, to be appointed from among the local Commission. The Kalagouk project is being proceeded with; extensive clearances have been made, and roads marked out by a detachment of convicts from Maulmain, who are under the orders of Captain Fraser and his two assistants. Of course, no one who knows anything about the locality anticipates that the place will ever be useful as a sanitarium; but Captain Fraser no doubt considers that as he is likely to have to spend the greater portion of the next three or four years on this little island, it behoves him to make it as comfortable and civilised as possible. He was very fortunate in finding a supporter of his views in Dr. Macpherson, a peripatetic inspector general of hospitals, who was wandering about these parts in search of some materials for a report, and who jumped at the idea of a new sanitarium as likely to be a taking subject for him to work The Government have adopted the upon. scheme propounded by these authorities, and are carrying it out in earnest. It appears from the Government Gazette that they have actually stipulated with the Calcutta and Burmah Steam Navigation Company for their steamers on the Rangoon and Singapore line to call in at Kalagouk. After all the quarrying operations for the Alguada Light House are completed, and after a vast amount of money had been expended in making the island habitable, the scheme will no doubt be quickly abandoned, and the island left to its primative denizens, the curlews. The "City of Dalhousie" project ought to have been a warning to Government to keep clear of enterprise like this upon this coast; that "Venice of the East," that was to be, is now entirely deserted and covered with jungle. The five lakhs of rupees which were expended on it have been swallowed up without leaving a trace behind .-Englishman.

HYDERABAD, August 19 .- About four days ago two Mussulmans and three Mahratta Brahmins were taken up by the kutwal. Their examination was taken by the minister, and they were sent to the kutwal's prison. So far my information may be depended upon. What follows is common rumour. The examination by the minister in the case of these parties has given importance to it. The Mussulmans are from Delhi, and though in the guise of religious faquirs, their bearing in the presence of the minister is said to have been dignified. One of them is said to be called Ferozbukht, which would indicate him to be a Delhi Shahzada. The three Brahmins are old inhabitants of this place, and though not of any note, not unknown. The minister's personal examination of the case and their imprisonment at the kutwal's,—to whose prison none but the vilest malcfactors are sent,—give room for the surmise that they are criminals of no small magnitude, either from the nature of their crime or by the position of some of the parties. It is also said that there is no other allegation against them than that of having been engaged in the late conspiracy of the Brahmin Rao Sahib, with many aliases .- August 21: Information was received here that a man from Lucknow, Junjudge of ripe experience and mature judgment, a waher Hoosain, who had made over nine English persons (among whom was Mr. Hart) whom he | humanity, all practical Shikars who can possibly had captured to the Begum, by whom they were slaughtered, was in charge of the Collectorate of Koppauldroog, appointed to it, not by the Nizam's Government, but by the talookdar in charge of West Raepore. A party of the Contingent Horse from Lingsoogoor was sent to apprehend him: he got intelligence of the movement and fled from Koppauldroog the day before the arrival of the horse, on a mare borrowed of the puttel of that place on the pretence that he was going to buy timber. We are unfortunate in our attempts to apprehend principals in the first instance, and in the next to prevent their escape, which I ascribe to the sympathy of the leading members of the community with the rebels, and to the carelessness of all. The apprehension of this Junwaher Hoosain, made conspicuous by his riding a mare, cannot be difficult if the talookdars lend themselves zealously to his capture. The Nizam's Government—that is the Nizam's minister is making strenuous efforts to trace the circulation of the jowaree cakes to its source.

Whether the zeal of the servants corresponds to that of the chief executive officer I do not know-I should say not; and I do not expect that any reliable information will be procured by the search. We already hear of some five or six sources-from that very circumstance taking away credibility from all-to which the circulation of the cakes has been traced; though there may be difficulty to trace the cakes to its origin, there can be none to repress their future circulation, which might be provided by every man being charged with a penalty proportionate to his means, from eight annas to a thousand rupees, who had assisted in the purpose. The pretence for doing so is that they were told the sahib bahadoor had ordered it. Their prompt obedience might easily be tested by the sahib bahadoor directing them to make a propitiatory offering of eight annas on his account at the nearest Mussulman shrine, or Hindoo temple, which soever might suit their convenience; or by issuing any order just as easy, or if possible, easier still of execution. The obe dience to the mandate would be but small. 22nd: I am happy to have proved a false prophet; Junwaher Hoosain was followed by a naik, an especial appointment of Salar Jung, was overtaken and captured in the Dharwar district, A reward was offered by the Indian Government for this man's apprehension .-Englishman.

EMBEZZLEMENT .- In consequence of a serious deficit, amounting to no less a sum than nine thousand rupees, which has appeared in the books of the P. and O. Company's Office in Madras, an application for a warrant to arrest the cash-keeper was made at the town police on the 9th September to the presiding magistrate, Mr. Clarke, by the Company's agent, Mr. Pitcher. From Mr. Pitcher's information, it appeared that the cashkeeper, Poonasawmy Moodelliar, disappeared on the 29th August. No suspicions, however, would seem to have been excited by his absence until the 8th, when some members of his family came to the office to make inquiries about him. Mr. Pitcher, on hearing that the cash-keeper had not appeared at his own house for some days, immediately proceeded to examine the books. result was a discovery of a defalcation of about Rs. 9,000. On the 9th a warrant was issued by Mr. Clarke for the cash-keeper's apprehension, on the application of Mr. G. B. Johnstone, under sec. 408 of the Penal Code. Mr. Pitcher only assumed charge of the office in the absence of the Company's agent, Mr. Loch, on the 29th August, the day on which the cash-keeper disappeared. It is supposed that the cash-keeper has gone to Pondicherry, but there is but little doubt of his speedy apprehension.

A MAN-EATER .- We observe in the Bangalore Herald an advertisement, published by the com missioner in Mysore, offering a reward of Rs. 500 for the destruction of a man-eating tiger, which has justly become the terror of a portion of the Nugger division; having killed, and, we presume, eaten nearly two hundred persons within the avail themselves of the facilities last eighteen months past. This tiger appears to rival in its carnage that memorable one haunting the jungles surrounding the Tapoor Pass, on the road to Salem, which was the terror of the adjacent country many years ago, and which long evaded

BRITISH SUBJECTS IN CHINA.-A series of despatches from her Majesty's Minister in China, bearing on an outrage committed upon a party of British subjects at Woo-chang-foo, on the 14th May, are published in last night's Gazette. It appeared that the "foreigners," seeing some kind of military review or examination going on in a parade ground, passed down towards it. A large crowd having been assembled round the competitors, the party entered a pavilion in which the prefect was seated, but had only been there a few minutes when a rush was made in the direction of the pavilion by the Chinese, who poured a shower of brickbats into the building. The prefect endeavoured to allay the fury of the mob, but without avail; the British, therefore, beat a hasty retreat, pursued by some hundreds of Chinese, under a shower of stones, by which several of them were bruised. Her Majesty's Consul at Hankow, in relating the circumstances of the outrage, took occasion to remark on the probability of the mandarins having instigated the attack by way of making a demonstration of their dislike to foreigners visiting Woo-chang. The Hon. F. W. A. Bruce, in reply, regrets that such an insinuation as that the attack was secretly prompted by the authorities was made, alludes to the sensitiveness of the Chinese during the examination periods, and concludes as follows :therefore think that it would be well, during the examinations, to advise her Majesty's subjects to avoid these crowds, for it is very difficult to obtain redress for such outrages; and the gratification of mere curiosity, and the assumption that there may be a scheme to curtail ultimately the rights of foreigners, do not warrant us in disregarding a warning that, in China, is not primá facie unreasonable. For the maintenance of proper relations depends on meeting the authorities in a spirit of compromise, when what they propose in view of the state of the country is reasonable, and in resisting them, firmly but temperately Earl Russell, in a Foreign-office when it is not." despatch of 7th October, expresses his entire con currence in Mr. Bruce's views with regard to the discretion to be observed by British subjects who avail themselves of the facilities provided by treaty

Barrack Conservancy Arrangements.

Adjt. Gen.'s Office, Head Qrs, Poona, Sept. 6.— No 911.—Reports from medical officers of different ranks are constantly laid before the C. in C. respecting the inadequate conservancy arrangements of sta-tions, which he is unable to reconcile with what may be expected from the establishments sanctioned by Government.

H.E. would remind general officers commanding divisions, and brigadiers commanding districts and stations, that it is the peculiar duty of the Assistants Quartermaster general and brigade majors to make Quartermaster general and brigade majors to make themselves personally acquainted with and to supervise conservancy arrangements, and to insist upon their being carried properly into effect, under the orders of their respective superiors.

It is very true that the establishments are under the Superintendents of Bazars, and that the immediate directions should issue from them, but the superior of convergency is no establishments.

pervision of conservancy is an essential pertion of the Quartermaster general's department, which, through the officers commanding divisions and bri-gades, is accordingly responsible to the C. in C. and the Government.

On the occasion of all tours of inspection, it is requested that the Assistants Quartermaster general OFFICERS.

Other matters requiring notice, such as the quality and quantity of water, the market rates of labour and provisions, the expansion of sudder bazars, the value of sites and grourd in the latter should not escape notice, but, on the contrary, should be carefully investigated and commented on. In the same manner the effect given to the orders of Government by the several departments in the supply of comforts to the troops, such for instance as the date of issue of Khuskhus tatties where they may be allowed, the concessions made on account of reading-rooms, workshops, gardens, supply of materials and tools, &c., should all receive attention, and be touched on in the report, which should be a separate document for aschiptation. each station.

The report is to be made in duplicate,—one for the information of the general officer of the division, and the other to be forwarded by him to head quarters. #### THE FRENCH STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

THE long-talked-of line of French steamers to India and China is at length ready to commence operations. The first departure from Marseilles takes place at two P.M. on the 19th of the present month, and on the same day of each succeeding month a vessel will sail from that port for Calcutta and Shanghai. The dates of arrival at the various resting places on the outward voyage will be, wind and weather permitting, something after this manner. Messina will be reached on the 22nd, when a few hours' delay will be caused by taking in coals, and Alexandria some time in the course of the 25th. The transit across Egypt will average about thirty hours, so that the corresponding steamer on the other side will start in the afternoon of the 27th. Aden will be gained on the 3rd, and Point de Galle between the 11th and 13th. At Ceylon passengers for Calcutta will be transferred to another boat, which will reach its destination on the 20th, touching at Pondicherry on the 15th, and at Madras on the 16th. The China passengers, however, will pursue their voyage in the same vessel that brought them from Suez, and may be expected at Hong Kong between the 26th and 28th, calling at Singapore on the 18th to the 20th, and at Saigon on the 21st to the 23rd. At Hong Kong the passengers for Shanghai embark on board another steamer, and arrive at that port in about four days. On the homeward voyage the dates of departure are as follows :-- Shanghai, 21st; Hong Kong, 26th; Saigon, 1st; Singapore, 4th; Calcutta, 3rd; Madras, 7th Pondicherry, 7th; Point de Galle, 12th; Aden, 21st; Suez, 27th; Alexandria, 29th; and Messina, 3rd; Marseilles being gained on the 5th. The company seems at present to have only six steamers ready for service. These are the Imperatrice, 500 horse-power; Donnai, 500; Cambodge, 500; Alphée, 400; Erymanthe, 400; and the Hydaspe, 250, all screws. With regard to the cost of passage, there is little to choose between the Messageries Impériales and the Peninsular and Oriental Company, while time alone can decide which shall carry off the palm in point of comfort, accommodation, and good living.

THE GODAVERY.

WE propose to summarise an exceedingly able memorandum by Colonel Bruce on the projected works for the improvement of the navigation of the Godavery, and for which we are indebted to a recent number of the Calcutta Englishman. The project as a whole embraces seven rivers, the Godavery, Wur-

Sebbery, and Pyne Gunga, but the latter | good platform ferry-boats to take carts across four are of comparatively slight importance. The Wurdah, which rises in the Baitool district to the west of Nagpore, is joined by the Wurna at Suett, about eighteen miles to the south of Hinghunghat. The falls of Zoouraie are situated at this confluence, and below them stands the village of Chuhmunder, the point at which the engineering operations will terminate. The Wurdah then flows on till it receives the waters of the Pyne Gunga a short distance above Chandah, and the united streams continuing their course under the name of Prenheta fall into the Godavery a little below the station of Sironcha. About half way down the Prenheta occurs the third or Dewalamurry Barrier, extending in a curve of nearly fifty miles, in the middle of which the Wyne Gunga effects its junction with the former river. Between Sironcha and the sea the Godavery is joined by the Indrawatty and other tributaries, and thirty miles below that station the second or Enchampally Barrier is met with. The first or Sinteral Barrier is eighty miles lower down, and between that point and the sea no serious obstructions are to be apprehended during certain seasons of the year. On the 27th of June Colonel Bruce started from Nagpore with the intention of taking boat at the earliest opportunity. It was not, however, until he reached Wurroda, twenty miles above Chandah, that he found water enough to float even a raft drawing only twelve inches. After encountering many difficulties through the shallowness of the stream, he at length reached the village of Seerpoor, fifteen miles above Kirmirree, where he embarked in the little steamer Mayflower. Thus far the Wurdah proved to be a tortuous and sluggish stream, the bed "consisting of a succession of pools and runs, the water descending into basin after basin (some of them of considerable extent and great depth) over intermediate shoals:" in width it varied from 150 to 250 yards. Crossing over from Kirmirree to Saligoun on the right bank, Colonel Bruce travelled across the desolate jungly tract lying within the arc of the third or highest barrier, and at Mogelee went on board the steamer Queen. Along the chord of this curve—thirty miles in length—a tramway is being constructed, but of so slight and temporary a character that it is not likely to be of much use, though in the long run quite as expensive as a good metalled road. Of far greater utility would be a metalled road, which should be continued from Chandah to Mogelee, at the foot of the barrier, a distance of seventy miles. In that case, the produce of the Nagpore, or upper Nizam's territory, would be conveyed by carts direct to the latter point, instead of being first carted to Chandah, thence conveyed by boat to Saligoun, to be there landed and taken along the tramway to Mogelee. Besides, it is only during the months of July, August, and September, that the Wurdah can safely be reckoned upon as navigable, so that goods would not only be transshipped, but would also be liable to detention from want of water. By means of the road. however, the bulk of the export produce for the Godavery route would be carted to Mogelee in March, April, May, and June before the rains set in, thus saving much time and avoiding much inconvenience. During the unless by tracking. Until adequate means at Kirmirree, where the road is intersected by the river. He likewise suggests that light rafts should be constructed resting each upon a couple of light iron pontoons for the conveyance of merchandise down the barrier during the rains, "and as soon as they reached the lower terminus they could be taken to pieces, loaded into a flat, and towed up river by one little steamer, which might be kept up for this sole purpose." Between the third and second barriers the navigation is open for fully eighty-rive miles during four months in the year. The chord of the second barrier, from Pilmellah to Daodula, is only eighteen miles, along which a tolerable tramway has been laid down, and will shortly be ready for traffic. The river between the second and first barriers is nearly three quarters of a mile in width, and only in one or two places is any blasting required; the distance is about seventy miles, and was easily traversed by the Shamrock steamer in the course of a day. The first barrier, which is only fifteen miles across, begins at Dumoogoodium, and terminates at Badrachellum, whence there is a clear run of 105 miles to Dowlaishwaram, accomplished by the Arthur Cotton also in about twelve hours. From Dowlaishwaram to the seaport of Coconada is thirty-two miles by the canal, and takes about the same time as the voyage from Badrachellum to the former place.

Thus the great line of water communication roposed is obstructed by three barriers, and runs as

Now Chandah is on the border of the cotton districts; therefore if the road was finished from Chandah to Mogelee, and there existed a bullock train establishment upon it, then the journey might be accomplished somewhat in this way:-

Colonel Bruce is, however, of opinion that too much stress has been laid upon the length of river navigation to be opened out, and not enough upon the importance of feeders to bring merchandise from the interior to the banks of the river. On some of the tributaries all that is wanted is to make towing paths along the face of the steep cliffs, as the violence of the current prevents boats from ascending dah, Prenheta, Wyne Gunga, Indrawatty, floods Colonel Bruce recommends the use of and channels of conveyance are provided, it is idle to look for an increased supply of cotton from the Nagpore territory. "All the carriage at present available is annually taken up," and the ryots naturally do not care to grow more than can find its way to market. It is even doubtful if they are yet aware of the present enhanced value of cotton. The native brokers and agents alone profit by the high prices now ruling, and no extension of cultivation is to be expected unless advances be made upon the spot by the agents of European houses, "and those agents will have to assume all responsibility from the time the produce is handed over upon the fields." Finally, Colonel Bruce strongly advocates the transfer of the Upper Godavery works-and, indeed, all the navigation works-from the fainéant Government of Madras to the Administration of the Central Very few persons, we suspect, will be disposed to question the wisdom of this proposition. Quite enough time having now been expended in writing and talking upon the subject of the Godavery, it is to be hoped that something will at last be done in a practical way.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collecturates, and the position and boundary of each Native Staty; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 6 ft. 6 in. high; 6 ft. 8 in. wide. £3; or, on cloth, in a case, £3. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-sequired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA committed.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE most gratifying intelligence received by the Bombay Mail of the 27th September is decidedly that which relates to the liberality of the Bombay community. This time native gentlemen have vied in generosity with the wealthiest European firms, at the same time enhancing the value of their subscriptions by the hearty expression of a genuine sympathy for the distress so nobly endured by our Lancashire operatives. A large meeting was held in the Town-hall on the 17th of last month, under the presidency of his Excellency the Governor, for the purpose of contributing to the relief of the sufferers, and nearly £11,000 were collected before the assembly dispersed. Of this handsome amount, £5,000 was subscribed in equal shares by the Hon. Rustomjee Jamsetjee and Cursetjee Furdonjgee Paruck, Esq. In all, no less than £25,000 are offered by the residents of Bombay alone for the support of their starving fellow-subjects in England-£10,000 being forwarded by the present mail. Similar good feeling has been manifested in other parts of India, and in the Upper Provinces we find the name of the Maharajah of Puttialla down for £1,000, and of the Rajahs of Jheend and Nabha each for £500.

It is likewise a pleasant task to draw attention to the chivalrous conduct of Mr. Walter Brett, editor and manager of the Englishman, in appealing to his readers to raise a fund for with great loss.

the benefit of the widow of his late rival and opponent, Mr. Henry Mead, drowned by the accidental upsetting of a boat. Mr. Brett has himself led the way by a liberal subscription. and his example has been so generally followed that £1,600 were subscribed in a few days. The proprietors of the Hurkaru have also acted in a very proper and open-handed manner, and throughout India the editors of the different journals, forgetting for a while their bitter personalities, have exhibited a kindly and sympathetic feeling for the relict of their departed brother.

The Priestly and Fitzgerald scandal continues to be much talked of in military circles, although the Commander-in-Chief has done his best to stifle discussion. His Excellency's remarks on the Mhow court-martial will be found elsewhere, and will be read with interest. Sir Hugh has also acted with commendable decision in punishing several officers mixed up with a disgraceful gambling fracas at Simla. Severe "wiggings" and remands to their respective regiments have been freely administered.

According to the latest accounts from Afghanistan, the Dost had closely invested Herat. and is by this time probably master of the place, notwithstanding the prediction of the Opinion Nationale that neither Russia nor Persia would ever permit "a vassal" of Great Britain to take possession of Furrah, much less of Herat.

However small the share of prize money allotted to the officers and men who actually recovered Delhi, their nominal Commander-in-Chief has no reason to complain of his own proportion of the booty. The sum of £11,000, it is said, has been paid on his account to his Calcutta agents—a noble reward for passive heroism. Like Malvolio, Sir Archdale Wilson has had greatness thrust upon him.

The apprehensions of a famine in the Deccan have been happily removed by recent and abundant falls of rain. From other parts of India nothing but favourable reports have been received.

Mr. Laing's reply to the Calcutta address of the 6th September appears in our present number. Any comments we may have to make we reserve for a future issue.

THE ACCIDENT IN CALCUTTA.

" In the midst of life we are in death " is a stern lesson often thrust before us in the crowded ways of human existence, and never more sternly than in the sad occurrence which cast a gloom over all Calcutta on Saturday morning. A group of strong and energetic men, in the prime of life, sound in health and in the full swing of active business pursuits, leave the shore in the midst of friendly congratulations, or in the debate of present enterprise or future projects. There is a momentary confusion with a breaking rope scarce sufficient to awaken attention, one sweep of the steering oar by a frightened manjee, a crash, a confused struggle in the water over in a minute or two-and there are widows in two houses in Calcutta, and young children fatherless almost before they have learnt to know their father, and a month hence there will be mourning in quiet and happy English homes, where mothers wail over their first-born upon whom their sun has gone down whilst it was yet noon-and all this by a moment's failure of judgment in a native boatman. The sympathies of all are engaged on behalf of the mourners bereaved by such a fearfully sudden catastrophe. Mr. Judge, young as he was, had won for himself a universal esteem, and in his profession well sustained the high reputation of the name and posi tion which he had inherited. So also poor young Stanley Coe will leave a great blank amongst the many friends his quiet kindly nature had secured for him, though he leaves none dependent on his exertions for their present support or future provision. But upon the widow of Henry Mead, and upon a large number of the Indian public, the heavy blow and the startling void of this sad visitation come with far more terrible force. There are very many who knew nothing but by name of the late Editor of the Hurkaru, whose light thought about the loss of a public servant will take the shape "we could have better spared a better man." But we believe, although we had no personal knowledge of him, yet there are far larger numbers who will sincerely sorrow for the genial humorist, the sparkling conversationalist, the amusing and fascinating companion whom they knew well as Henry Mead. "Alas poor Yorick we knew him; a fellow of infinite jest; of most excellent fancy." And even those whose animosities he had encountered in the position he held,one in the hot maintenance of which some enmities must be aroused,-even they will halt in their condemnation beside the grave which has yawned so suddenly in the path. De mortuis nil nisi bonum. To his honour be it said that in his public life his attacks were always bold and open, his strictures always fearless even if not always well indged. And the Indian public will miss the humour and the pungent satire with which he tickled the fancy of his friends, and scarified his foes, rightly or wrongly, still always amusingly. Well! this able and talented literary labourer, working for the public weal according to the light that was in him, was like too many another worker in the same uncertain field. Living in excitement, working for the day, he found sufficient for the day the evils thereof, and left the future to take care of itself. Looking forward only to some uncertain success in the future which seemed still to lie wide before him, in the fulness of his strong life he omitted to take even the common precaution of an assurance upon his life. And he is gone; and we are informed that his widow, thus awfully bereaved, is left with no provision of any kind whatever, either present or prospective. Now, we are not going to beg. There is no such thing in our mind. We simply point out to the public of India the position in which this unhappy lady stands amongst us. She has a clear claim upon us, and upon the public; for nowhere in the world has the press a stronger claim upon the public than in India, where the risks of the profession are enormous, and its prizes few and scanty. We appeal then boldly and in full faith to our public to aid us in what we look on as a The pressure is immediate; our

THE NEW POLICE IN THE PUNJAB.

The Punjab Police Report for 1861 has made its appearance. The new constabulary had been by the beginning of the year introduced into the Lahore and Umritsur Divisions, whence it was gradually extended, till by the middle of April, it had superseded the old police in all the divi-sions on this side of the Indus. Beyond that river, however, it has not gone, and we may supply an omission in Major Hutchinson's Report by saying that the reason for this is entirely political, the superior organisation and efficiency of the new force not being considered to compensate sufficiently for the disadvantage of a divided authority on the border. Perhaps when the frontier brigade of troops is placed under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief, and no collapse of frontier arrangements occurs in consequence of that innovation, district officers may be induced to try whether making over their police to the inspector general would really be such a very hazardous experiment.

Meanwhile what have we got on this side of the Indus, how does it work, and does it pay?
The European staff consists of an inspector general and his assistant, four deputy inspectorsgeneral, twenty-six district superintendents, and thirty-four assistants. The grade open-to both Europeans and natives is that of inspector, and numbers sixty three. Then there are 463 deputyinspectors, who have supplanted the old thanadars; 1,849 sergeants, and 11,000 constables. This is for twenty-six districts, containing an area of 76,000 square miles, and a population of thirteen millions, which gives one policeman to something over five square miles, and not quite 1,000 persons. Of the material of the force little is said in the report, the fact being that at present it is a rather heterogeneous mixture. Moolraj raised the standard of rebellion against the Council of Regency, and, triumphing in our tardy and vacillating measures, drew the whole Sikh army after him, there were four regiments that did not go. These regiments were in the force then sitting down before Mooltan, and with this force Edwardes was the senior political officer. He promised them continuous service among other things if they would only stand by him there. They did so, and though no one ever saw them in the "Army List," yet it is well known that Government, though rather reluctantly, ratified the subaltern's promise, and the regiments of Soobhan Khan, Sher Dil, Soorajmukhi, and Katarmukhi, remained embodied till last year. They wore red coats at first; "the line" took exception to this after a time, but Lord Dalhousie was so jealous of the integrity of the guarantee that he required the men's own consent before he allowed them to be turned into "Khaki." Soorajmukhi did not agree, and retained their red coats even after 1857 had brought the colour into disrepute. But the whirligig of time brings round stranger changes than that of the construction of a verbal promise, and, as Mr. Wilson thundered for retrenchment, the durbar regiments shrank into the new police. They are not the only military element in it, for there were several battalions and rissalas in the land of the Five Rivers—military police they were called—and these have melted into the new force also.

It is, therefore, not surprising to find, that, during the first year of such an amalgamation, and with officers mostly fresh from regimental duty, parade and drill should receive more than their due share of attention. The rest of the Punjab constabulary is composed of what was the ordinary thanna police, or rather of such portion of it as was required to complete the military transfers to the proper strength, and, as a whole, the force is quite as efficient for its

we hope a liberal response to our call. We shall and not altogether congenial. To claim for a body so constituted any marked success at first would be a blunder which the report judiciously avoids, but it does claim to escape the charge of failure, and it ascribes to outside causes the increase of crime, which, according to statistics, has taken place throughout the province. The famine is a ready scapegoat, and if that did not extend beyond the Sutlej, its effects did, both by raising prices in consequence of export, and by pushing on paupers to steal. Moreover, the increase of crime is observed also beyond the Indus, where the old police still survive, and therefore it could not be the fault of the new. This may be right or the statistics may be wrong, but the matter is not one to be decided by a mere array of figures. There are crimes which sometimes break out like epidemics in certain places, sometimes surge along a country like waves, and with the prevention of which the efficiency or otherwise of a police has nothing to do whatever. Are the roads safer? Is there generally a greater feeling of security? Are there fewer complaints of corruption on the part of the police—of their harrying and annoying the people? Is their night patrolling of towns so vigilant that private watchmen have disappeared?

> These points are not to be elucidated by pages of percentages and averages, and to only one of them does the report bring any evidence. On that one judgment must be entertained against the police, for they certainly seem to have been making a great many frivolous and vexations arrests. What else could be expected? This is something of the style of thing that has been going on. Constable (late sepoy) pacing ten steps backwards and forwards before Thanna-gate deputy-inspector (late subadar), enjoying hooka in Thanna cutchery: "Soobadar Sahib, here's a man says he has a complaint; shall I let him in?" Deputy-inspector: "Yes, let him in." To complainant: "Stole your bullock a week ago, did he? and has got it openly in the village at this moment. Here! who's next for duty? Go and seize that Budmash and the bullock, and bring them here." And two days afterwards, in the magistrate's court, it transpires that complainant had sold and delivered his bullock to the prisoner who had promised to pay so much cash and so much gram for it, but had defaulted a little in the matter of the silver. These mistakes will be rectified by degrees, and the sooner that the district officers, so far from showing any resentment at losing their police powers and patronage, have given the new rigime a cordial welcome. But in the next report the inspector general should tell us how many deputy inspectors are unable to write their own diaries, and how much the rate of insurance on goods in transit between Delhi and Peshawar has diminished. Opinions differ as to how the police can be best linked on to the population through the village chowkeedars. These latter are in some cases paid by the State, as when the settlement officer alienated a plot of land for the purpose or gave an assignment upon the revenue. frequently they are paid by the village, by a coss either upon houses or on ploughs, but however paid they are village servants, and are appointed by the villagers, subject to the district officer's confirmation. To vest the appointment in any other hands is to destroy village responsibility, and bring dissension into every hamlet. The power must remain as it is, and with it must remain the right of dismissal, so that the policeofficer finds himself exercising very little authority over the rural constabulary. But if his confirmation on appointment and his sanction to discharge were substituted for that of the deputy-commissioner, no further innovation would perhaps he necessary, and certainly the less that is made the better.

As regards the cost of the new police the report is silent. There is not an allusion to be found to rupees throughout the whole hundred and eight foolscap pages of which it consists. The omission is the more to be regretted because in every other respect elaborate comparative tables public duty. The pressure is immediate; our present duties as could be expected, considering are drawn out of the working of the working of the duty shall not be shirked, and to how large a section of it they are entirely new, old police. The new force, we believe, does cost about three times what was paid for the old, but | support Sooltan Jan's cause, and 15,000 more are if costs less than the old, plus the military battalions and rissalas. Comparisons, however, are of secondary consequence. What we want is positive results, efficiency, and economy combined-nothing of the former sacrificed to the latter, and the latter not spasmodically aimed at in the plains while it is systematically disregarded in the hills. On the whole the introduction of the new police into the Cis Indus districts of the Punjab has been an administrative success. The Lieutenant governor has the whole force at his command, an organised body, and can wield it with the same ease and beneficial results as a general his disciplined troops.—Priend of India.

HERAT.

At this moment, as since 1835, there is no more remarkable man in Asia than Dost Mahommed, Ameer of Cabul. Were a native historian to ske ch his life as a European would, putting out of view a'l those tests of character which are given by Christianity, he would be represented as combining in himself the heroic daring and love of independence which distinguish Garibaldi with the political wisdom and governing ability of King Leopold. Great both as a warrior and a ruler, greater still for a Mahommedan despot as one who learned early in life to rule his own spirit. what would not Dost Mahommed and his country have become had England been true to her character, had Burnes' policy been carried out instead of Sir W. McNaghten's! None of Dost Mahommed's predecessors have risen more rapidly to power than he, while none have retained it so long. The conquests of Zenghis Khan, of Kublai Khar, of Timour, of Baber, and of Nadir Shah were more extensive. But not one of these had learned the art so little known to an Asiatic of restraining his own passions, and each in his time became the victim of his own excesses. Yet Dost Mahommed has lived to the age of eighty, he has been a most faithful ally of the English, he has pursued a career of conquest and annexation in territories which we were pleased to see him thus rescuing from anarchy, and his eye has not become dim nor his natural strength abated. There is not one of his many sons, grandsons, and nephews able to defend his dominions, not one willing to fight for what may to-morrow belong to his rival. Yet with one foot in the grave the old man leaves his capital before the harvest has been gathered, and when the hot winds sweep along the arid deserts, he raises an imposing force, quickens slumbering zeal and directs military movements, and finally, after retaking Furrah and pressing back his opponent, he sits down before Herat.

To obtain accurate information of Dost Mahommed's movements since he left the usual route is difficult even for Government, although we have a Vakeel in his camp who is treated, as our agent, with all confidence. But comparing our own accounts with those which from time to time appear in the provincial journals, the position of affairs, according to the last intelligence, seems to be this. After taking Furrah by compromise with its Governor, as we predicted, and receiving large supplies on the reaping of the harvest, Dost Mahommed began his weary march of 150 miles over the Bukwa or desert to Herat, where Sooltan Ahmed Jhan had strengthened himself. There were sundry skirmishes of little importance between advanced detachments of the rival armies, as the Ameer drew near the city. In these the Ameer cannot have suffered much, as represented by some news writers, for it is certain that he succeeded in sitting down within a few miles of Herat. We are inclined to place some credit in a letter, a copy of which is now before us, addressed by a Candahar merchant to one of the chiefs of Dera Ismael Khan. That letter, dated 7th August, represents Herat as then invested by the Ameer with forty guns and 35,000 men, while Sooltan Jan holds the place with 7,000 of his own men, twenty guns, and some 4,000 Persians. Moreover, 10,000 Persians with 60 guns have reached Meshed to India.

said to be collecting in "Ghyne" with the same object. Now, much allowance must be made for reports which come from the rear of an army in the field, and notwithstanding all reports to the contrary we know that the Persians have hitherto abstained from all open interference. The Ameer has repeatedly declared to our Vakeel that he has no suspicions of Persia. But the matter is very different when Herat is really invested and likely to be annexed to Affghanistan as other Persian suzerainties have been. The Persians have never forgotten how they were baffled in their attempt to take the place, by a young English officer in 1838. The majority of the population, too, are Persian Shiahs, while there is no doubt that Persia has complained to our minister of the advance of the Ameer. The statement, if nothing else, is probable and suggestive. Every day should now bring us definite news.

The State of Herat was founded in 1818 by Shah Mahmood, on the extinction of the Dourani monarchy. Kamran, his son, and the nephew of the luckless Shah Shoojah, was master of the place in 1844. The principality extends a few miles to the north of the city, on the east to the Khash-rood half way to Candahar, and on the south it includes Seistan. Persia presses it on the west, and in 1840 took the valuable district of Ghorian from it. On evacuating Herat, on 27th July, 1857, the Persians placed its government in the hands of its present ruler, Sooltan Jan, the Ameer's nephew and a creature of their own. In October Colonel R. Taylor was sent from Bagdad to acknowledge him, and remained at Herat till March, 1858, when the Sirdar gave out that he had dismissed the Mission, having made up his mind to have nothing to say to Last April Sooltan Jan marched into Affghanistan as far as the Khash-rood, having taken Furrah, and returned finding that this step was premature, as there was no immediate prospect of the Ameer's death. As the son of the ruler who succeeded the great Wuzeer, Futteh Khan, Sooltan Jan considers himself the head of the Barakzais, next to his uncle the Ameer, and he has certainly the best chance of seizing the supremacy on Dost Mahommed's death, if he only temporises at present. There is reason to believe that he has secured the help of the Hazaras, the nomades of Tartar origin who roam over the Paropamisan mountains. They are Shiahs and only the border tribes acknowledge the suzerainty of Dost Mahommed. Brave and hardy, their scanty fare has made leprosy their curse. They will be found formidable foes. But should the Ameer succeed in taking Herat that chance will be very much lessened. The town is situated in a fertile valley three miles from the Heri rood or river which supplies it with water. On an artificial mound of earth which surrounds it in oblong shape stands a wall, the top of which is from sixty five to ninety feet above the level of the valley. The wall and its thirty round bastions are of unburned brick. A small outwork defends each of the five gates. The strongest part of the defences is the citadel, protected by an outwork on the northern face, near which is the immense mound raised by Nadir Shah when he besieged the town. While 10,000 men may defend it at least 25,000 are necessary to take it. Taken it must be, for it is said to be

tiful. Conolly's descriptions of the place will be found full of interest. The dirtiest town in the world, its position makes it one of the most bean-tiful externally, and the traveller, as he inspects its fine ruins and reads of its ancient glories, can believe Baber when he says that "in the whole habitable world there was not such another city."

As the centre of the traffic between Persia and Central Asia on the one side, and Affghanistan and India on the other, it well deserves the name of bunder or port. Could Dost Mahommed take

intact to a son like himself, nothing would more promote the peace and prosperity of Central Asia.

But of the latter there is no hope. - Friend of

THE VICEROY'S MOVEMENTS AND THE RELIEF. There is now no prospect that Lord Elgin will be able to leave the Capital for Simla till the middle of January next. The work awaiting the Imperial Legislative Council is too heavy and too important to give any hope of a very short session. Nor is the Council likely to make its first attempt this season at "flying," as provided for by the Act which called it into existence. As soon as the coming holidays are at an end, or towards the close of October, the Council will be summoned to discuss such weighty matters as a Contract Law, a Registration Act, the Sale of Waste Lands and Redemption and Permanent Settlement of the Land-tax. Besides these there is the Consolidation of Customs Bill, which will give India a uniform tariff; and Mr. Harington, no longer an amateur legislator, must be unwilling to let his opportunities pass for pursuing his favourite task of adding to, taking away from and generally amending the statute book of the Empire. As the Council are not likely to have either Sir B. Peacock or an experienced lawyer like Mr. Ritchie to guide them, the work will be done more slowly and the public will require to watch it more narrowly. Once free from legislation Lord and Lady Elgin will probably be able to proceed direct by train from Calcutta to Agra. The relief will to some extent be affected by the arrangements necessary for his Excellency's escort, and these have hitherto delayed its publication. Besides these the prevalence of cholera, and the want of the usual relief last year, render some extensive changes advisable, and Colonel Balfour is not in the way now to look at the cost with a jealous eye, though we doubt not Colonel Broome will do his duty. But it has been drawn up, approved of in Calcutta, and only waits the orders of the Commander in Chief. At least seventeen infantry and four cavalry regiments of her Majesty's service will change, while the 92nd, now in Calcutta, will go to England and be succeeded by the 13th in Fort William. Lord Elgin will not probably make a long tour, but proceed slowly by Agra, Delbi, and Meerut to that Simla paradise, of which, we trust, he will not become so enamoured as the Commander-in-Chief. The public can afford when there is no chance of a war to forget Sir Hugh Rose, unless he tempts it to gossip about exploits according to the maxim of Ovid,- but it cannot lose sight of Lord Elgin. Sir C. Trevelyan denied Lord Canning a brief rest in the Hills on the only occasion he attempted to enjoy them. There is no probability that Sir W. Denison will trouble any one in India with his existence, but we cannot believe that envious fate will be kinder to Lord Elgin than to his predecessors .- Friend of India.

THIBET .- Accounts received from Thibet announce the progress of revolutionary disturbances there, of such a nature as to lead to the suspicion that the Nepaul Government is not entirely unconnected with the actors in the facts narrated. It appears that the Delai Lama, having been driven from his throne and frontier by the Setna Raje, has fled across the Thibetan territory into China; and having there raised a regular force of considerable numerical strength, is expected back to combat the usurper, and endeavour to recover possession of his own territory, in the ensuing cold season. On the other hand the Setna Raje is making active preparations to meet him, and the country is in the most disturbed condition. Nearer to home and our frontier, we (Englishman) learn, by accounts from the North-east, that a mission is to be despatched to the Deb Raja and to the Dhurmo Raja at Bootan, a medical and four military officers, with a Ghoorka guard accompanying the representative of the British Government, the guard to consist of fifty men. What the exact object of this mission is we have not heard, but we suppose that it is of a mixed political and commercial nature. We are on friendly relations with these Rajas, and trade between our subjects and theirs would be mutually beneficial. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S CAMP will march most likely from Agra about the 10th November, and reach Gwalior on the 16th. It will be at Lucknow via Cawnpore about the middle of December. His Excellency, with a flying camp, will, the latter end of November, visit Jhansi and Seepree, also Lullutpore, Saugor, Jubbulpore, Nagode, Rewah, Allahabad, and Lucknow. At the last place he will remain till the 9th January, when he will again come to Agra to meet the Governor-General.—Delhi Gazette.

THE LAST MILILARY SCANDAL.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of India has warned all officers by circular against publicly canvassing or formally passing any censure on the conduct of Colonel Priestly in regard to his report to head-quarters of the objectionable remarks uttered by Major Fitzgerald in reference to the Commander-in-Chief. He has also put his veto on any action that the military members of the United Service Club proposed taking in the matter at the meeting announced for the 25th September.

REBELS IN THE LULLUTPORE JUNGLE AGAIN. Nothing is so well calculated to convince us of the magnitude of our Eastern empire, and of the difficulties thus offered to our administration, as the fact that towards the end of 1862 our police are still engaged in hunting out of the jungles of Central India the rebels of 1857, and that near a spot not two hundred miles from the Bombay Trunk-road. Only yesterday Rao Sahib was hanged for atrocities committed five years ago. Another notorious rebel has just been caught in the Southern Mahratta country, and if Hyderabad were to be searched, we should unearth many a notorious traitor who fancies himself secure, but will yet be drawn into the net of punishment as the moth perishes in the flame. Captain Thain, the commandant of the Lullutpoor police, made a very gallant attack on the rebel leader Davee Sing's encampment on the morning of the 24th August; after having been concealed in a Picket shed for two days, sharing fare and lodging with his men. He obtained reliable information that the rebel encampment was situated in the midst of hills and dense jungles between the Jaghires of Gona and Dongra, villages on the southern boun dary of the Lullutpoor district, and contiguous to the main road from Saugor to Jhansee. Taking a selected party of fourteen Sikhs with him, Captain Thain, after encountering all the difficulties with which darkness envelopes jungles, rocks, and swollen streams, came upon the rebel encampment just as day dawned. Shooting down an outlying sentry with an Eley's cartridge, he rushed forward into the midst of the surprised dacoits, dropped two more of them with his revolver, and slipped his Sikhs at the main body with the bayonet. Right Right well did they maintain the name of the old Khalsa. Their enemy soon found safety in the dense bamboo jungle which surrounded the encampment, but left all their tents, bedding, and some fourteen or fifteen killed and wounded on the ground. This cannot but be considered a most gallant and successful enterprise, for the rebels were four times the number of the police. Government should come down heavily on these double-dealing Jaghiredars of Dongra and Gona. The rebels had been encamped either on these Jaghires, or in their vicinity for several weeks, yet not one word of information did these favoured Thakoors, these holders of large rent-free estates, give either to the magistrate or police. Nominally subservient and loyal, it is these double-faced scoundrels who support the rebels, and share their booty; and it is with them that Government should settle accounts .- Friend of India.

CALCUTTA PRESIDENCY COLLEGE.—The Gazette notifies the appointment of Mr. W. A. Montriou as Professor of Jurisprudence and Indian Law, and of Mr. J. Goodeve as Professor of English Law in the Calcuta Presidency College.

THE VICEROY'S BODY GUARD.—The Englishman states that it has been determined to mise the strength of the Viceroy's Body Guard by two additional troops, and protests against the useless expense of a force which at present costs Rs. 7,000 a month.

THE UNITED SERVICE CLUB.—Two contemporaries have paid Sir Hugh Rose a very ambiguous compliment by recommending the members of the United Service Club not to expel Colonel Priestley. The Commander-in-Chief has done nothing, so far as the public are aware, to deserve the suspicion that he is a patron and partisan of spies and tale-bearers, and respect for him ought to induce the army to pause before they give ear to so dishonourable an insinuation. The facts are patent to all. Colonel Priestley has officially reported a private conversa-tion, contrary to the rules which regulate the society of officers and gentlemen. the club do not mark their sense of his conduct by erasing his name, they condescend to place themselves on the same level with the common informer. Military clubs will then be reduced to the condition of a foreign cafe, where no man dares to give free utterance to his thoughts for fear his next neighbour may be a spy. If Major Fitzgerald had as persistently depreciated Sir Hugh Rose in private conversation as Colonel Priestley offensively paraded his admiration of him in a most ostentatious manner and extravagant terms, as if to provoke retort, then public sympathy would be less with Major Fitzgerald. But it is notorious that Colonel Priestley began the conversation, and conducted it in a manner almost insulting so as to provoke one who is the most gentlemanly of officers and estimable of men. Not only so, but he took no notice of Major Fitzgerald's reply at the time. Treasuring it up from Saturday night till Monday morning, he only then officially reported it, without informing the officer thus betrayed. speak deliberately, we express the feeling of the whole public from its highest member to its lowest, when we say that there is no language too strong to characterise this offence against social etiquette. The articles we allude to are either libels on the Commander-in-Chief, who would probably be the first to call for the expulsion of such a person as Colonel Priestley from a London Club, or most insolent attempts to prevent a body of English gentlemen from asserting their own honour, and securing the sacredness of private intercourse, by endeavoring to intimidate them from carrying out their own openly expressed feelings and convictions. We assure them, on the best authority, that Major Fitzgerald's remark cannot, by the utmost legal sophistry, be construed into an offence against the articles of war. The best compliment the army can pay to their chief is to act unanimously on the 25th of September, and take it for granted that so gallant a man as Sir Hugh Rose cannot but approve of their so doing. In the very painful alternative of his so far forgetting his own honour as to support Colonel Priestley, we would remind them of the noble words of an old monk of the middle ages :- "Duo sunt, justitia et libertas, pro quibus quisque fidelis usque ad sanguinem stare debeat."-Friend of

Government se- curities	43,48,861			43,48,861

The circulation was Rs. 4,26,00,000 at the end of July, so that in the month it has increased 2 lakhs. The amount of investment remains the same, or only a ninth of what the Act allows and the most cautious prudence dictates.

CAPTURE OF SHEO CHURN.—The police of the Etawah district have captured a man named Sheo Churn, who was the senior Subadar of the detachment of the Loodianah Regiment, which muticied at Jounpore on the 5th June, 1857, and murdered the officer in command, and Mr. R. B. Cuppage, of the Civil Service.

BAZAAR SUPPLIES .- The evil of allowing the whole monopoly of the supply of butcher's meat to remain in the hands of a Mussulman and a Hindoo leagued together in Calcutta is now showing itself in the practice of keeping in ice thameat killed to-day and not sold till to-morrow, when every Khansamah is tempted to buy the meat thus preserved at a reduced rate. It is most unhealthy, and has of late led to so much sickness that the police, guided by the doctors, should interfere. Calcutta is talking of a new market near the Sealdah terminus, and so is Bombay. Two enterprising Europeans have taken a stud and stock farm, with a large market garden attached, in the vicinity of Nassick, near the line of rail. They are purchasing 20,000 picked sheep in different parts of the country; of these 16,000 will remain on the best runs in Caudeish, Nuggur, and the Runn countries.
"Bushire is to supply a large quantity of its famous fowls. We hear officers who served there in 1857 describe these plump roasters as equal: to the best English fowls in size and flavour: they, moreover, lay large and fine-flavoured eggs, as fine as those of the Cochin China fowl. Shanghai, too, has been indented on. On the completion of the Thull Ghaut the days of smoked 'sky blue,' mis-named 'milk,' and that filthy compound mis-named 'butter,' will be at an end; for good rich cream, sweet milk, and fresh butter will arrive by each morning's train." There is no reason why this should not be realised in the three Presidency cities.

CHOLERA has been passing away from Lahore for some days, and now (Sept. 3) only two or three deaths from real cholera occur daily. The native doctors, who were employed by Government to distribute medicines and attend the sick, have been withdrawn, as their services are no longer needed. The prisoners in camp are quite healthy, and will be sent back to the Central Jail as soon as the barrack walls and floors have been completely cleaned and fumigated. From the troops in Meean Meer, the fort and camp, the accounts are equally satisfactory; only three fresh cases having been reported, two of which were in one detachment of 19th Regiment encamped near the Ferozepore road, and the remaining case was of a woman in Meean Meer. The soldiers in the fort and in camp are generally healthy. From Goojranwalla, Wuzeerabad, Kussoor, and the country around the intelligence is highly satisfactory; and it may be said with thankfulness that cholera as an epidemic has passed away from us.—Lahore Chronicle.

OPERATION OF THE NEW SIGNAL ACT .-Colonel Douglas, Director-general of Electric Telegraphs, being naturally willing to turn an honest penny for the Government in these hard times, reported to the Secretary to Government that by carrying out the provisions and penalties of the new Signal Act against a number of offending ship captains and pilots, a very pretty pecuniary haul could be made. The Director-general represented that thirty ships, with thirty captains and pilots on board, had passed thirty telegraph stations in the Hooghly, without hoisting thirty names and numbers, although signalled to do so; the thirty captains rendering themselves, by the provisions of the Act, liable to a fine of one thousand rupees each, and the thirty pilots to a fine of five hundred rupees each, total Rs. 45,000. Reference was, we believe, made to the master attendant, who was directed to call upon the accused for explanation or defence; upon which the thirty captains and the thirty pilots averred, and we believe with perfect truth, that they had duly and as the Act directs, hoisted thirty names and numbers, but that either from calms or thick weather they may have been undistinguishable, and that, consequently, they were not justly liable to any penalty, and would not pay any; and they have not paid. As yet, we believe, the Act has not brought in a halfpenny to the public exchequer — Englishman.

CACHAR, August 28 .- Local labour has for the past month again dropped off, and will not for some time be available for plantation work. Most of those who suffered from the recent murrain have succeeded in raising their cattle by begging, borrowing or buying; but even yet the area that will be cultivated with rice this year will fall far short of that of ordinary years, and this falling off can scarcely fail to affect the rice market sconer or later, although up to the present time the price has kept very uniform and moderate. Some planters have taken the precaution to lay in stores of grain against any sudden rise, from which they must otherwise sustain loss, since they are bound to make up to their coolies the difference between the ordinary and extraordinary market rates. We want very much some sort of a contract law. We do not call out for anything very strict; what we want is some summary process by which contractors may either be punished for nonfulfilment, or even compelled to return their advances at once and without any delay; the latter punishment would in most cases suffice, and would prevent a great deal of rascality. It is becoming quite a "dodge" for contractors to take advances with the full intention of working them out partially and in a slovenly way. It is very desirable that examples should be made of one or more of the evil doers, but the process is so tedious and uncertain, and so much time elapses between the institution of the action and the final appeal decision (besides which the planter has to keep his Mohurrir and part of his establishment running about the country), that he becomes very unwilling to resort to law, particularly as he feels the force of the example is lost owing to delay. If, in the absence of any more stringent law, summary restitution were compelled of advances made on account of works imperfectly executed, the effect would be great, and would diminish the class of baina khowras, i.e., devourers of advances, who are at present springing up. Advances are and will for some time be necessary in Cachar, as no class has as yet arisen sufficiently wealthy to be able to take a large piece of work, and to provide for their workmen during its execution without receiving some amount of advance. The people are also singularly wanting in unanimity, and will not unite in large bodies to take work. The greatest budzats are the Mahomedans; the Hindus have some sort of a conscience, and are, of course, preferred where they can be had .-Englishman.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL PCturned to the Presidency on the 13th Sept., after an absence of nearly three months. Accompanied by his suite, he arrived at Kooshtee from Dacca at noon, and was met by Colonels Strachey and Beadle, Captain Taylor, several of the principal railway officials, and the leading residents of the neighbourhood. Several petitions from natives ere presented to his Honour here, and after a short stay, during which the railway station, now in course of construction, was inspected, the erty proceeded by special train in charge of the Locomotive Superintendent. The train stopped at Alumdangah, and the party slighted to inspect the large iron cylinder and girder bridge across the Koomar. His Honour expressed himself as highly pleased with its construction. After a quick run, the train reached Scaldah shortly after aix o'clock.

GAMBLING AT SIMIA.—Another of those periodical gambling fracas, which have of late years occurred at Simla, has, we are sorry to hear, just taken place at that sanitarium. The result has been, that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has visited the delinquents with summary punishment; a large number of officers have been ordered to rejoin their regiments. A senior, holding high command, has already been deprived of his command, and we (Delhi Gazette) hear that others of these Baden-Baden gentlemen are likely to come to grief. The sums reported to have been lost and won are something fabulous SIC VOS NON VOBIS .- The Hurkaru states that Ra.110,000 as his share of the Delhi prize money. and to the forfeiture of all rank and title.

DARJEELING, Sept. 6 .- The new road is making but slow progress on account of the rains, but part will soon be open, as far as Hope-town, a distance of seven miles. It will be quite practiable, when this road is finished, to drive a buggy the whole distance to Punkabaree at the foot of the hills. Rain falls incessantly, and every place is clouded in mist. The amount of rain which fell during the month of July was inches, 25.860; and from August 1st up to the 22nd, 15.95. These items will give a correct idea of what sort of weather we have at Darjeeling in the rainy season. Occasionally in the mornings a glimpse may be had of the perpetually snow-clad peak of Kinchinjunga, but it is only for a short time, very early, shortly after day break. The cultivation of cinchona, which was commenced about the beginning of April, will in all likelihood turn out a grand success. At present the plants are only being propagated from individuals of different species brought from Java. The propagating house is on the top of Sinchal, at an elevation of 8,000 feet, only a temporary place, however. The permanent establishment, it appears, will be in the valley beneath, at an elevation suitable to the growth of the plants, which, when strong enough, will be transplanted into the forest. Some twenty square miles of land has been set apart by Government for this purpose. Tea is the great rage here; every one is anxious to purchase land for the cultivation of tea. One or two companies are doing well, as also private individuals; and as this is the plucking season the planters are all more or less busy .- Englishman.

NAGPORE, August 26 .- Cotton cultivation appears to be the all-absorbing topic of conversation amongst the enterprising merchants, both European and native, in this part of the country. Every encouragement and aid is now being afforded to the native farmers and cultivators, who are renting larger holdings of land for the purpose than they had hitherto done. In several districts in the Bombay Presidency seed of cotton of native growth is now selling at higher figures than it did in previous years. In some places several European merchants, with their usual liberality, have been distributing foreign seed amongst the poor native cultivators. It is said that there are large tracts of land in the vicinity of Nagpore now covered with thick jungle, and the abode of tigers and other ferocious animals, the soil of which is black and hard. If these lands are properly cleared, they may be converted into cotton fields. Since the arrival of our new Chief Commissioner, durbars and levees are of frequent occurrence here. As Nagpore was once the seat of a great Hindoo dynasty, and is now the residence of several native chiefs and sirdars, the head of the local administration ought by pomp and grandeur to command the respect of the people here, and Mr. Temple is, therefore, the right man in the right place.

INCENDIARISM .- A court of inquiry held at Wellington, the Neilgherry sanitarium, to investigate the origin of the fire which burnt down the buildings used by the Protestants and Papists as churches, has found two privates of H.M.'s 105th guilty of incendiarism. No motive for the deed is assigned. The pseudo Captain Russell, who deluded so many tradesmen on the Neilgherries and at Poona, has been committed to stand his trial in the Madras High Court for fraud, according to the Star.

A Cool Requisition.—The Chamber of Commerce of Madras have requested the attention of Government to a circular letter addressed by the Income tax Commissioner to the trading community of Madras under date 8th September, calling upon each firm to forward lists of all persons who have consigned goods to them for sale and statements of the profits made by such sales, since August, 1860, with a view to levying Incometax upon the annual profits of the consigners. Of course the demand of the Income-tax Commissioner was not complied with by the merchants.

Hyperaman, Sept. 1.—A circumstance of a however, Captain Kelf, of the British ship Walnovel order has occurred here, which, though not altogether taking us by surprise, has occasioned great excitement. An ex-apothecary of the name of Murray had suddenly started into great opulence, and some sinister method of his acquiring his wealth was suspected. About four days ago Fyz Mahomed Khan, a person who communicates on the part of Shums-ool-comrah's house with the Residency, produced a receipt purporting to be Mrs. Davidson's, to the effect that she had received from Ekhta-der-ool-moolk, a son of Shums-ool-oomrah, who has gained great notoriety by his activity in many ways, a lac of rupees to be employed in a law suit which she was conducting in England. This receipt was in Mrs. Murray's writing, and Ekhtadar ool-moolk, being interrogated, produced numerous letters, signed in the name of Mrs. Davidson, which were written by Mrs. Murray, and addressed to herself, and were made over to Ekhtadar-oolmoolk to satisfy him that Mrs. Davidson had undertaken to influence her husband to procure the appointment of Minister for him. The forgeries are acknowledged, the writing is known, and the notes are illiterate. It is a transaction of 1858, -and that it is only now disclosed, as it has obviously been done under the instruction of Ekhtadar-ool-moolk, at once shows that this nobleman, disappointed of his expectation, has made the disclosure vindictively, hoping to implicate Mrs. Davidson, a simple-hearted young lady; it will recoil upon himself. If nothing further be done, it will be a perfect bar to his obtaining the ministry, if indeed that is not already barred against him from his previous acts. As if not to leave in doubt that the receipt was shown up with a view to implicate Mrs. Davidson, he has since sent a message to Major Thornhill to say that the affair should be let alone, if Mrs. Davidson has received the money. This, however, was not necessary to prove his vindictive purpose, for had he had any other, his obvious course would have been to have shown the receipt to Mrs. Davidson. Shums-ool-oomrah, the father, is a very respectable man; his son, I believe, acts independently of him, and not unfrequently without his know ledge. The conduct of his eldest son, who was concerned in an endeavour to eject Salar Jung from his situation, to effect which twenty thousand gold mohurs had been obtained from his Highness' treasury, will bring the respectable old nobleman, eighty-two years of age, I am sorry to think, great affliction. Though there existed nowhere any doubt of the fact of the money having been received by Mrs. Murray and her husband, she has acknowledged the fact, and given an account of the manner in, and of the houses of business with which, she invested it.-Englishman.

The greatest excitement prevailed AKYAB.here on Thursday afternoon, 28th August, in consequence of a report that the barque Vittoria S., Captain Protley, hence to Falmouth, was on shore, upon the bank outside the harbour. Upon the receipt of this intelligence the marine assistant, accompanied by pilots Motley and Dunford, proceeded to the scene of the disaster, and although there was a very heavy sea and strong tide setting on to the shore, succeeded at considerable risk in approaching within half a mile of the wreck, which was about eight miles to the westward of Savage Island; but in consequence of the heavy sea running, and the breakers near the ship, it was found impossible to approach the wreck and take off the crew without the risk of losing the boat and, in all probability, their own lives. They were therefore compelled to return to port for further assistance, and night coming on, the unfortunate crew sought refuge in the foretop, the sea continually breaking over them. Immediately upon the return of the marine assistant and the two pilots at a very late hour, as the night was dark, and as the flood tide would shortly make, it was determined as soon as possible to despatch the steamer Pioneer to the scene of the wreck, and orders to that effect were given by Mr. Bullock, the owner, and the officers and drew were employed all night in preparing her for the morning. In the meantime, vish, and Mr. Dunn, c.E., of the D.P.W., volunteered to go out, and at the same time to obtain a volun'eer crew from the Walvish, as Mr. Christinson, the ship chaudler, had placed at their dis posel his iron boat, and immediately started to prepare her for the work. The volunteer crew during the night proceeded to Chouregia and took charge of the iron boat, and at daybreak gallantly started for the scene of the wreck anxiously watched by a great number of the residents from the points and other conspicuous It was not without great difficulty and labour that the boat and her gallant crew succeeded in approaching the wreck, in consequence of the strong ebb tide and heavy sea running at the time. Their progress from the shore was watched with considerable anxiety; for owing to the sea on the bank they were often lost to the view of the spectators on shore, and the boat appeared in several instances to have been capsized; but to the great satisfaction of the spectators she rose buoyantly and rode over the sea which ever and anon was sweeping over the unfortunate crew, who were observed clinging to the cross-trees and foretop-gallant rigging. After considerable difficulty, and at great risk to the boat and her crew, a line was made fast to the wreck, and shortly afterwards, as the boat rose on each wave, a line was thrown to the crew, who one at a time made it fast to their bodies, leaped into the sea, and was pulled through the breakers into the boat. In this manner thirteen poor fellows, including the pilot, were rescued from a watery grave, after having been in the rigging upwards of sixteen hours exposed to the heavy sea at the time, which was continually breaking over them. They were afterwards taken on board the Walvish where they received every attention and kindness. Too much praise cannot be given to the gallant fellows in the boat for the courageous manner in which they rescued the worn out crew, who were exposed almost naked upon the wreck during the whole of that wretched night. It would be well to mention that the Marine Assistant gave instructions to burn blue lights every hour during the night at the point, which greatly tended to chees the poor fellows on the wreck during the long, dark hours of night. The residents of the station have come nobly forward with clothes and money for the relief of the shipwrecked crew, and subscription lists have been opened by Messrs. Halliday, Bullock, and Co. The amount subscribed was Rs. 537.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS

PARSEE MUNIFICENCE.-At the public meeting of the inhabitants of Bombay held on the 17th Sept., in the Town-hall, for the purpose of taking into consideration the best means of assisting to alleviate the present great distress amongst the mill-hands of Lancashire, a sum of Rupees (1,09,000), one lakh and nine thousand was subscribed, the Hon, Rustomiee Jamsetiee Jeicebhoy and Mr. Curseties Furdoonies Paruck, heading the list with the handsome sum of Rupees (25,000) twenty-five thousand each.

COTTON DEPOT.—Captain Ramsay, the lately appointed agent to the East India Cotton Agency of London, has applied to Government for a lease of a certain quantity of ground to be used for a cotton depot on the line of railway in Berar, and his request has been granted.

CIRCULATION OF CHUPATTIES .sioner of Police, Southern Division, Bombay Presidency, has officially reported that the circulation of Chupatties has extended to all the Collectorates of the division, with the exception of Rut nagherree and North Canara. The magistrates and superintendents of police are everywhere on the alert, and have taken measures to suppress the distribution.

COMMUNICATION BETWEEN KURRACHEE AND Bagdad.—A regular mail communication has been established between Kurrachee, Muscat, Bunder Abbas, Bushire, and Bagdad every six weeks.

WANTER IN THE DECCAR .- The fell of rein this vear in the Deccan has been scant and partial: so that the rainy season grops have been sown in but few places; and in the few fields that received a heavy shower and were sown the crops are now drying up from the drought. The rainy season crops have failed, and the farmers are now anxiously waiting for the precious rain that will fit their fields for the wheat and zondhale and gram and other cold season crops, which must be sown within the next six weeks. The grass, too, must have rain. The grass that started in some places is nibbled off as fast as a few spears shoot forth. There has been no dry fodder in whole districts for weeks, and where there is a little left it is sold at five and six times the usual rate. The stems of the Harayali and Kunda grasses that creep under the surfaces of the soil are dug up and charily given to the famished cattle. The trees are stripped of their foliage and bark for the same purpose. The maize and Kadawal stalks raised by irrigation help to keep the cattle alive. But such fodder is to be had in only a few of the villages and at exorbitant prices. The cry of rain is heard from all but the Marwadi grain dealers. The children watch the clouds and ask when it will rain. And unless rain falls speedily and abundantly, so as to bring on the grass, the cattle will not have strength left for putting in the seed of the cold weather crops. As it is, oxen are for sale at one quarter the price they were worth two months ago. Some despairing of rain have tied tickets to the horns of their cattle and turned them out to shift for themselves, or to become the property of any one who chooses to take the burden. There seems to be no resource for the cattle but to drive them to the hilly regions where there is grass and foliage. Taking advantage of this state of things, the Marawadis and others who have grain in store have proclaimed and established famine prices for grain, consequently the poor and all those who buy their food from week to week are in great distress. Every resource is strained to eke out a subsistence, and yet they are becoming emaciated. They eat grain that has been stored in pits for eight or ten years, and that is black from age. The want of proper and sufficient food also induces disease from which the sufferer has no strength left to rally. Large companies are leaving their homes and going to other parts in the hope that there the famine may prove less severe .- Times of India.

MEER ZOAR-OOL HOUSAIN, alias Surfraz Hoosain, formerly, during the rebellion, Minister of the Rajah of Mithowlee in Oudh, and who was a participator in the cruel massacre of our countrymen in that province, has been brought down from Sholapore a prisoner by Major Torin Thatcher, Superintendent of Pol ce at Ahmedabad. He arrived at Poons on the 13th September, under an escort of the Sholapore Police, and is now safely lodged in the gaol of Poona, from whence he will be forwarded to Lucknow, there to stand his trial for murder, and for being a leader in rebellion. Surfraz Hoosain, on his master the Rajah of Mithowlee being taken and hanged, in 1857, usurped the guddee, of which, however, he only retained possession for a short time, when he was compelled to fly for his life into the jungles, where he has been a wanderer and a fugitive, with heavy price on his head, for the last four years.

LADY FRERE has recently visited one of the Rances at present sojourning in the city of Poons. Her ladyship took with her, as her interpretress, an intelligent native girl, a pupil of the Fernule Boarding School in connection with the Free Church of Scotland's Mission in Poona. visit produced the happiest effect. This is a new element in the Government of India. We are sure it is a most unexceptionable, a most commendable one, and we have no doubt of its success.

ARSENAL AT KIRKEE .- It is in contemplation to build a grand Arsenal for Central India on the site of the village of Kirkee, to which the ordnance stores of every description from the Poons, Ahmednuggur, and Belgaum Arsenals will be re

BOMBAY HOUSE OF CORRECTION.-From an official report of the Bombay House of Correction we learn that the daily average number of prisoners, European and native, confined in the prison during the last six months was 213, and the total number of prisoners during the same period was 410. Of these 151 were Europeans, 23 native Christians, 114 Mahomedans, 4 Parsees, 118 Hindoos, and other castes. The net profit of their labour was Rs. 2,255.

CAPIAIN PLAYFAIR, assistant resident at Aden, is engaged in making photographs of the Himyritic inscriptions, now one of the greatest philological puzzles. Some of the words can be translated by means of Arabic, but others have a very un Semitic appearance.

THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT have adopted substantially the rules and arrangements made by Sir B. Peacook for Bengal. Sir J. Arnould and Mr. Justice Couch will sit in the Supreme Court building for cases of local jurisdiction, and the Chief Justice preside in the sudder building for special appeals. The oral pleadings will be in English. As in Bengal, a barrister judge will sit with a civilian in the High Court appellate division that thus legal and local knowledge may be combined on the bench. Thus in India English may be said to be the language of the High Courts-a great reform.

BOMBAY BRUENTBNARY .- On the 18th of this month (September) Bombay celebrated its bicentenary as an English possession. Two hundred years ago, say the Chronological Tables, the island of Bombay was given to Charles II. as a dowry with his Fortugee bride, the Infanta Catherine. A beggarly portion it was, to a needy monarch. The population was estimated at 10,000. The annual revenue was less than 3,000, which was considerably below the expense of the small establishment required for it. The whole rental of the Island, from the extremity of Colaba to Mahim, was little more than £6,000. More rain appears to have fallen than at present. A great part of what is now cultivated ground was then a pestilential salt marsh; and the insalubrity of the climate was such that had there been Insurance Companies in those days, none of them would probably have insured the life of any European coming to Bombay at twenty years of age for an annual premium of less than 20 per cent. of the amount insured. Except for the honour of the thing, it appeared that the English would have been better without Bombay; and the monarch accounting the honour mil, and being unwilling to pay the expense of keeping the unprofitable possession, was doubtless thankful to get quit of it by handing it over to the Bast India Company, which he did in 1668. The Company lost £300,000 by it during the first twenty-two years of their possession; yet they must have had a tolerably strong conviction of the benefit that must eventually accrue to them from having a secure footing on the coast of India nearest to Europe, including the possession of the best harlour in the East; for they incurred an additional expense of £660,000 in expanding the little Portuguese fort and for ifications into the extensive works still standing, and which, although now worse than useless, were then accounted sufficient to secure the company in their new possession and enable them to set at defiance all their enemies, who were chiefly the Maratha powers and piratical marauders from the Southern coasts of the mainland .- Bombay Gazette.

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR WILLIAM MANSFIELD, whose labours in Council have been untiring, has been suffering for some time from indisposition. His Excellency is now at Poorundhur for change of air.

CAPTURE OF A MURDERER.-The miscreant who mutilated the body of the late Mr. Manson, c.s., and received a reward for the act from the Chief of Nurgoond, has been captured by Lieut. McGillivray at Dharwar.

CEYLON.

The Overland edition of the Colombo Observer, dated September the 1st., states that eleven months of the Ceylon coffee season have elapsed, and no reason has appeared to doubt that by the end of the month the estimate of 580,000 cwts., only 13,030 cwts. less than last year, will be reached. The new crop is coming down rapidly for shipment. The Governor made a speech on the opening of the council with regard to the railway, the tenders for which were to be produced on the 3rd Sept., at the meeting of the council. His Excellency then touched on financial matters, which he said were healthy. In a supplement the Observer also gives a return of revenue and expenditure for 1861, which may be summarised as follows: —"Customs gave £235,000 in 1861, against £218,000 in 1860. Land sales, contrary to expectation, realised £41,000, or £1,000 over the receipts from this source in 1860. Land revenue gave £76,000, instead of £71,000. Tolls and other rents realised £56,000 instead of £53,000. Licenses, £123,000, against 110,000. £51,000 instead of £47,000. In sales of Government property there was a slight falling off, owing to a smaller issue of articles from the Commissariat: in the sales of salt there was an increase, £56,000 instead of £54,000. The Pearl Fishery (at Tambelgan Lake) gave only £146, instead of £37,000 from the Aripo Banks in the previous year. But notwithstanding this falling off, the revenue reached £751,000-or within £16,000 of that of 1860 with its great Pearl The expenditure on establishments Fishery. closely coincided in the two years, being £244,000 in 1861, against £245,000 in the previous year. The services, exclusive of establishments, which cost £160,000 in 1860, are down for only £390,000 in 1861, or £56,000 less. The great difference seems to have been in purchases for the Colonial Commissariat. In 1860 the sum against this department was no less than £124,000; in 1861 the expenditure was only £63,000, or very little more than one-half that of the previous year, and far below the estimate."

THE STRAITs.

LIGHTHOUSE AT MALACCA .- W. Stanton, Esq., R.N., Com. of H.M. surveying ship Saracen, notifies through the Gazette that the new light at Malacca is exhibited from the ruins of the ancient Portuguese church on the hill, 146 feet above the level of the sea at high water. The old light shown from the same building was very dim, and not visible more than six miles from the Hooghly's deck, height of eye ten feet above the sea: the present one was seen at a distance of thirteen miles. The light was much required; it is a capital guide to lead clear of the dangerous Water Islands, and will greatly assist ships in navigating Malacca Straits.

TRADE OF THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS .trade of the Straits Settlements during the year 1861-62 was as follows :- Penang: Imports, Rs. 1,68,87,434; exports, 2,03,63,653, or in round numbers 32 millions sterling. Singapore: Imports, Rs. 5,57,25,104; exports, 4,96,15,529, or in round numbers 101 millions sterling. Malacca: Imports, Rs. 45,12,099; exports, 35,35,745, or about £850,000. This gives a total of fifteen millions sterling and is a slight decrease on the trade of last year.

Borneo .- The Singapore Free Press says the latest acquisition of the Sarawak Government on the coast of Borneo, Bintulu, promises to turn out of very considerable value as a place of trade. The Rajah Mudab (Mr. Brooke) has succeeded in carrying through the change of Government without any of the trouble which was at first anticipated. The former rulers have taken refuge with the Karzans. A fort is being built at the mouth of the Bintulu river, and it is expected that under its protection the Chinese will establish a bazaar. They are already arriving in considerable numbers, and are beginning to do a good trade.

REMARKS BY THE COURT.

The Court considers it would fail in its duty did it not remark on the strong animus displayed, in giving their testimony on this trial, by Maj. Swindley and Capt. Weir; on the evasive character of the evidence of Lieut. and Adjt. FitzSimon; and more particularly on the reprehensible conduct of Capt. Weir, in not having made his subaltern, Lieut. Bennit, aware that he had been on a committee at the time he supposed himself to have been on the muster.

The order of June 13 concludes as follows:—

"Lieut. col. Crawley regrets to be compelled to remark thus stringently upon the want of care displayed, and the little trouble bestowed, in so many instances, on their horses, by the officers of troops, who seem to lose sight of their own credit and displayed, in so many instances, on their horses, by the officers of troops, who seem to lose sight of their own credit and disprove that Lieut. col. REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C. IN INDIA.

The C. in C. in India has read with much regret

The C. in C. in India has read with much regret the proceedings of this court-martial, embracing a period of two months, and extending over 600 pages. He entirely concurs in the remarks made on the proceedings by the Court.

The proceedings show the difficulties with which Lieut. col. Crawley had to contend, from the day he assumed command of the 6th Inniskilling dragoons in April, 1861; the most prominent of them was the conduct of Paymaster Smales. He has paid its penalty, and H.E. will therefore not increase it by animadversion.

The proceedings furnish proof that, before and after Lieut. col. Crawley's arrival, there was discord between the officers of the regiment; neglect on the part of many of them, the two seniors included, of the included of the part of the par the simplest and yet most essential cavalry duties; impatience of reproof, however merited, unaccompanied by amendment; insubordination which, under the influence of a baneful example, extended even to some of the non-commissioned officers; and caballing of the one and the other against the head of the of the one and the other against the nead of the regiment.

Only fifteen days before the arrival of Lieut. col. Crawley, Brigadier Hobson expressed to Capt. Weir, then in temporary command, and one of Lieut. col. Crawley's principal opponents, his disapprobation of the state of the regiment, when he inspected it, for causes which indicated how much the officers had neglected supervision of their men.
Capt. Weir, instead of receiving, in a proper spirit, the mild reproof of Brigadier Hobson, presumed, in consultation with the officers under his command to question its justice, and wrote to the Brigadier a letter which Major gen. Hale, commanding the diviletter which Major gen. Hale, commanding the divi-sion, pronounced to be the most insubordinate that he had ever read in the whole course of his service;" and which H.E. Sir William Mansfield justly characterised as conduct cutting at the root of discipline and rendering officers guilty of it liable to a court

That Capt. Weir should have associated with him-That Capt. Weir should have associated with himself the officers of his regiment for the purpose of opposing the decision of the brigadier commanding, and passing strictures on his official censure, is a painful proof of his entire misprision of the first principles of discipline and of the Queen's Regulations, which strictly forbid anything like collective approval or disapproval by officers of the conduct of their surgices.

In his evidence before the Court, Capt. Weir evinced insubordinate feeling towards his commanding officer which elicited their just disapprobation.

A week after Lieut. col. Crawley's arrival he had reason to find fault, at a special inspection of the regiment, with the same omissions which had been commented on by Rrigadier Hobson.

commented on by Brigadier Hobson.
Lieut. col. Crawley found other evidences of neglect of essential duties on the part of the commanding and other officers of the regiment.

The 6th dragoons were in open horse lines on the eve of the annual rains.

The state of the lines were such as to cause seious apprehensions that the health and efficiency of rious apprehensions that the nealth and efficiency of both men and officers would suffer from the inclemency of the coming monsoon.

Speaking of the lines, Lieut. col. Crawley says, "anything so bad as the state in which I found the horse lines of the regt. when I joined I never witnessed in all my service."

Care of their horses is the first duty of cavalry. How little the horses of the 6th dragoung work.

How little the horses of the 6th dragoons were cared for is shown by the foregoing and by two regimental orders dated the 21st of May and 13th of June, 1861, one of which Lieut. col. Crawley had been compelled to issue because the officers had not carried out his orders for the construction of the lines; and the others because the essential requisites, line and stable gear, had been allowed to fall into a state as inefficient and discreditable as the lines; and state as inefficient and discreditable as the lines; and the officers, with one exception, having failed to purchase the necessary articles of stable gear for their troops, as they ought to have done, out of their contract allowances, Lieut. col. Crawley, in the same order, was compelled to direct the quartermaster of the regt. to purchase these articles and supply them to the troops, an unusual proceeding, but justified by the exigencies of the case.

proved by the fact that none of them, prone as they unfortunately were to question the decisions of authority, attempted to prove that they had not authority, attempted to prove that they had not merited the reproof expressed in these orders."

Thanks to the energy and intelligence of Lieux. col. Crawley, funds were made available; and the horse lines and stable gear of the regt. were placed in a completely efficient state before the rains.

Major Swindley was fully as insubordinate as Capt. Weir; and the unworthy manner in which, as President of the Mess Committee, he received his commanding officer on his arrival to assume command of the regiment, has not, the C. in C. hopes, a parallel.

Lieut. col. Crawley had travelled through the night, and arrived an utter stranger at Ahmedanggur, the head quarters of his regiment; but so far from Major Swindley offering to him the hospitality which one officer never neglects to give to another on such occasions, he literally refused his commandon such occasions, he therainy classes and through the mess sergeant, on the plea of rule, the use of the few articles of mess plate which were necessary for him to eat his breakfast.

In the same ungenerous feeling, Major Swindley, on a strained and erroneous interpretation of a measurale, charged Lieut. col. Crawley with the extra wines drunk by the officers of the regiment at an inspection dinner given to Brigadier Hobson.

Major Swindley convicts himself in his evidence of having used towards his commanding officer, in the orderly room, insubordinate, disrespectful, and defiant language.

It is not surprising that the example of insubordi-It is not surprising that the example or insuborum nation, given by the senior officers of the regiment, Major Swindley and Captain Weir, and of their feel-ings towards their commanding officer, should have had its effects on the junior officers of the regiment. One captain presumed to comment, in Lieut. col. Crawley's presence, on his having assembled the officers of the regiment at the Gram House; although the forage of horses is one of the most important elements of cavalry duties.

Another captain declared, in the presence of Capt. Weir's troop on parade, with an oath, that it was a shame for Lieut. col. Crawley to keep them waiting so leng in the cold—the cold being very much that of an Italian autumn.

Another a substant accordance of the cold being very much that of an Italian autumn.

Another, a subaltern, after a day's reflection, deemed it right to gc to the orderly room to ask redress of his commanding officer, because he had properly commented on the unserviceable state of the eye blinds of the horses of his troop.

Lieut. col. Crawley's comments on the riding of the regiment excited displeasure amongst the officers, although two years before, when Sir Hugh Rose had the honour to command the Poona division, he had found fault with the equitation of the regiment; an opinion confirmed two years afterregiment; an opinion confirmed two years after-wards, by a distinguished cavalry, now a general, wards, by a distinguished cavairy, now a general, officer when he inspected the regiment.

In this as in other cases, officers commented on their commanding officer's orders, orders which would have been unnecessary if improvement had followed on former strictures.

In the case of Surg. Turnbull, it is shown that he was actually employed in collecting evidence in support of the charges which the prisoner brought against his commanding officer, even before those charges were preferred.

The centh of Sorgeant maj. Lilley is extremely to The aeath of Sergeant maj. Lilley is extremely to be regretted. But his Excellency cannot understand how Surg. Turnbull, in stating, with so much detail, its causes, of which he considered "the painful and peculiar nature of his position, and bilious and nervous derangement, caused by a sedentary life, attendant on close arrest," to be part, all of which details tended to inculpate Lieut. col. Crawley, should have been ignorant of the fact that the sergt. maj., although in a state which required medical attendance, had purchased for his use, within the short period elapsing between his arrest and his death—that is, from the 26th April to the 25th Msy—the extraordinary quantity of 28 bottles of brandy. the extraordinary quantity of 23 bottles of brandy, 12 pints of ale, 2 bottles of port wine, and a bottle of gin—quite enough, in combination with Indian summer heat, to compromise the life of a man in exercise and rude health.

The evidence of Lieut. and Adjt. FitzSimon befo the Court was most evasive and unsatisfactory, and showed his entire unfitness for the adjutancy.

To his carelessness and neglect of his duty, as adjutant, must be attributed the annoyance caused by the posting of the senery on the quarters of Sergeant major Lilley, when that non-commissioned officer was directed by Major gen. Farrell to be put these officers knew perfectly well that since 1850 there had not only been great want of unanimity, but that very serious differences had from time to time occurred amongst the officers of the 6th dragoons, so muol so that the late C. in C. in Bombay, Sir Henry Somerset, and H.R.H. the general comnanding in chief, had been obliged to pass severe animadversions on the want of harmony, and on the continued dissentions amongst the officers.

The proceedings, and a letter from the C. in C. of Bombay to the Adjutant general H.M.'s Forces in India, bring to light the misconduct of several of the published for general information:—

non-commissioned officers mixed themselves up in a most unsoldierlike and improper manner, in the proceedings of the Court Martial on Paymaster Smales, displaying undue bias and interest in favour of the prisoner, and against their commanding

H.E. Sir William Mansfield states that the opening address in defence of the prisoner, which was in-flammatory, and most hostile to Lieut. col. Crawley and other officers of the regiment, was communicated to the Sergeant major and other non-commissioned officers before it was delivered in court, and by them read and disseminated secretly.

These non-commissioned officers also obtained and read clandestinely the proceedings of the Court Martial, until so improper a proceeding was forbidden by the Court.

The regimental orders which Lieut. col. Crawley has issued since he assumed command of the 6th drags.; his successful exertions, in the face of difficulties of various sorts, to render the regiment comculties of various sorts, to render the regiment completely efficient in every respect; and the most favourable report of him and the regiment under his command, addressed to H.E. the C. in C. in Bombay by Mnj. gen. Farrell, commanding the Mhow division, at the last half-yearly inspection on the 18th of June, 1862, show that he is an officer of much intelligence, appergatic zeal and fully qualified for the June, 1802, show that he is an officer of much intelligence, energetic zeal, and fully qualified for the command of a cavalry regiment.

As regards Lieut. col. Crawley's relations with his officers, it appears, that on his assuming command of the 6th dragoons he made a declaration to them, from which he did not depart, that he was very strict in all matters of duty. but that, on all them, from which he did not depart, that he was very strict in all matters of duty, but that, on all other occasions, he wished to be on the best and most friendly terms with them. So far from having acted with undue severity, Lieut. col. Crawley appears to have treated his officers with great, indeed too much, forbearance, on the many occasions when his authority was either questioned or resisted.

The C. in C. in India cannot approve the lan-guare which Lieut. col. Crawley addressed to some of the officers of the regt., on one or two occasions.

Making every allowance for the trial to which his feelings were subjected as a commanding officer and a gentleman, his Excellency must think that it would have been better, in the interests of discipline, and of his personal influence, if instead of making use of objectionable expressions with regard to certain others, which produce irritation but not conviction at once, on the declaration of opposition to his authority, vindicated it by the adoption of decided measures.

Whilst his Excellency has found so much cause to express blame, it is a source of sincere satisfaction to him, on the other hand, to know that Lieut. colonel Crawley received cordial support from several of the officers, and that the men of the 6th Innishilling dragonis maintained their dissiplines and killing dragoons maintained their discipline as good

In conclusion, the Commander-in-Chief in India views, with serious displeasure, the conduct of the officers and non-commissioned officers of the 6th Inniskilling dragoons animadverted on in these remarks; and the more especially disapproves that of the three senior, and therefore nore responsible officers, Major Swindley, Captain Weir, and Surgeon Turnbull, which he will not fail to bring to the spe-cial notice of His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief.

My Lord,—I have received and considered in Council your letters Nos. 160 and 130, dated severally March 3 and April 17, 1862, the former forwarding copies of a letter from the Govt. of Bombay, No. 169 of Jan. 17, enclosing a memorial from Lieut. col. Stewart, of the 25th Bombay N.I., and the latter submitting a memorial from Lieut. col. Macpherson, of the 10th Bengal N.I., relative to the effect produced on the promotion of the senior officers of the Indian army by the rules laid down in my despatch No. 320 of Aug. 10, 1861, under which the names of the lieut. cols. who have accepted the annuities authorised in that despatch are retained on the general list to regulate the succession to the colonel's allowance. allowance.

Upon this point you observe that there can be no doubt that, as none of the lieut. cols. who have redoubt that, as none of the lieut. cols. who have retired with their annuities can possibly give their juniors a step unless by their death, the rule must operate injuriously on the prospects of promotion of those more immediately below them.

The Government of Bombay, whose suggestions appear to be contained among the papers forwarded by you in a "draft of an intended letter," recommends that, instead of the system of succession recently prescribed by H.M.'s Govt., each regimental lieut. colonel should receive promotion to the position of colonel with colonel's allowance after the expiration of ten years from the date of attaining his

Your Government, in general terms, recommended the case of the lieut. colonels to my favourable con-

The proposal to reduce the number of colonels with colonel's allowances, in the manner described in my despatch, No. 320 of Aug. 10, was made upon consideration that a certain number must be witha consideration that a certain number must be with-drawn from the list of colonels in a given ratio to the number of officers appointed to the staff corps, and that some further reduction would have to be made in consequence of the reduction of the number of regiments.

In consequence of the mutiny nearly the whole of the native regular regiments of the army of Bengal have disappeared, and a smaller number of irregular regiments have been raised in their place; several regiments also have been reduced in the other presidencies.

These reductions were rendered necessary by con siderations both of a financial and of a political character.

It is almost impossible, when a reduction of force becomes necessary, but that officers, as well as men should, in some degree, suffer from the consequences of a diminution of the strength of the army.

In carrying out the measures which were neces sary for this purpose in India men have been discharged in large numbers with gratuities or Great consideration was also shown to the European officers. They have been retained in their respective cadres on full pay, and with no altera-tion in the system of promotion to the higher ranks by seniority.

A considerable impulse has been lately given to promotion among the officers generally by the re-tirements under the annuity scheme, but the Lieut. cols. of date prior to Jan. 1, 1862, who did not accept annuities, derived no such benefit; on the contrary, their prospects of promotion under the operation of that scheme would, as shown by Lieut. col. Macpherson, be affected injuriously to some ex-

In order to remove any reasonable ground complaint, H.M.'s Govt. have determined that all regimental lieut. cols. remaining on the general list of the local armies in the three Presidencies, whose commissions at such date prior to Jan. 1, 1862, shall be considered entitled to promotion to the rank and allowances of colonel when they shall have been 12 years in the rank of regimental lieut. col.; provided, however, that no promotion under this rule shall take place until those not in any way affected by the retention of the names of the retired officers on shall have received the step in ordinary course (vide note*).

When the heut-col second on the list, viz., i.ieut-ol Fitzgerald, succeeds to the c-lonel's allowance, lieut-col Browne will become entitled to benefit by the rule as to succession to the allowance after twelve years, but not before.

All officers who may have held the rank of lieut. col. on the 1st Jan., 1862, will also be entitled to promotion to the superior grade of col. with col.'s allowances if the step come to them in ordinary allowances if the step come to them in ordinary course before the completion of twelve years' service as lieut. col.; but when these lieut. cols. have been removed from the list, the promotion of those whose commissions bear date on the 1st Jan., 1862, or subsequently, will only be made, as in the staff corps, after twelve years' service in that grade.

The names of the officers of the staff corps, and those of the new line regis., will be treated in a similar manner with those of the effective officers on the list, with the exception that, in the case of the two former, their names, upon coming into the position list, with the exception that, in the case of the two former, their names, upon coming into the position of colonel with colonel's allowances under the operation of the above rule, will be removed altogether from the general regimental list of the Indian army and promotion made in their places.

The principle upon which the succession to col.'s allowances of officers of the Indian army who have not joined the staff corps or the new line regiments is to be hereafter regulated is to be considered as determined by this arrangement,—I have, &c. India-office, London, July 31, 1862. C. Wood.

MR. LAING'S REPLY TO THE CALCUTTA ADDRESS OF THE 6TH SEPTEMBER.

"16, York-place, Edinburgh, Oct. 17, 1862. "DEAR SIR,—I beg to return my best thanks to the inhabitants of Calcutta for the address adopted at the public meeting held there on the 6th of September. " To be assured that, in the opinion of those who. living in India, are best qualified to judge of measures affecting their own interests and those of the community, I have 'amply and fully realised all their expectations,' and have acquired some title to the 'gratitude of India,' is of itself an ample recompense. "My main object in going to India, at a time of life when most men are thinking of leaving it was the hope that I might do some good there, and my ambition has always been that when history came to record the process by which the territories ac-quired and retained by so many heroic efforts were consolidated into one vast and flourishing empire, based on the surest foundations of humanity and justice, and cemented by the loyal attachment of 150,000,000 native subjects advancing rapidly in prosperity and civilisation, some humble niche might be found for my name under that of the great and good Lord Canning, as of one who thoroughly appreciated his policy, and who strove, not without some success, both to forward it in other ways, and to give it the primary requisite of a solid financial foundation.

" As regards this latter condition, if doubts ever existed, results have removed them. The accuracy of your statement 'that the finances of India were and are in such a satisfactory position as fully to justify the wise and statesmanlike measures of remission of taxation and increase of expenditure on public works and education which you then proposed, and which were unanimously agreed to and adopted by his Excellency the Governor-general and his Council,' is now proved with the certainty of a mathematical demonstration.

"As regards the Budget of 1861-2, the issue between the Home Government and that of India was whether we had restored an equilibrium, as I asserted in addressing the Legislative Council, or had made mistakes in our accounts which still left us with a deficit of £1,000,000, as was stated by the Secretary of State to the House of Commons.

"The actual accounts of the year are now completed, and show no deficit, but a surplus, out of which we were enabled to spend £500,000 more than we intended on public works, and still close the er, after defraying all known charges, with augmented cash balances.

The issue on the Budget of 1862-3 was of a like nature. The Indian Government, believing that they had a sufficient surplus, remitted the Besnow tax, the 3 per cent. income-tax, and the extra 5 per cent. import duty, and provided for an extra expenditure of £500,000 on public works and education.

"The Home Government denied the existence of the surplus; alleged that there was in reality a large deficit, which had only been concealed by gross blunders of mine in dealing with the accounts; and mblicly reprimended me and the Government of India for having remitted taxes and proposed inaced expenditure.

"Again the result decides between us. A slight and temporary increase of cash balances, when there ere extraneous receipts, might prove nothing; but a large and long continued increase of cash in the Treasury, without any extraneous receipts, and after satisfying all claims, is conclusive.

"The remissions of taxation, the increased expen diture on public works, are in operation, and for months past the full remittances asked for by England have been regularly made. There have been no loans; prize-money has been repaid, but none eived; arrears have been paid up more closely; liabilities have been diminished.

If, under such circumstances, the Secretary of State had been right in the fact that there deficit, and, as a consequence, in the mode of stating the accounts which made a deficit appear, the cash balances must long ere this have shown it by a decline below the amount at corresponding periods of the preceding year. No one has even pretended to suggest any temporary or exceptional cause which, in the absence of loans, could for more than eighteen menths together have caused a steady, progressive and large increase in these cash balances, which for years previously had been as steadily declining, unthere had been a bong fide change from a deficit to a surplus of real income over real expenditure.
"So long, therefore, as the cash balances keep up without loans, I will not say at the present unpre codented amount of £19,600,000, but at an amount not below that of the corresponding period of last year, you may safely assume that if any authority. however high, asserts there is a deficit, he must be prepared to confute not me only, but a far more formidable opponent, the 'inexorable logic of facts.' "You admit to the tone and manner of the proceedings which compelled me to resign office. ith your permission I will refrain from entering on topics of a personal nature.

"As regards myself individually, I should have been content to leave the defence of my measures this year, as I did last, to time and accomplished lacts; and if I have taken a more active part it is mainly because I found myself left by Lord Canning's lamented death the sole surviving representative in England of a policy with which it was my pride to have been associated, and which I could not patiently sit still and see misrepresented, reversed, and cen enred.

"It is my deep conviction that the welfare of India depends mainly on the observance of three principles, which were the mainspring of the policy Lord Canning's Government during the time I -had the honour of a seat in it :---

"1. That India must be governed for the good of in other words, that the national, and intellectual improvement of the 150,000,000 of native population, and a fair regard for their national wishes, feelings, and usages, must be the primary object of Indian Government.

"2. That the encouragement of independent

European capital and enterprise, in order to open the communications, develope the resources, and cultivate the waste lands of India, is of vital importance as the most powerful means of raising wages, cheepening capital, increasing exports, and generally erating the material improvement of the masses of native populat or.

"8. That these results, and generally the blessings of a good government satisfactory to India, are to be attained on one condition, and one onlythat the Government of India shall be I mean in the local authorities, controlled by the local Governments; in the local Government of influence classes, a fair and tany interesting states of influence in the policy and administration of his Government, the knows whether he would wish to council; and in the Governor-general in Council, controlled, in large and national matters, by the authority, which to-day may be for him and to-morrow adverse. He can decide between a system tralised bureau, whether it be in Calcutta ruling Madras and Bombay in detail, or, still worse, miles off, in Westminster, subjecting Madras, Bombay, and Calcutta alike to the minute supervision and interference of an authority destitute of that local experience, and inaccessible to those influences of public opinion which are the first essential conditions of all good government.

"I may refer briefly to a few practical proofs of

these principles.

"As regards the first, of governing India conformably to the feelings, the wishes, and the true interests of the native population, I may mention the concession of the right of adoption; the confirmation of the Oude Talookdars and other native nobility and gentry in their landed estates; the general introduction of moderate and fixed assessment of lands, and advance towards the principle of a permanent settlement; the appointment of native justices, judges, and members of the Legislative Council; the extension of native education; and, though last not least, the remission of the licensetax and 2 per cent. income-tax.

"As regards the second principle, of encouragement to European capital and enterprise, the resolution as to the sale of waste lands, the large outlay in public works, and the efforts made to extend Small-cause Courts, to improve the police, and otherwise to simplify and cheapen the administration of justice, especially as regards small contracts, speak

"The establishment of local Legislative Councils; the introduction of native and non-official members into these and the Imperial Legislative Council; the publicity of their debates, and the general adoption of publicity as the rule of Government proceedings; the full concession of the liberty of speech, of the press, and of association; and, I may add, the whole policy of the latter years of Lord Canning's Government, are a proof that the third principle was not overlooked, and that our earnest desire was to foster and encourage a genuine Indian public opinion, not of one class, race, religion, or presidency only, but of all India, which should have its due weight in guiding, assisting, restraining, and influencing the policy and measures of the governing body.

"Lord Canning's Government has been rebuked for remitting the license-tax, the 2 per cent. incometax, and the 10 per cent. import duty. Its proposed extra expenditure on native education and in public works has been censured and countermanded.
"The creation of a fee simple tenure has been negatived, and the resolution as to the sale of waste lands indefinitely suspended and clogged with impracticable conditions, after being considered by all India for nine months as a final settlement; and, lastly, a tone has been systematically assumed to-wards the Governor-general of India in Council, and opportunities have been studiously sought to magnify unimportant differences and to criticise and reverse measures decided in India, which to my mind are only explicable on the supposition that there is a settled purpose to lower his authority, and to concentrate the Government in the Indian-office at Westminster.

"To tate the principles at issue is sufficient for India, but in England more is required.

"Public opinion in England is well disposed tovards India, but it is very imperfectly informed.

"Every one wishes to see India well governed: every one admits in the abstract that to be verned it must be governed on the spot, but there is not sufficient practical knowledge of the real state of India, since the mutiny, to be able always to withstand the cry, which is sure to be raised on all occasions by those interested in keeping India in leading-strings, that constant interference from home is necessary to protect the natives against European oppression.

interesta as adverse.

The intelligent native is no less interested than the European in a system which gives him, through his representatives in the Imperial and local councils, through his associations and organs of the press through the constant intercourse of nations with the official classes, a fair and daily increasing share which remitted the licence-tax and released twothirds of the payers of Income-tax, and one which would have perpetuated those imposts.

"He knows whether the taxpayers of India wish for some control over the expenditure of their money in England, and whether such an instance as the Mysore grant was considered as a boon to the native

"In a word, he knows whether he prefers the system of policy and of Government associated with the name of Lord Canning, or that indicated by the spirit of the despatches in which Lord Canning has been overruled and censured. But the people of England do not know this; their instincts are always generous, and, even when opposed to their own interests, they are determined that wrong shall not be done to the native millions of India. Hence they are easily led by those who style themselves Indian authorities on the strength of unmeasured denunciation of European interlopers and professions of extreme tenderness for the native population.

Lord Canning's death is in this respect a great misfortune, for no one would have dared to impugn his title to be considered a true friend of the natives of India, or to have stigmatised measures which had his approval as dictated by subservience to a narrow

"His voice, however, is silent in the grave, and it only remains for those who venerated his character, who admired his policy, and who shared his measures, to exert what influence they can to prevent that which is the lasting monument of his fame the system of Indian Government inaugurated during the last years of his administration from being subverted or defaced.

"You may depend upon it that, whether in or out of Parliament, so far as health and opportunities permit, no effort of mine shall be wanting to advocate what I believe to be the cause of good Government in India; and I thank you for this address, not only for its kind expressions to myself personally, but still more because I feel that such an expression of opinion strengthens my hands in supporting Lord Canning's policy, coming as it does from such an influential body of memorialists, urging weighty opinions in moderate language, and, above all, stating in terms of unmistakable sincerity, that the object for which they contend is the moral and material improvement of our vast Indian Empire, and the benefit alike of all the races, creeds, and classes of her Majesty's subjects in British India.

"I remain, Dear Sir, yours faithfully, LAING. " S

A SUBSTITUTE FOR COTTON.

As Mr. Harben's parturient mountain has produced only that ridiculous mouse, the Zostera marina, there is some reason to fear that if the Lancashire operatives do not obtain employment until sea grass supersedes the cottonplant they are likely to dine with Duke Humphery far more frequently than will be good for their health. Strictly speaking, there is but little prospect of any absolute substitute for cotton being discovered, though a raw ma terial possessing many of the good qualities of that staple may very possibly be found. Indeed, there are grounds for supposing that the fibre of the Urtica heterophylla may prove of no trifling service in supplying the deficiency so deeply felt by our manufacturers and those dependent on them. It is described as of "great strength, and of a peculiar silky and woolly-like appearance," and may be procured in almost any quantity from the Neilgherries. The fibre-producing nettle is a perennial plant, throwing out "fresh shoots from the roots and stems with unabated vigour for a period of three or four years." The mode of cultivation pursued and recommended by Mr. McIvor is to sow the seed in rows, fifteen inches apart, and to cut down the young shoots twice a-year, in January and July. The shoots cut in the latter month average four feet in height, while in the former they attain a length of five to six feet. The soil best adapted for the cultivation of this plant is the rich alluvial deposits at the foot of ravines. It is indigenous to the Neilgherries, and grows luxuriantly at an elevation of from four to six thousand feet above the sea. The July crop yields very nearly 500lbs of clear fibre to the acre, of which one-fourth is of very superior quality, being obtained from the young and tender shoots. The January crop, however, produces nearly 700lbs, but of a coarser quality of fibre, "owing to the shoots being matured by the setting in of the dry season in December." Mr. McIvor, therefore, suggests that there should be three or four cuttings in the year, as it is from the youngest shoots that the finest fibre is procured. Nothing can be more simple than the process of extracting the fibre, which is accomplished on the spot, so that there is no cost for the carriage of waste matter. Is it not worth while, then, to attempt the cultivation of this useful plant on the bogs of Ireland, or in the fenny districts of Lincolnshire, Norfolk, and Cambridge? Is there no one desirous to emulate the fame of the late Mr. John Warnes of East Norfolk?

HONOUR TO THE BRAVE!

THE most dashing exploit throughout the last war in China has gone unrewarded. No more brilliant feat of arms was performed during that eminently successful campaign than the dash made by Lieutenant Macgregor's Sikhs at the Tartar cavalry at the battle of Singho, on the 12th of August, 1860. That gallant officer had been stationed with a detachment of thirty Sikhs belonging to Fanc's Horse, to guard Captain Stirling's half battery, when suddenly a body of Tartar cavalry, at least three to one, rode boldly at the guns. Not a moment was to be lost. Placing himself at the head of his men Lieutenant Macgregor, without allowing them time to count the odds, gave the word to charge, and away they went like hounds started from the leash. Sikhs and Tartars rushed at one another without pause or hesitation, but in the shock the latter were overthrown, and scattered to the winds. As they closed, Lieutenant Macgregor had singled out his man, and was in the act of spearing him, when one of the Tartar's comrades discharged a matchlock loaded with slugs right in his face. Three of the slugs lodged in his chest, and two in his forehead, but the superiority of the Sikhs over the Tartars was definitively established. adventurous passage of arms was specially noticed by Major-General Sir Robert Napier, no mean judge in such matters; and the late lamented Lord Herbert, in moving a vote of thanks to the forces in China, spoke of this "important achievement" in the highest terms, ascribing to it much of the confidence with which our native cavalry were inspired in their subsequent encounters with the enemy. Indeed, there could not be two opinions on the subject. At the time it was generally expected in this country that the Victoria Cross would be conferred on the valiant young subaltern who had covered himself with such renown. These expectations, however, were illusory, and to the present moment Lieutenant Macgregor has received neither honorary distinction, nor even the promise of brevet promotion, for his distinguished gallantry in the field. There are some who attempt to account for this strange neglect by imputing to Sir Hope Grant a feeling of jealousy to. wards a "Company's" officer. But this is evidently absurd. Sir Hope Grant must have seen far too much of that service during the campaign in Oude to regard them with any littleness of feeling. Himself a thorough soldier, he must have learned fully to appreciate their soldierly qualities, and to recognise their merit as brothers in arms. Still, the fact remains that no reward of any kind has been bestowed upon Lieutenant Macgregor. And the omission is the more surprising because that young officer had already won his spurs in previous actions in India. At Durriabad, at Maharajpore, at Punchgawa, and at Jerwah-where he slew four sepoys in single combat—he led his detachment of Hodson's Horse in a manner that would have done honour even to that dashing sabreur, and on two occasions he was severely wounded. For those services he was appointed second in command of the 1st Regiment of Hodson's Horse, but that post, with its emoluments, he resigned at the outbreak of the China war in exchange for active service in the field. How he acquitted himself it is needless to repeat, but thus far the only acknowledgment of his prowess in the China campaign has been a notice in the Gazette and in the House of Lords. Since his return to India Sir Hugh Rose has appointed him second in command of the 2nd Regiment Hodson's Horse, thus restoring him to the position he held previous to that brilliant episode, and, so far as Sir Hugh is concerned, that was all he could reasonably expect. But how is it that Sir Hope Grant has done nothing for his highspirited subaltern? A word from him would have called forth from the Horse Guards a substantial recognition of an exceptional achievement, but that word has not been spoken. Truly they manage these things better in France.

THE LAST REPRESENTATIVE OF THE PEISHWA.

THE last of the Peishwas, Bajee Rao, is entitled to the credit of having chosen as his adopted children the best possible representatives of his own character and career. The atrocities perpetrated by Nana Sahib and his kinsmen were in entire keeping with the practices of the Mahrattas. The student of Indian history will readily remember how, after the battle of Poona, in 1817, two English officers of the name of Vaughan, who were travelling through the Mahratta country with a small escort, having surrendered to superior numbers on condition that their lives should be spared, were barbarously hanged upon the spot. A young officer of the Bombay engineers was in like manner seized and shot, and the women and dependents of the Poona brigade who fell into the hands of the Mahrattas were tortured to death and horribly mutilated. Cruelty and perfidy were, indeed, characteristic qualities of those inhuman marauders, and appear to have been transmitted without deterioration to their latest descendents. The chivalrous but ill-timed magnanimity of Sir John Malcolm obtained for Bajee Rao treatment far other than his private and political crimes had merited. Instead of being immured for life in a fortress, he was allowed a princely income equal to very nearly £100,000 per annum, and was further permitted to fix his residence at Bithoor, a place of sanctity in the eyes of Hindoos, and much visited by pilgrims. Whether this was a mere oversight, or an act of inconsiderate generosity based upon pity and contempt for the fallen, there is now no means of ascertaining, nor is it a matter of any moment. Whatever the motive, the choice of Bithoor as the abode of the ex-Peishwa, was simply an act of fatuity. for thus the Hindoos would have in constant remembrance the martyrdom, as it were, of the once potent exile. It was as the champion of Hindooism that Sivajee obtained such a rapid and marvellous ascendancy over his fellow-countrymen. He was the first to check the progress of Islam in Central India, and the Peishwa was originally the Brahmin Minister, or High Priest, of the Mahratta Confederacy. Traditions to this effect would long remaining floating on the surface of the Hindoo population, and would naturally take root in a place that still connected the fallen dynasty with a sacred pilgrimage. The pilgrims, too, on returning to their distant homes, would talk of the State and munificence of the fallen Prince, still great, liberal, and pious in the midst of misfortunes caused by his determined opposition to the enemies of the Hindoo religion. In this instance, as in so many others, the conduct of the British Government illustrates their profound ignorance of the real temper and disposition of the people, whose welfare they profees to study before all other considerations. save the maintenance of the British supremacy. And yet here we find them taking infinite pains to preserve a nucleus for future disturbances, and to furnish a rallying point for fanatics and other disaffected individuals. The consequences were precisely what might have been expected. Bajee Rao's adopted sons. Nana Sahib and Bala Rao, with their nephew, Rao Sahib, seized the opportunity afforded by the mutiny of the sepoys, to raise the standard of rebellion, and revive the darkest memories of the times of the Mahrattas. It is needless to recapitulate the events that have gained for Cawnpore such a gloomy notoriety. British prowess was at length everywhere triumphant, and the Peishwa's representatives were long in hourly terror of their lives. It is probable that the two brothers, the Nana and Bala Rao, died natural deaths, accelerated by fear, privations, and fatigue. Their nephew, however, was less fortunate. After sharing the long flight of Tantia Topec he at length found a resting place in a remote fastness in the Jummoo territory. But though public justice was for a time baffled, private revenge tracked him surely and without fault. Information of the fugitive's hiding-place being thus obtained, Mr. Macnabb was charged with the delicate and responsible duty of effecting his arrest. With admirable tact and perseverance that intelligent officer, aided by the loyal co-operation of the Maharajah of Cashmere, succeeded in capturing the miscreant, and in conveying him within the British territories. After a fair and careful investigation before a magistrate Rao Sahib was brought to trial, convicted, and condemned to death. The sentence, and there was never a more righteous one, was carried out on the 31st August, and the last representative of the Peishwa expiated on the gallows at Bithoor the crimes of perfidy, rebellion, and murder.

NATIVE GRIEVANCES.

SIR,—We, some of the Indians at present in London, would feel ourselves highly obliged by your insertion, in your valuable columns, of the enclosed letter, addressed to us by an esteemed countryman of ours. The liberal and enlightened support you have ever given to all measures proposed for the benefit of India induces us to hope you will acquiesce in our present request. We have made a similar application to the Indian press, in order that the subject may be ventilated beforehand, and that, at the same time, the English public may be made fully acquainted with the requirements of India.—We remain, sir, your obedient servants.

MICHAEL M. DUTT.
12th October, 1862.

TO THE NATIVES OF MY BELOVED COUNTRY, INDIA.

GENTLEMEN,—I beg I may be allowed to direct your attention to some of the most serious grievances of which India has to complain, so that, before the next Session, we may be able to Michael M. S. Dutt, Esq.

give our assistance, by information and support, to the distinguished members of the Imperial Parliament who advocate their redress. Those grievances I have, to the best of my knowledge, appended.

A few remarks will here be necessary. First, as to the Income tax. A general irritation on account of that impost pervades Indiavation borne out by those of Colonel Sykes and others during the last Session. As to the second point, one native association, that of Bombay has already sent in a memorial, the subject of which will form matter for discussion in the next Ses sion. As to the third, our native youths, whether from Calcutta or Bombay, are now studying hard for the service; and if we only interest ourselves early in their favour, all the difficulties which may hereafter oppose their entrance into the service will be smoothed down. As to the fourth, Sir C. Wood, having, in his seat in the Parliament, during the last Session, announced his approval of permanent land tenure throughout India, and also acknowledged the necessity of maintaining the zemindary class between the chiefs and the peasantry, it is only just and fair that the most ancient zemindars, who have been unjustly deprived of their estates, should be reinstated in them, the more so, as, by such an act of justice, the revenues of India would not suffer in the least degree. As to the fifth, the return made last Session upon the motion of Mr. Kinnaird, and the unjustifiable treatment, not to say persecution, of the Rev. Mr. Long, are of themselves sufficient to call for our active intervention on behalf of our fellow-countrymen. As to the sixth, Sir C. Wood, in the last session, having approved of the late Lord Canning's measure of investing the native talookdars of Oudh with magisterial power, thereby acknowledging the principle of self-government, it is only just and fair that also in other parts of India the zemindars who are, in every respect, competent should be placed on a similar footing, thereby proving the sincerity of such an approval of Lord Canning's policy on the part of Sir C. Wood. It cannot be too strongly pressed upon your notice that the Government have annually taken from us, the Indians, eleven millions sterling, since the last mutiny, and that if all the grievances complained of were redressed, but little necessity would exist for such an enormous outlay at the expense of India. This, allow me to observe, is not my opinion only, but that of the late Lord Canning, Colonel Sykes, Mr. Buxton, Mr. Bright, and other distinguished public men.

I beg to conclude by expressing the earnest hope that as our distinguished countryman, Mr. G. M. Tagore, is the first Indian who has been called to the British bar, he will do us the honour of taking the lead in advocating the above desiderata.—I have the honour to remain, gentlemen, your most devoted countryman, (Signed) C. POUROOSHOTTUM MOODELLIAR.

LIST OF THE DESIDERATA.

I. The abolition of the Income tax and the equalisation of the Indian tariff, as advocated by Mr. Brown, in his pamphlet published by John Dickinson, Esq., jun., President of the India Reform Society.

II. The admission of qualified native Indians into the Medical Service.

III. The admission of qualified natives into the Civil Service.

IV. The restoration of native zemindars to their estates, of which they have been unjustly deprived.

V. To oppose the passing of a contract bill, by which our countrymen would be degraded into the mere serfs of the indigo planters.

VI. The necessity of appointing the zemindars, possessing due qualification, as honorary magistrates.

MISCLLLANEOUS.

MEDICAL HISTORY OF THE WAR IN CHINA. - The War-office has been furnished with a medical history of the war in the north of China in 1860. from the pen of Dr. Muir, the principal medical officer of the expeditionary army. It was a motley host that went thither, he writes; haughty reginients of highborn Patans and Sikh Irregular Horse were there; Punjab Infantry containing mutinous Hindoos in their ranks; a regiment from the ancient and faithful army of Madras; 3,000 Canton and Hong Kong coolies, drilled to carry the baggage and the wounded, and known as the "Bamboo Rifles," from the bamboo they carried for bearing their burdens; European regiments, the bone and muscle of the army, drawn from various countries; camp followers--balf-castes. Gentoos, Mahrattas, Arabs, Negroes, Japanese, Seedes, Bengalese, Cingalese—diverse in religion, language, and customs, but all united in worshipping the lucre. 100,000 tons of transport shipping and fourteen large merchant vessels floated in the picturesque harbour of Hong Kong for the conveyance of this force at a cost to England of £165,000 a month. A new feature was inaugurated in this expedition, the fitting out with every medical and surgical appliance the finest London hospitals possess of two noble hospital ships, the Mauritius and Melbourne, followed afterwards by others. Field panniers, "medical companions," and "medical comforts" were provided in abundance, and were found invaluable. The first offensive operation was the temporary occupation of Chusan, and, noted as it has been for its unhealthiness, the force on this occasion had seldom more than two per cent. in hospital. It was remarked that, although it was not twenty years since the English occupied this island, the position of many of the graves of our dead could with difficulty be traced. The voyage to the Gulf of Pecheli follows, the junction with the French force, the landing near Pehtang, of filthy towns the filthiest, and then the capture of the Taku forts. In all these forts unslaked lime was found in large quantities, collected to be used against the assaulting party, but fortunately not in fact employed. One man was slain by an arrow penetrating his chest, and several were wounded by arrows, projected by that ancient weapon of warfare, the bow. The arrows were from four to five feet long, feathered and pointed with iron, but none of them were poisoned or barbed. Smaller arrows were discharged from a cross-bow which was self-loading and fashioned not unlike a revolver pistol, some of which had a slow match with explosive powder and bullets fixed near the point. It was curious to find in one of the earliest civilised countries in the world there antique weapons arrayed against the new and scientific Minié rifle and Armstrong gun. Every medical officer noticed that the wounds made by the latter were positively frightful. The army then advanced to Tientsin and suffered from the sudden vicissitudes of temperature, the most potent cause of disease in China. On the 16th of September the temperature inside a Bengal tent was 90 degrees during part of the day, and rose to 142 degrees in the sun, and in the night it fell to 49 degrees, a variation of nearly 100 degrees in the 24 hours. Next month men had to stand sentry at Pekin with the thermometer four degrees below freezing point. But the percentage of sick to strength was but a trifle above five, and the amount of morality and sickness throughout the expedition was small; cholers never obtained a permenent lodgement in the camp, and marching under a tropical sun, none died from sun-stroke. At Tientsin most of the drinking water used was obtained from blocks of ice sold at twenty-five pounds for a penny; a block of it is often suspended in a room to reduce the temperature, as we place a fire in a stove to increase it. The men of Tientsin are described as a fine race, many of them six feet high, with broad shoulders and stalwart limbs; the few women seen were of such small stature that it seemed hard to understand how they could be the mothers of such robust men. On the march from Tientsin to Pekin, at Hoose-woo, the coolies and camp followers found in an enormous nawnbroker's shop an inexhaustible supply of clothing of all conceivable descriptions; so immense a stock, even after it had undergone the ordeal of "looting," that a fatigue party in a short time secured for public use no fewer than five hundred fur and sheepskin coats from an almost undistinguishable mass of garments. Arrived before Pekin, the army constantly sent its sick to Tientsin to be taken on board the hospital ships; the transport for the first few miles was accomplished by means of six hundred light "dhoolies," each suspended from its bamboo pole; there is no kind of sick transport equal to this, but the dhoolies sent from India were too heavy, and those used were manufactured in China; but the bulk of the journey was by "chops," or small junks, drawing little water, matted inside, and provided with good bamboo awnings. But for this river communication, says Dr. Muir, and the abundant supplies brought for sale by the country people, the condition of the army would have been most critical, "as the transport service had completely broken down; the campaign re-opened this great administrative question, but did not solve it." Dr. Rutherford, special sanitary officer of the force, has a few words to say of Pekin, with its wall of fifty feet in breadth, upon the top of which, after the capitulation, encampments of men, horses, and guns were formed. He witnessed the interment of the bodies of Lieutenant Anderson, Messrs. De Norman and Bowlby, and Private Phipps in the Russian burying ground immediately outside the walls. His sanitary report and Dr. Muir's history give an account of the health and management of the troops at every stage of the expedition, and Dr. Muir concludes with stating the practical conclusions he deduces from the experience of the campaign. Chief among them are the great superiority of the general hospital system as a whole over the (pure or modified) regimental system, and the unspeakable advantage to an army on active service of being attended by hospital ships of the size and equipment of the Mauritius and Melbourne. He submits that they should form a constituent part of the hospital equipment of our army, be put upon a permanent footing, have a staff of medical officers, and be used in times of peace for the transport of invalids from fereign stations. These ships, he considers, should be under the direct control of the General in command. He inclines to the opinion that transport should be placed in the hands of an independent and latifolia) into Algeria. This plant, well known in the presidencies of Madras and Bombay under the name of Mohee, and in Bengal under that of Moolah, is remarkable for the aromatic alcohol obtained from its blossoms by fermentation. The seed contains about thirty per cent. of its weight of a kind of oil, which is always in a solid state. and may be advantageously applied to the manufacture of candles and soap. The tree grows wild in India, constituting about one-sixth of the forests which lie in a line between Calcutta and Bombay. Its wood is as hard as teak, but not quite so durable.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The specie taken by the Indian and China mail steamer Ripon on the 20th was £369,073, distributed as follows, viz.:--£32,468 in gold for Alexandria; £1,630 in gold for Ceylon; £40,000 in gold for the Mauritius; £5,099 in gold and £35,000 in silver for Madras; £47,400 in silver for Calcutta; and £207,476 in silver for China and the Straits, the latter item comprising £77,187 remitted to China by Government.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

mished, 23.3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their rames, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the tunk roose conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 22nd September is, as usual, barren of news. The Viceroy, it is said, proposes to proceed to Madras on a visit to the Governor, whom he may, perhaps, succeed in stirring up to some degree of activity.

Some of our readers will thank us for inserting the rules issued by Mr. Beadon for the sale of unassessed waste lands and the redemption of the Land-tax on existing grants in Bengal. They appear to have been drawn up in a sufficiently liberal spirit. The upset price at which land is to be put up to auction is not to be less than five shillings, nor, in special cases, more than one pound sterling. While the extent of each grant is limited to 3,000 acres, an exception may be made in special cases. The Board of Revenue will prepare a list of the waste ands reserved for public purposes, and also a deed of sale granting the fee-simple proprietorship to purchasers.

Another official paper transferred to our pages contains the rules prescribed for the examination and control of the newly-appointed mmbeers of the Bengal Civil Service. It is a lengthy document, but framed with a view to secure the due fulfilment of the duties of public servants.

The Priestly scandal still furnishes the chief topic of discussion. Sir Hugh Rose having forbidden military officers to take any part in the proceedings of the Calcutta Club at the meeting convened for the 25th ult., it seems tolerably certain that the civilian members will carry by a large majority a vote for the Colonel's expulsion.

The Cash Balances at the end of July still amounted to very nearly 191 millions sterling, and certainly justify the memorial addressed to Lord Elgin by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, protesting against the withdrawal of Mr. Laing's extra grant of £380,000 for public works in 1862-63. There can be no doubt that there is no other mode, so unexceptionable or so remunerative, of employing funds at the disposal of Government.

The Calcutta subscription for the relief of the distressed Lancashire operatives has reached the respectable sum of £9,000.

The news from China is not of any importance. The Chinese Government has at length formally ceded Macao to the Portuguese, and a treaty has been concluded with Belgium as well as with Portugal. Cholera was raging at Pekin, and likewise in Japan.

We are requested to draw public attention to a notification announcing a competitive examination of candidates for the Civil Service of India, to be held next June or July. The candidates must be natural born subjects of her Majesty, from eighteen to twenty-two years of age, and sound in constitution and character.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND IN INDIA.

The character and attainments of the Church of England clergy in India, and the general as well as spiritual influence which they exercise, is a subject in which all are interested. Practically Presbyterianism and Nonconformity are confined to the Presidency cities and Allahabad. In the case of the army it may be asserted that threefourths of the men and nearly all the officers are Churchmen. Though some two thirds of all British-born subjects in India are Scotch in their origin, yet the fact that they arrive at an early age in India, that if they do not attend the Church of England they will in the interior find no church at all, and that that Church is more favourable to perfect freedom of action in religious matters than the stricter discipline of kirk-sessions and presbyteries, makes the Church of England the general mother of Scotch as well as English and Irish out of the Presidency towns. Highly valued as the services of the Presbyterian and Methodist American Missionaries are in some parts of the Mofussil, the position of these self-devoted men forbids the formation of anything like an ecclesiastical tie. On the other hand, the Church of England is largely endowed, has all the trappings of bishops, and archdeacons, and cathedrals, boasts of a regular "service" many hundreds strong, and not only supplies almost all civil and military stations with chaplains, but, through its societies in India and at home, sends out additional clergy and many missionaries, who are always available in the absence of a regular chaplain. Great dignity and influence, as well as power, are thus given to the clergy, and it becomes a matter of importance to Government and to society that the men should be equal to their position. A bad chaplain may ruin a regiment or set a station by the ears. A chaplain who does his duty with tact and wisdom should be the centre of all that is good, the source of all that is progressive in a station.

We, therefore, welcome a publication by the Bishop of Calcutta entitled "Suggestions to the Clergy on the Discharge of their Spiritual Duties." The good Bishop Wilson issued similar suggestions in 1844, and his successor has now had sufficient time to understand the difficulties which beset his own path and the innumerable references made to him arising from disputes between chaplains and the laity, as well as those which meet the young assistant chaplain when first he lands in the country. The Bishop cannot appoint the olergy whom he licenses to preach in his diocese. He has no control, nor even influence so far as we are aware, over the Secretary of State, with whom alone ecclesiastical patronage rests, still less has he anything to do with the missionary societies, who select their own agents. The wellknown evangelical enthusiasm of his predecessor. and his influence with members of the Court of Directors, had the practical result of excluding all from the diocese except clergymen of the same views. Bishop Cotton, if in the highest sense not less evangelical, is more broad, and belongs to a party which has certainly very little that is "Recordite" about it, while he has no more control, even indirect, over the kind of men whom it pleases Sir C. Wood to send him than Lord Elgin over the Civil Service. It is the more necessary, then, that he should, after a wise and kindly fashion, exercise his episcopal authority so as to check eccentricity, correct mistakes, quicken slothfulness, incite to zeal, and generally stir up his clergy at once "to do all things decently and in order," and " to feed the Church of God which he has purchased with his own blood." In a land like India, and deprived of everything that may be called a career, the chaplain will do his duty best who has the self-denial of a true missionary. Bishop Cotton's "Suggestions" are well-suited to produce the result of order and decency in conducting the services. For his next Charge he doubtless reserves the higher theme of spirituality of mind and self-devotedness in touched the great question of how far chaplains | should engage in the conversion of the heathen. We remember Polehampton's aspirations in this matter and the self accusations in which he indulged because of his inability to act up to his ideal. The Bishop at present goes no farther than earnestly to advise every chaplain "to acquire a sound knowledge of one of the Indian vernaculars." Why should he not assist the missionary as the missionary so frequently assists him? Why should he be unable, as he generally is, to minister to Native Christians whom it is so desirable to send forth into native society away from the hot-house atmosphere of villages and mission stations? Why should a man who has been ordained to preach the gospel to every creature, and who has generally much leisure, refuse the year's toil in acquiring a language which would enable him to speak a word in season to the heathen around him? The Bishop himself. at his years, has set a good example in this respect, and is entitled to speak with authority.

The position of Church of England clergymen in India is peculiar, inasmuch as the Act of Uniformity does not extend to this country. The Bishop, with due regard to his own vows, has a large power of interpretation and adaptation of ecclesiastical rules to the peculiar circumstances of India. In the hands of a man of broad views and much charity, this power will prove most useful. Accordingly, Bishop Cotton uses a certain freedom with the service, such as would please Lord Ebury. He allows the clergy, in hot weather, and at other times if necessary, to read any one of these three-the Morning Prayer, Litany and Communion Service-alone with a sermon, or two of them together. He provides admirably selected passages from morning or evening prayer for a parade service in the open air. He does not object to the administration of the Holy Communion after or instead of evening prayers, for the sake of soldiers. He is favourable to the practice of requesting a layman to read the lessons, as this varies the service, affords relief to the minister, and testifies in a slight degree to the rights and responsibilities of the laity as members of the church. He substitutes the word "seasonable" for "moderate" in the prayer for rain, as being more correct in this country. He has adapted the prayer for British India to the changes in 1858 and the more recent establishment of the High Courts. He has supplied what is so necessary for a church surrounded by idolatry, a missionary prayer; and has appointed Epiphany for missionary sermons and collections. He "warmly and heartily "approves of a weekly offertory, as it rests on scriptural authority, primitive usage, and the manifest intention of the Church. To this we would add that it would remove from the Church the reproach that, as a whole, it contributes for pious purposes so very much less than the Free Presbyterian and Dissenting Churches. The Bishop would postpone the offices for the churching of women and baptism till after service; would baptise by immersion in the case of a convert; allows marriage at any hour between sunrise and sunset; remits part of the fees for a marriage license in the case of soldiers whom military discipline prevents from waiting for banns; and forbids "wreaths and jewellery" in female candidates at Confirmation as "out of place at the renewal of the vow to renounce the temptations of the world." While the Bishop tells the clergy that they ought, especially in military stations, to take an active part in the establishment and support of lectures, institutes, libraries, and all means of rational and wholesome recreation; and that it is one of their plainest duties to assist their flocks in the way of general improvement. and to supply them with helps to escape temptation, he warns them against the danger of withdrawing time from directly spiritual duties, or from study and the careful preparation of sermons; and to abstain from such employments and relaxations, even though they may themselves consider them lawful, as make their brethren to offend. Would that the clergy could act on the hint that "such very brief sermons as are somethe discharge of duty. Hence he leaves un- times preached in the present day ought to be extremely pointed, earnest, and impressive, if they are to escape the charge of carelessness and in-difference. Finally the Bishop speaks of establishing a Diocesan Board of Education.

Liberal and wise as these and other "suggestions" of the Bishop are, we regret that they should be marred by two provisions, the tendency of which is to prevent prayer-meetings with other Christians. There are some chaplains who will be only too glad to take advantage of the Bishop's remarks to discourage every manifestation of godliness on the part of laymen, where it is connected with or originated by the Presbyterian or Dissenter. Not only does the Bishop declare it unlawful to open the churches for " prayer meetings at which the church service is not used, or missionary meetings," but he will express no opinion on the question of the clergy joining in meetings for prayer and religious exhortation with Christians not belonging to the Church. "This must, of course, be left to the liberty and private judgment of each individual, provided that nothing is done contrary to our own discipline. He only desires to point out that in reference to the special services and congregations of the Church of England, the invitations of other bodies must not be allowed to supersede the regulations of our prayer book, and the ordinances to which our own obedience is solemnly pledged." The "I am holier than thou" idea is, unconsciously, at the bottom of this prohibition in the one case and shirking of Christian duty in the other. Nowhere again, and least of all in India, in the face of observant heathenism, should that spirit be manifested which drove men like the Wesleys and Whitefield from the Church, which left the working of the two greatest religious revolutions in England to the Puritans and Methodists, which persecuted and tortured the people of Scotland generation after generation, and which still feeds with devotees the ranks of Popery and the erratic circles of the Plymouth Brethren, and the "Catholic Apostolic Church." →Friend of India.

TEAK, SAUL AND DEODAR.

The materials of every country are intimately connected with its history and progress. This consideration induces us to offer some remarks on the chief timbers of which our public works are constructed, and the forests producing them.
These have of late years attracted much attention, and have come under some degree of surveillance.

The primeval tracts of teak extended on the Tenasserim and Malabar coasts almost from the seaboard to the slopes of the mountain ranges, but the Moulmein forests visited by Dr. Wallich in 1828 have receded fifty miles towards the Siamese border, and the stately tree described with rapture by H. Van Rheede, the Dutch Governor of Cochin, in writing to Amsterdam, as ingens arbor usque ad Calicolam, has now to be sought for under the Neilgherry peaks. The market value of the timber has more than doubled, as can be seen by referring to Milburn's "Oriental Com-merce," 1813, long scantlings having risen in price from Rs. 1 to Rs. 21, or even Rs. 3 per cubic foot, at which rates sound logs are greedily bought. Hence much as teak is valued, it is found too costly for many purposes to which it was formerly applied. It is prized more than any other timber in the Government dockyards, and is unquestionably the best wood for railway sleepers. Large plantations are being formed both in Burmah and Malabar. In the latter, originated by the foresight of Mr. Conolly, whose name they bear, 120,000 trees are annually planted, but this number is greatly in excess of what will be ultimately obtained. The steady enlargement of these plantations should be kept in view, the calculations being based on the principle of feeding the public works, while they pay their own expenses.

Teak plantations in Java commenced by Sir Stamford Raffles have succeeded well; they supply a regular stock for ship-building, and are selfsupporting. The French have attempted to acclimatize the tree in Algeria, but without success, the climate being too dry.

North-Western Provinces, used for all engineering purposes. This valuable tree extends in an almost unbroken belt along the Terai from Hurdwar on the Ganges to the Brahmapootra. Immense quantities of the wood are rafted down the and after long search we discover a gangway, and rivers of Bengal to Calcutta, the trade affording a perilons employment to a large body of people. We are, however, in a great measure dependent for fature supply upon Jung Bahadoor of Nepaul, fleet, in days when eight knots an hour was and the Nawab of Rampore, the Saul tracts having been given away with our eyes open. From a singular aptitude of the seed for speedy germination, the Saul is not so liable to extermination as the Teak, which, on the contrary, vegetates very slowly. Perhaps on this account Saul of his career he does not cease to feel a lingering plentations have not yet been systematically attempted or thought necessary. Oudh and the Central Provinces have some wooded tracts. It her captain, her officers, her passengers with is in the Punjab that the greatest want of suitable timber has been experienced, but in the adjoining territories of Cashmere, Chumba, and his seniors on board which he, then a raw youth, Bussahir the mountain ridges bristle with forests of the Deodar Pine.

What oak is to England, teak to Burmah, and saul to Bengal, deedar is to the Himalayas, the where first he was birched. And even if he did aterial generally used for carpentry and housebuilding purposes. Fragrant with resin and easily wrought, it is equally in demand for boatbuilding on the Indus, for dockyards at Kurra chee, for sluice-gates of canals, and for the permanent way of the Punjab and Delhi railways. The Himalayan cedar (deodar), which Dr. Hooker considers to be the same as the cedar of Lebanon, delights in snow clad ravines, and to obtain the timber the giant trunks are hurled over precipices and floated down rapids which eclipse the slides of Switzerland and the Tyrolwhereby the logs are so battered and splintered as to be comparatively worthless. It is partly to suggest some method of overcoming these diffioulties, partly to look for new materials, that Dr Cleghorn, the experienced Madras Conservator, has been deputed to survey the pine forests of the If he can devise means for obtain-Himalayas. ing the timber in better condition and greater quantity, there will be no small benefit to the State.

When we consider the progress in civilisation of the last few years, the widely-extending system of railways, the iron foundries at Beypore, Porto Novo, and Kumaon, consuming much wood as charcoal, the Gun Carriage Factory at Futtyghur, the Engineering College at Roorkee, the workshops at Madhupoor on the Ravee, and at Dowlaishwaram on the Godavery, all in want of seasoned timber, it well becomes us to husband our resources, to economise our material, to introduce some machinery when practicable, so that wastage may be reduced and each timber applied to its proper purpose. Lord Dalhousie initiated measures of conservancy in Pegu and Upper India; Lord Harris followed in Madras, and Sir Bartle Frere has enlarged the department in Bombay. The system so extended now contains the following officers: -Dr. Brandis, the able Superintendent in British Burmah; Mr. Dalzell, in Bombay; Captain Beddome, officiating in Madras; Mr. Kohlhoff in Travancore, Captain Pearson in the Central Provinces, and Major Ramsey in Kumaon .- Friend of India.

OUR FIRST MARINE SANITARIUM.

Opposite the Government Dockyard in Calcontra lies a great floating monster, which attracts the eye of the passenger as he sails up or down the Hooghly, by its unsightly proportions and hastrous yellow paint. It belongs to no order of marine architecture, such as even the Dutch recognise. It might be a gigantic steamer, only that it is destitute of paddle wheels and screw. It is too clean for a police hulk, and even the most ignorant "griffin" has not formed the opinion that a despotic Government employs innecent Hindoos working at the galleys. It is too large for a floating chapel, and although it is moored so near to the pleasant residence of the Controller of Marine Affairs, no one would take it for his pleasure yacht. If there were the alightest attempt at ornament about it, we might suppose it to be a new barge for the Governor- private soldiers when sick are apt to grumble, to lie waste for years.

general who, now that he has become a Viceroy, might be expected to demand more accommodation.
We puzzle ourselves as to what the monster can be, we make many ineffectual attempts to board her, discern that this is our first Marine Sanitarium. This is the good old Bentinck, erst known as the finest of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's thought great speed, and men cared more for roomy berths and iced champagne than for quick passages and early news. The unfortunate exile in the East is known to be more the victim of old associations than other men. To the latest day attachment for the vessel which brought him as a boy to India. He traces the success in life of curious interest. All the agonies of sea-sickness which he suffered, all the "snubs" on the part of underwent, are forgotten, and he would go out of his way to visit the old ship, as he would to see the cottage in which he was born, or the school not himself come out in the vessel, did he not there first meet his bride, does he not know the very room in which, after running the gauntlet of smiling officers and stewards, and too curious lady passengers, he spent his first five minutes of bliss 2

If there be any who have such associations in connection with the Hindostan or the Bentinck, we advise them to avoid the Hooghly. The former, fortunately prevented from taking out the mails and passengers a year ago, lies worm-eaten and condemned to be the receptacle of lumber or coals. The latter has undergone the process of metempsychosis, and has emerged into a new state of existence, not to be recognised by those who, ten years ago, danced on her deck, dined in her saloon, or spoke fond words in her cabins. She appears as an hospital ship, ready to be towed down, when the monsoon ceases to blow, five weeks hence, to her moorings near Cowcolly Lighthouse. Where her engines groaned wearily there are air-shafts and decks, where her wheels revolved heavily there are bath rooms and latrines, where many a merry party dined there is a more confined space with still more roomy chambers on either side for sick officers. The gangway lands us on the upper deck, where are the library and general lounge, and where first class patients will dine. The whole is roofed in with a thick wooden and canvas covering. Below is ample accommodation for the sleeping, bathing, cooking, lounging, and drugging, if necessary, of first class patients. The lower deck is fitted up to accommodate not less than a hundred and fifty private soldiers, and a portion of the space is marked off for their wives. Great port-holes, double the ordinary number, mighty and numerous air-shafts, well protected, are such guarantees for ventilation that the only fear is that the ship may be too cold in the warmest weather. Her seamanship will be under Captain Lewis, of the late Irrawaddy flotilla, who will also arrange for the provisioning of the patients, while a surgeon will have charge of her discipline and all other arrangements. She will be ready for the accommodation of patients early in November, and a steamer will ply between her and Calcutta weekly, or more frequently if necessary. Boating and fishing will be amply provided for, and she will be not more than a mile from a fine sandy beach. We hear that the command has become an object of ambition to half the surgeons of the Bengal army.

The main object of this Marine Sanitarium is the army. Soldiers and officers who would otherwise be invalided and sent to England at an enormous expense, will have a trial at the head of the Bay, and if the cases sent are carefully selected there can be no doubt of the great saving to the State both in money and in the lives of our best soldiers. The popularity and finan cial success of the Sanitarium will depend on the doctor placed in command. In skill, in temper, and in firmness he should be perfect, for especially if they think they should have been sent to England, and social feuds may arise among officers and their wives such as relieve the monotony of a Cape voyage. To keep discipline and yet make all contented, a ruler of tact is required. Should he be secured no place will be so popular with the civilian who is ill or fears he will become so. The official, the merchant, and even the editor who dare not leave his desk, may take a week's holiday there without interfering with their work, and return as much benefited as if they had paid the enormous fares demanded for a trip to Rangoon, Madras, or Singapore. They will be within the reach of post-office and telegraph, and may lengthen or shorten their holiday as circumstances demand. The poorest clerk or mechanic, too, may avail himself of the boon of salt-water bathing and lounging for a week or two, at rates cheaper than those demanded by ordinary hotels, if he is satisfied with second class accommodation .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Delhi, Sept. 11 .- According to general rumour, re are to have Colonel Hamilton, from Mooltan, here as Commissioner, but nobody seems to know aught about it in the station, and everybody wonders what is to become of Mr. F. S. Melvill, our present Commissioner, who is performing the duties of his office at Simla just now. Mr. W. Ford, of Goorgaon, is named as Col. Hamilton's successor at Mooltan; so that, if all this be true, the changes I mentioned as likely to take place soon in the Punjab commission will be more numerous than I then expected. -We are all very dull in Delhi just now; I suppose it is the calm before a storm of excitement the cold weather generally gives birth to. The mornings are already beginning to savour of that pleasant time, and the dew lies upon the thick grass as we generally see it in October. We have been very fortunate this season: up to April the weather was cool and agreeable, and throughout the hot weather there has not been more than a fortnight of really "oppressive" heat, so that, with the mornings already cooling down, we may congratulate ourselves upon having nearly seven months' pleasant weather out of the twelve; and to add to it, there has not been such a healthy season in Delhi for many years. It is true that fever of the usual autumnal type is now showing itself, but the weather is not to blame for that. If people will sleep out in the heavy dew they must expect to get a chill, and that induces fever. Mr. Cooper, Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, has been directed to proceed to Jhujjur, to inquire into the case of the girl Jane, the child of European parentage, in charge of the Rev. Mr. Broadway. This will, I hope, elicit all the facts of the case and settle the question, for it would be the height of injustice to detain the child if evidence is brought to prove that she is the offspring of the native woman who claims her; and she declares that she can furnish decided evidence of the fact. How she will get over the taking of the child to the poor-house, stained with henna, and the scar of vaccination on the arm. I do not know. The latter is said to be the mark of small-pox. However, we shall see what Mr. Cooper makes of it: he has a glorious opportunity for showing himself to the world as a Solomon. only there is nobody to claim the other half of the child .-- Englishman.

CUTTACK .- The Government of Bengal continue to receive liberal offers for the purchase of large tracts of waste lands in the several districts in Lower and Eastern Bengal. In the district of Cuttack alone, upwards of two lakhs of rupees have been offered by an enterprising European settler. The Government are now in communication with the Board of Revenue relative to the subject. The district of Cuttack formerly consisted of five or six Ghurs or Ghurees, with large tracts of lands and other tenements appertaining thereto, each of which was owned by a native chieftain. On the demise of some of those chieftains three or four Ghurees lapsed to Government. These lands are now overgrown with jungle, and have been suffered REGIMENTAL LIEUT.-COLONELS.-We have to chronicle the astonishing fact that Lieutenantcolonel Stewart, of the 25th Bombay Native Infantry, and Brigadier Macpherson, of Dinapore have been successful in obtaining a favourable answer to their memorials against the injustice of the rule under which the names of the lieutenant. colonels who have accepted the annuities are retained on the general list to regulate the succession to the colonel's allowance. H.M.'s Government have decided that all general list regimental lieutenant-colonels whose commis sions date prior to 1862 are entitled to promotion to the rank and allowances of colonel when they shall have been twelve years in the rank of Regimental Lieutenant-colonel; provided, how-ever, that no promotion under this rule shall take place until those not in any way affected by the retention of the names of the retired officers on the list shall have received the step in ordinary course.

MR. BEADON AT DACCA .- The Dacca News contains most graphic accounts of the Honourable Mr. Beadon's visit to the old capital of Bengal, and of the imposition practised upon him by so called native gentlemen in their eagerness to be presented to the Lieutenant governor. Mr. Buckland, the commissioner, is always awake, but even he was deceived into offering a chair to a toothless old hakeem vegetating on a pension of 5 rupees a month, who had borrowed feathers for the nonce. The gaol and hospital under the care of Dr. Simpson, the first surgeon in India, the Courts and the College were all visited; at the latter Mr. Beadon examined the lads in "Hamlet," choosing the lines-

N. I., when relieved by | be made by every widow entitled to its benefits.

GRANT OF GRATUITIES .- Another important question relative to the grant of gratuities has lately been decided by the Government of India. The circumstance which gave rise to this question appears to be the following:-A young native assistant in a public office, whose services were dispensed with on the abolition of the department to which he belonged, succeeded in obtaining a situation in the railway company's office. Subs quently, however, he applied for a gratuity, as provided by the rules, but the authorities objected to recommend his case to the consideration of the Government, on the score of his having already obtained employment. The Governor general in Council was appealed to, who decided that the circumstance of his having obtained private employment will not vitiate his claims to gratuity.

LEAVE TO UNCOVENANTED OFFICERS.—An important question relative to leave granted to uncovenanted officers has lately been decided by the Government of India. During the last few months, several uncovenanted officers who have overstayed their leave, obtained permission from the Secretary of State in England to return to their respective duties. By the existing rules, those officers are liable to forfeit their appointments. A question has now arisen whether the permission of the State Secretary is merely an act of formality, or in reality entitles an officer to retain his appointment if he exceeds his leave: and in the latter case whether does the excess, and the time occupied in joining such appointment, count towards pension? The Governorgeneral in Council has decided that the question depends entirely on the circumstance under which that permission was given, and that each case must be considered on its own merits, and further, that no general ruling can be passed relative to the subject.

PARDON TO DOOTEERAM BURROOAH .- The Hurtaru states that the Lieutenant-Governor has just given a free and unconditional pardon to Dooteeram Burrooah, as promised in his speech made in reply to the address of the inhabitants of Seebsaugor, in Assam. Our readers will perhaps remember that Dooteeram, a native of Assam, was employed as a Sheristadar in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner of Nowgong. After the mutiny he was tried and convicted of a charge of mutinous conduct, and sentenced to transportation for life. This sentence was confirmed by the late Sudder Court. The relatives of the convict then petitioned the Viceroy, who, as usual, did not think it proper to interfere with the judicial decision. They, therefore, appealed to the Secretary of State, and Sir Charles Wood, considering the case in all its bearings, requested the Governor-general to call upon the Government of Bengal to reconsider the case. Grant, the then Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, in compliance with the requisition of the higher authorities and in reviewing the proceedings, observed that the circumstance of Dooteeram being a Government servant, and then spreading a mutinous spirit, seems to aggravate his guilt rather than extenuate it, he cannot therefore grant the prisoner a free pardon, but would remit the sentence to ten years. Here the matter rested till Mr. Beadon came to his rescue and extended his clemency, by which, it is hoped, Dooteram and his countrymen will profit and learn a lesson.

A New Sanitarium .- Cherra Poonjee is longer to rank as the chief military station of the Cossyah hills, the Lieutenant-Governor, during his recent visit there, having decided finally upon making Philong the future sanitarium for the location of the troops required to keep the refractory hill tribes in that troublesome frontier in order. We (Hurkaru) believe General Showers objected to Philong, owing to there being, in his opinion, an insufficiency in the supply of water for a large military station, and we think it is not improbable that Yeddo, a place 1,000 feet lower in height, and distant about three miles from Philong, will eventually be selected. Every one in Assam is rejoicing at the prospect of a sanitarium being brought so much nearer to their doors; but at Cherra there is great lamentation, particularly among the house proprietors, at the removal of the station, which is now insvitable.

FREIGHTS IN CALCUTTA .- During the last two months the tonnage leaving British ports for this has been nearly 40,000 tons less than in the corresponding period of last year, consequently freights are likely to rise very much. We have heard of a ship being chartered to load in all December at £4. 10s. per ton, and scarcely any ships being expected from the outports, freights probably will rule even higher. The quantity of salt shipped by the last advices was considerably less than it has been for the last two years.

ANALGAMATION OF THE CLUBS .- There is rumour prevalent that the members of the Bengal Club have invited, or are about to do so, the members of the United Service Club to amalgamate. This would be a bold stroke of policy indeed, but fully warranted by the circumstances of the case. Any course would be preferable to submitting quietly to the indignity offered, and we shall be only too glad to announce that the attempt which undoubtedly has been made to influence if not control, the action of the military members of the club at the forthcoming meeting, has signally failed to attain its object.

THE GLORIOUS UNCERTAINTY OF THE LAW. The Dhaka Prakasha translated by the Indian Reformer says that a Brahmucharya, who pretends to predict the issues of cases in the civil and criminal courts, is thriving on the success of his imposition at Burrisaul. He is a great favorite with litigious old gentlemen. Some of the zemindars pay him a fixed salary every month for predicting the results of cases. This is a keen satire on the the results of cases. utter uncertainty of decisions in the Mofussil

THE JYNTEAHS .- We learn from the Dacco News that the authorities have offered an unconditional pardon to the Jynteah rebels. The Khyrim Rajah, the relatives of the deceased Rajah of Jyntiapore, and a cousin of the Cherra Rajah have been sent out to confer with them. They are reported to be broken up into three parties and as they are quarrelling among themselves, they will be all the more ready to lay down their arms, such as they are, and once more try to endure the vulture-gnawings of the petty officials of the province. We trust the rumour is correct that these officials will be dismissed, and that the same system of administration which Mr. Yule adopted in Sonthalistan will be introduced. Jynteah, however, wants the man as well as the system, and Captain Haughton has too much to DESECRATION OF GRAVES .- The Dacca News relates a horrible story of a third attempt to dese crate European graves in Cachar. On the night after a planter's body had been laid in consecrated ground the grave and coffin were opened, the body exposed, and the shroud torn in shreds, which were scattered round the grave. The writer thinks the object was not money. We differ from him. If the outrage was not dictated by one of those superstitions of which the indigenous tribes are victims, it was due to the hope of finding treasure. A similar occurrence took place six years ago in Raneegunge, where the Sonthals are largely employed in the coal mines, and the object then was clearly treasure. The authorities, as well as the friends of the deceased, have offered a reward for the discovery of the miscreant.

THE STEAM TUG ASSOCIATION has declared a dividend of 15 per cent. per annum. One shareholder, more avaricious than the rest, wished to divide 50 Rs. per share, instead of 45 Rs., but the majority had the good sense to reject the proposition. An addition was made to the reserved fund, set aside to meet any extraordinary expense that may be incurred in future.

WASTE LANDS IN DEMAND. The Hurkaru hears from Cachar that Mr. Davidson, the great landholder in that province, applied in one day for no less than thirty-seven grants of land, aggregating an immense area, under the old rules. This shows how much Sir Charles Wood's despatch is appreciated, and proves that the sale of waste lands under the new rules is not likely to give much trouble to the Government, in the matter of providing the surveyors required to survey and demarcate the boundaries of the DEATH OF BEDEE BIKANAN SINGH .- The Laore Chronicle mentions the death at Umritsur from cholers of Bedee Bikaman Singh. He did much to cause the campaign of 1845, and he was our resolute enemy at Goozerat and Chilianwala. As the most sacred of the Blanc and called him the Archbishop of Canterbury. Sir As the most sacred of the Sikhs Lord Hardinge mildly informed that we would not allow him to kill his daughters any more, he declared he never again would enter his zenana, and kept his word. He had the misfortune to kill his elder brother in early life, and in expiation of this crime used to wash his hands daily in the excrement of a rhinoceros, which he kept for that purpose. When Oonah was captured the 59th N.I. marched off with the animal at the head of their column.

JUDICIAL MATTERS. — The Chief Justice of Bengal has recently, it is said, been engaged in correspondence with the Executive Government in reference to a subject which involves the independence of judicial officers. Sir Barnes Peacock, it is understood, protests against their being removed from their offices, or their decisions being liable to be reviewed by the Government, and claims for the High Court the sole exercise of this power. We believe that Sir Barnes Peacock will remain some time longer at the court which is engaged in trying rent appeals. The successor to Sir Charles Jackson will probably be officially located in the same building, viz., the old Sudder, at all events, as soon as the arrears under the old procedure have been disposed of. Two courts with single judges will by that time be required to deal with the rapidly increasing business under the new and summary process of Act VIII. We understand that Sir M. Wells has disposed of upwards of 100 cases since the High Court was established.

INSPECTOR GENERAL OF INDIAN RAILWAYS The Board of Directors of the East India Railway Company in London have in contemplation the creation of a new office, namely, that of the Inspector General of the lines in India, and Mr. Lingard Stokes, who is now in England on leave, is spoken of as likely to obtain the appointment.

THE COUNCIL OF THE DALHOUSIE INSTITUTE, or rather five or six of the members, met on the 20th September, and passed various resolutions. The presidential chair is to be offered to Sir R. Napier, and Dr. Duff and Rajah Pertab Chunder Singh, are to be the vice-presidents. The Hon. W. S. Fitzwilliam and Mr. Claude Brown will be requested to act as treasurers. All the members present were in favour of the site in Tank-square, and the secretary has been requested to communicate with Government on the subject.

PROGRESS AT UMRITSUR .- Some sixty of the native notables of Umritsur have addressed the Punjab Government on the importance of a canal between the city and the Sutlej at Ferozepore. Thus there will be direct water communication between Kurrachee, or London, and the great commercial emporium of the Punjab. This, too, will re-act on Cashmere, the Himalayas, and Central Asia, the trade of which will thus find an easy outlet. The local journal says, that with such a canal Umritsur must become the centre to which the cotton, flax, tea, sugar, and other articles raised in the North-west, for exportation to Europe, will naturally converge.

CALCUTTA MARINE COURTS .- The Marine Court which has been for some time past sitting for the trial of Mr. Branch Pilot Warden, on charges connected with the loss of the French ship Ville de Dieppe at the Sandheads, has terminated its proceedings with a verdict unfavourable to that officer, he having been found guilty of culpable neglect of duty. The sentence has not been pro mulgated, but we should think that it will not be a light one. Without referring to any particular case, we would observe that the proceedings and sentences of these Marine Courts are, as a general rule, characterised by a degree of carelessness and leniency which, as tribunals for the adequate punishment and future prevention of ignorance, incompetence, or neglect of duty, makes them almost next to useless. The members of these Courts, who are selected when investigating and sitting in judgment, to remember the excellent maxim of doing as they would be done by, and conscientiously to reflect that if they are to day inquiring into the circumstances attending the loss of ships and property consigned to others, and awarding acquittal or punishment according to the evidence laid before them, the time may come when the relative positions will be reversed, and others may sit to investigate the circumstances connected with the ruin and loss of their own property, or of such as may be consigned to their receipt, care, or disposal. It is the want of a conscientious recollection of these facts which has made the proceedings and awards of the Calcutta Marine Courts so fruitless of beneficial results as regards greater care, and vigilance, and thorough efficiency on the part of the pilots, and consequent safety and paucity of accidents and losses as regards the valuable property committed to their charge. If the mercantile community will only look at the matter in its true light, and pay a little more attention to the proceedings of these decidedly faulty courts, they will soon reap the benefit in a decrease in the percentage of shipwrecks and losses, and they will, moreover, by so doing read the Pilot Service a useful lesson. The members of that service are highly remunerated for the performance of certain duties requiring experience and ability certainly, but more especially care and attention. The least neglect, where it is likely to do so much harm, should meet with con-dign punishment, and if the merchants, by wilful inattention, prevent that punishment from being duly meted out they are responsible for much of the loss that will inevitably ensue. When unpunished for neglect all men are liable to grow careless, and that the pilots of the Hooghly want a lesson is shown by the fact of the inquiry now pending in the case of the Lalla Rookh so soon after that of the Ville de Dieppe .-Englishman.

RAILWAY TO BENARES .- The Oudh Gazette regrets to announce that, owing to unforeseen and unexpected circumstances, the opening of the railroad to Benares has unfortunately to be postponed for many months, and will not, as we formerly stated, be inaugurated in November next. The circumstance giving rise to this untoward delay-for any delay in completing the line to Allahabad must be a matter of regret-is, that the engineers now find that the bridge over the Kurrumnassa is deficient in water-way; and it is, therefore, necessary to construct two other openings or arches, so as to prevent the possibility of any similar accident arising, such as occurred during the late rains. The rush of water from the hills, having been more than usually heavy, could not, on arrival at the bridge, run off with sufficient rapidity, there not being water-way enough; the water, therefore, scoured nearly under the piers of the bridge, thereby seriously jeopardising the safety of the entire structures. That the bridge did not give way is owing to the energy and skill of the engineer in charge, who, on finding what was taking place, used every effort to counteract the scouring, and fortunately succeeded in his endeavours. It is, perhaps, better that we should wait a few months longer, than hereafter have to deplore the loss of life, and the complete stoppage of the line, owing to the collapse of the bridge at some future day; a result which, with a limited water escape, would not be at all an improbable occurrence. Of the other portions of the railway under construction, we learn that the line from Agra to Allyghur will be extended about the 1st November next, and thence to Delhi by the end of the ensuing year. There are very many obstacles, however, yet to overcome, the bridge over the Jumna, for instance, being about as difficult a job as that over the Kurrumnassa.

A NEW STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY. - It is reported that the Eastern steam lines, now in the exclusive possession of the Calcutta and Burmah Steam Navigation Company, will not long be a monopoly in their hands, but that another association, entitled the Calcutta Eastern Steam Navigation Company, is in prospect and will soon be grants to be applied for under Mr. Beadon's rules. from the mercantile community, would do well, ready to enter into competition with the former, and run to most, if not all, the ports on the Eastern shores and islands of the Bay of Bengal, now frequented by the vessels of the Calcutta and Bengal Steam Navigation Company.

HYDERABAD, Sept. 9 .- When a part of the assigned districts was restored to his Highness the Nizam, the English Government requested with much earnestness that the ryots should be protected from exactions, and recommended that the system of the English Government, under which the assigned districts had been administered, should be continued. There was a ready concurrence on the part of the Nizam's Government. Of the restored districts about two thirds were made over to the minister for the public disbursements of the State, and one-third was retained by the Nizam for his private purse. The minister, sensible that the ordinary instruments at his command could not be relied upon to meet the wishes of the English Government, and that it was not at all probable he could find any servant of the State who comprehended system of English management, or would take any pains to comprehend it— as they generally consider their fiscal management in every respect superior to that of the English Government—resorted to a new element of supervision, and introduced Parsee gentlemen, rom Bombay, of character and established repectability, into the districts under his charge which districts they have properly managed. Neither has the Government any complaint to make against them for any sort of misconduct, nor the ryots for exaction. It has been otherwise with the Nizam. He resorted to the ordinary instruments of the country, and one of his nominees, Lushkpur Jung, has been removed for over exaction. He is not a bad man, and I do not believe means to oppress, but he is what is called a "crack" collector, and a "crack" Mussulman collector cannot be kept within any bounds, or be expected to act with moderation. He has been dismissed from his appointment on the complaints of the ryots. I must not omit to say, however, that the minister had given charge of a restored district, Western Raichore, to one Momin Ali. This man has been dismissed for having failed to report a fracas, leading to the death of one man, and the wounding of several others, and in which his son is said to have been somehow concerned, to the Government. I regret it; he has the reputation of being a fair man and a good Talookdar; but I regret it, especially, as he is a Sheah, for though there are many Sheah noblemen, they hold no offices; he is the only Sheah who had charge of a district. The employment even of a few Sheahs would to a small extent sever the confederation of the Soonnees. We have had the amusing spectacle of a mutiny, to obtain their arrears of pay, among the ladies of the late Suli Mangah. The house in which they reside commands the Chowk, a square in which a market is held every evening. The ladies stored a quantity of stones, and made such good use of them, that the shops around the house were closed for the day, the passage of the 750 to 760 1200 to 1250 68 to 65 170 to 172 125 to 130 52 to 55 715 to 720 1230 to 1240 16 17 each. streets in its vicinity obstructed, and no market held. The Nizam, who alone could meddle in this matter, deputed the minister to settle it. He promised the ladies they should be paid in five days. His word, as it always is, was readily accepted. The affair did not pass, I understand, without some execution being done—five or aix heads are said to have been broken. man.

MONUMENT TO SIR MARK CUBBON, K.C.B .- At a large meeting of all classes in Bangalors, Mr. Saunders, C.B., the Judicial Commissioner in the chair, it was resolved that this meeting, in recognition of the noble character, the eminent abilities, and great public services of the late Sir Mark Cubbon, K.C.B., Commissioner of Mysore, is desirous of perpetuating his memory in the most lasting manner, and that a statue by one of the first sculptors of the age be erected in Bangalore, in front of the new offices of the Government, from the funds placed at disposal of the Joint Committee of the memorial.

THEATRE AT MADRAS. - Madras, acknowledging its intolerable dulness and that it is " utterly without the means of rational recreation," has resolved to establish the Victoria Park Theatre, if a fund of Rs. 10,000 can be raised. There is no town-hall in Madras, nor are there public rooms. At present public meetings are held either in the Government Banquetting Hall, lent by the Governor, or in Patcheappah's School.

MONUMENT TO BISHOP DEALTRY .- Mr. Joseph Durham has been engaged in England to execute a monumental tablet to the late Bishop Dealtry, to be erected in St. George's Cathedral for £250. The public have subscribed £300. The sculpture is to represent the Bishop in the act of ordination, with five or six figures which are to be "portrait statues." Of these the Archdeacon, the late Bishop's son, will be one.

NEW COURT HOUSE.—The Bombay Gazette says that the Government intends building a new Court House on the Esplanade near the Cooperage. Measurements for the space required for the various offices and rooms by the officers of the court are being made, and it is expected that the new building will be commenced at once. Accommodation will be provided for the whole of the business of the court in the new edifice.

BOMBAY STRAM NAVIGATION COMPANY. - The Bombay papers have been for some time filled with disclosures regarding the jobbery of the directors of the Bombay Steam Navigation Company, now wound up and superseded by the Burmah Company. One writer declares that Mr. D. C. Mackey's transactions in the Assam Company are nothing to the conduct of the Parsee Steam The whole has been exposed by Mr. Ardasir Eduljee, who, when he asked for explanations, was told by the oldest director, one Candass Narandass, that he could not stay to answer him, as his baby was sick! The directors, and Mr. Crawford, the manager, seem to have speculated in coals and bank shares, and to have lent money to each other in a manner worthy of the old Union Bank.

Mofussil Justice.—The Bombay Gazette draws attention to an incident in Mofussil justice which came out quite accidentally the other day in the progress of a suit by a Belgaum Vakeel against a client who had not paid. The defendant and two other persons had been sent to Major Jameson, who, without any inquiry or investigation of the charge, put them in solitary confinement with iron handcuffs for about twenty-two days. Major Jameson refused to hear any one on behalf of the defendant, and consequently several petitions were presented to Mr. Seton-Karr, the political agent at Belgaum, to the Brigadier, the Brigade Major, Colonel Jacob, political commissioner, Southern Maratha country, and to the Governor in Council, against his arbitrary and illegal act. The Major also dispossessed them of their property consisting of gold and silver ornaments of the value of Rs. 50,000, and then released them from confinement. An action for false imprisonment was the consequence, which Major Jameson was glad to compromise by paying Rs. 50,000 down, and costs.

Public Works in Nassick and Peint.—The Executive Engineer, Central Circle, has sub mitted to the Superintending Engineer the annual report of the operations of the Public Works Department for the year 1861-62 in the Nassick District and Peint State, together with the usual sketch map. The chief works undertaken during this season have been sanctioned as emergencies. For the Military, Judicial, Revenue, Ecclesiastical, and Educational Departments, the operations have been confined to ordinary repairs, and there is nothing of interest to note under any of these heads. Passing over works under the heads of General, Municipal, and Industrial, as affording nothing worthy of remark, we come to the important head of Agricultural under which there are always, in these districts, works of importance in the shape of Bundaras or Irrigational Channels. lesser Sookena Bundara is the largest undertaking of this description that has been sanctioned for some years, and it may be taken as the On London type of all such constructions; it is the more interesting because it is an entirely new work, executed on the designs of Captain Finch. It is situated on a bar of rock which runs across the Bangunga river at Thairgaum, a little below the Jageerdar's Bundara of Sookena the greater. The next most important irrigational work is the Bundara of Mathoolthan, which resembles that of Sookena in its general features. A long list of some twenty five irrigational works follows, and the Executive Engineer passes over their details as unnecessary. Under communica-tions metalled roads are represented by the metalling of and improvement to the portion of the Nassick and Poona road as far as the Deolalee Railway Station. This work at the early part of the season engrossed much attention, as over it passed the whole of the railway traffic so long as the railway terminus was at Declalee. The repairs to the portion of the Bombay and Agra road in this district occupies an important place in the expenditure of the Public Works of the Nassick charge; the money sanctioned is not quite adequate to the wants of the road. The works, other than repairs, are represented by the new lines authorised between Yeola and Munmar, and between Nandoor on the Poona road and Kolhar on the Malligaum and Ahmednuggur line. With the exception of the work of increasing the waterway of the bridge over the Bangunga river on the Nassick and Bulsar road, every bridge work has been executed as an emergency. There are several large projects for irrigational works which await development: among these are those of utilising the waters of the Godavery and Darna. Roads, except those designed for special purposes, scarcely exist in these districts, and several are much needed; but in the present state of funds as many projects are before Government as are likely be sanctioned for some time to come. The communications of the country, however, might be much facilitated by clearing away obstructions in passes, through ranges of hills, and here and there making portions of road in those places where, owing to the soil or situation, the track becomes impassable for several months of the year. Often a country track may be all that could be wished up to either side of some slight barrier; yet the maximum cart load is so limited by a few hundred yards of obstruction that the use of carts is practically at an end, and the people take to pack bullocks instead.—Englishman.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, Scpt. 11 .- The events of the past fortnight in China and Japan are neither numerous nor remarkable. As regards the rebels, we have to record the re-appearance in the immediate neighbourhood of Shanghai of those plundering bands which usually precede the main body when the Taepings meditate attacking a large city. The strategic purpose fulfilled by the approach of the irregular companies thus sent on is to spread alarm previous to the arrival of the general force, and it has rarely been found unsuccessful where a city has been held only by Imperial troops. On the 22nd ultimo the smoke of burning hamlets showed to the residents of Shanghai the now wellknown signs of an advance into the district by rebels. On the 29th ult, the same indications were most marked, and a reconnoitring force was despatched from the settlement to check the further approach of the marauders. Refugees, as before, continued to pour into the city and settlement in large numbers, and the destitute among them had their immediate wants relieved by a charitable committee, which has been doing the work of the good Samaritan for some time back. Unfortunately, the means at this committee's disposal is not at all commensurate with the demand already made upon it, but the best is being done that can be done. Doubtless all the provisions taken in future excursions against the Taipings will be placed in the hands of proper persons for due distribution among the sufferers, instead of being appropriated as spoil by the troops who may happen to find them. On Monday, the 25th, a reconnoitring party proceeded into the country to inspect the state of affairs. According to the North China Herald, this party must have consisted of eleven individuals, ten of whom were civilians. The party was composed of Captain Borlase, R.N., Mr. Alabaster, of her Britannic Majesty's Consulate, Captain Panmure Gordon, and eight troopers of the Shanghai mounted rangers. After passing some hundreds of affrighted villagers on the way, they reached the second hamlet beyond the stone bridge north of the Soochow Creek, where they discovered some Taepings plundering the houses. These fled on their approach, but the gallant rangers, it appears, not content with this proof of their usefulness, pursued and sabred all they could come up with. It is a pity that our attitude towards the rebels should be fated to have a demoralizing effect upon most of the agents employed in maintaining it, for we cannot very cordially applaud the prowess of a few mounted and well-armed mercantile gentlemen who merely pursued and out down flying wretches that were offering them no resistance. It is reported that these straggling skirmishers, or plunderers, had been sent on in advance from the army of Chung Wang, who is suspected to be reorganizing an attack upon Shanghai against the time when the hot weather shall have abated.

Admiral Hope is at present in the far north of China, the last advices stating that he was at anchor in the harbour at Cheefoo. He has probably gone north for the benefit of his health. Our northern contemporary states that he sent a gunboat to Tien-tsin for the conveyance of his Excellency the Hon. Mr. Bruce, with whom he desires an interview.

In Pekin everything is quiet. The Hon. Mr. Burlingame lately applied to the Chinese Government for a site whereon to establish the American Consulate, urging his claim to similar privileges with France and England. He was informed in reply that he had come to Pekin in a manner different from that of those two nations, and could not have a site granted to him, but that he should have every assistance granted to him in renting a building suitable for the American Legation. A treaty between Portugal and China was signed at Pekin on the 13th ultimo. By this treaty the Macao Peninsula is ceded to Portugal. Some sort of promise was made, we hear, by Governor Guimaraes, who negotiated the matter, about introducing the customs system into Macao; but no provision for this has been made in the treaty itself, which will come into operation as soon as ratifications have been exchanged. Cholera still prevails in the capital, and among its victims has been the Roman Catholic Bishop of Shanghai, who had gone on a mission to the Court. Prince Kung had also been attacked, but the latest accounts report him to be recovering. The malady is abating, after having committed considerable ravages. The weather was hot, but relieved by copious rains.

At Nankin the Imperialists were in strong force, and making great display on the water; but we have heard no reports of any serious attack upon the city, now the only place on the river held by the rebels.

At Shanghai a meeting is about to be held to consider proposals for the better government of the settlement. The proposal to have Shanghai constituted a free city has disappeared before the inquiry as to how the thing could be done. The wants of the place have somewhat outgrown the executive machinery, and an increase in the consular staff will most probably be the simplest solution of the difficulty. It is to be hoped, for the sake of this thriving settlement, that measures will be taken to meet the increasing wants of the place. The harbour is dangerously overcrowded with shipping.

From Japan there is no additional news. Nagasaki (says the North China Herald) the Mexican dollar has been subjected to further depreciation, two itzeboos only being exchanged for a dollar, except to the consular authorities and naval officers, who continue to receive three itzeboos and a tenth. Cholera had extended to Nagasaki, and carried away a great many of the native population.

Newchwang has also been visited by this epidemic, and business has been greatly obstructed in consequence .- Overland China Mail.
